Great Moments

in

LSU

This book starts at the beginning of Football and goes to the Ed Orgeron Championship.

The book is written for those of us who love Louisiana State Tigers Football and cannot wait until their next win. Those who hate LSU football will also want this book so they can get a leg up on the facts missing from the bookshelves of those fellow LSU fans who do not have this book.

The book first tells the story about The State's Flagship University's founding in 1860 and quickly gets to the first football game ever. The university's first football team and its first season came later as LSU Football Tigers made itself known.

Louisiana State University (LSU) played its first football game in school history on Nov 25, 1893, losing to rival Tulane (both from LA). It was the first intercollegiate contest in Louisiana. The game sparked a rivalry between the Tigers and the Green Wave that has lasted generations, From there, the progression leads, to 125 more seasons of great football.

This book captures the great moments in LSU Football. It takes the reader through stories about the university's great coaches to stories about 126 seasons worth of great games. The book often stops in time and talks about a particular player such as Abe Mickal, Y. A. Tittle, Kevin Faulk, Joe Burrow, or a particular coach such as Bernie Moore, Paul Dietzel, Nick Saban, Les Miles Bill Arnsparger, Ed Orgeron, and others. I can't wait to read it.

Additionally, you will read the recaps of the greatest LSU games such as when LSU beat Clemson 7-0 in the first national championship, Jan.1, 1959. Or when LSU pounded Ohio State 38-34 on Jan 7, 2008, for another BCS Championship at the Superdome. Then, of course there is the Oct 31 game v Old Miss in which Billy Cannon's 89-yard run won the day. As far as the single greatest play in LSU football history, this is it.

You will not be able to put this book down

Dedication

As a person with a big family on my side and on my wife's side. I am pleased to dedicate this book to my wonderful family.

Thank you to all of the Piotroski's—(Marty & Angel Cathy), (Stan, Archie & Carol), (Sue & Mitch), and all their progeny—for support in all of my publishing efforts.

Wily Ky Eyeley, my sage niece, offers most appreciated advice continually.

And, of course, my own brothers and sisters, from my older brother Ed who continually helped me go for it—even when it seemed hopeless, to all of my other brothers and sisters – (Nancy & Jim), & the Twins (Mary + Bill) & (Joe + Diane), for staying with me in support as I tried to write the world's best something about something.

I really appreciate my entire family's help in everything I do. My wife Pat is phenomenal as are my children, Brian, Michael and Katie.

My family and friends make life easier for me in writing books and everything else. Thank you all—all the people I love the most in life for always being in my corner.

Thank you—for making me, me, God bless you!

Acknowledgments:

I appreciate all the help that I received in putting this book together, along with the 231 other books from the past.

My printed acknowledgments were once so large that book readers needed to navigate too many pages to get to page one of the text. To permit me more flexibility, I put my acknowledgment list online at www.letsGOPublish.com. The list of acknowledgments continues to grow. Believe it or not, it once cost about a dollar more to print each book.

Thank you all on the big list in the sky and God bless you all for your help.

Please check out www.letsGOPublish.com to read the latest version of my heartfelt acknowledgments updated for this book. Thank you all!

References

I learned how to write creatively in Grade School at St. Boniface Grade School. The great Sisters of Christian Charity would not let me get away with a dangling participle or a misplaced comma. I even enjoyed reading some of my own stuff from the first words that I wrote.

At Meyers High School and King's College and Wilkes-University, I learned how to research, write bibliographies and footnote every non-original thought I might have had. I learned to hate ibid, and op. cit., and I hated assuring that I had all citations written down in the proper sequence. Having to pay attention to details took my desire to write creatively and diminished it with busy work.

I know it is necessary for the world to stop plagiarism so authors and publishers can get paid properly, but for an honest writer, it sure is annoying. I wrote many proposals while with IBM and whenever I needed to cite something, I cited it in place, because my readers, IT Managers, could care less about tracing the vagaries of citations. I always hated to use stilted footnotes, or produce a lengthy, perfectly formatted bibliography. I bet most bibliographies are flawed because even the experts on such drivel do not like the tedium.

I wrote 237 books before this book and several hundred articles published by many magazines and newspapers and I only cite when an idea is not mine or when I am quoting, and again, I choose to cite in place, and the reader does not have to trace strange numbers through strange footnotes and back to bibliography elements that may not be readily accessible or available.

Yet, I would be kidding you, if in a book about the great moments in LSU Football, I tried to bluff my way into trying to make you think that I knew everything before I began to write anything in this book. I spent as much time researching as writing. I might even call myself an expert of sorts now for all the facts that I have uncovered.

Without any pain on your part you can read this book from cover to cover to enjoy the stories about the many great moments in LSU Football without being an English Major.

This book is not intended for historians but it does teach a lot of history. It is for regular people of all levels of intelligence. It is for people that want to have a fun read, who like smiling when LSU Football is the topic. It is for people who love the University of Louisiana and perhaps for some LSU haters who want some more facts.

There are lots and lots of facts in this book. This book is not for sticklers about the mundane aspects of writing that often cause creative writers to lay bricks or paint houses instead. It is for everyday people like you and I who enjoy LSU because it is LSU and who enjoy football because it is football. It is that simple.

When LSU plays a team, and wins or loses, that is a historical fact, but to discover such facts, it does not require fundamental or basic research. The University itself copyrights its material but only so it can say "no" if somebody else's creativity affects them negatively. Even LSU does not own well-known facts that are readily available about legacies such as Bernie Moore, Paul Dietzel, Charles McClendon, Nick Saban, Les Miles, Ed Orgeron, and the University's nine great National Championships (four claimed and five unclaimed).

This is not a book about heavy math algorithms, or potential advances to the internal combustion engine, or space travel, or the eight elements necessary to find a cure for cancer. So, I refuse to treat this book 100% seriously. If you find a fault in this book, I will fix it. This is a book about sports and sports legends and stories about sporting events that have been recorded seven million times already someplace else. The greatness in this book is that it is all in one place. Though I tried for sure to get it all right and I used the work of others to assure so, I bet I made a mistake or two. I am not perfect but I like perfection.

What is my remedy for the harmed if I have made a mistake? I did not write this book to harm anybody. If I did not write this book, would the harmed individuals from the book be unharmed. So, at the very least, I can unpublish those parts of the book. If any reader is harmed, let me know, and I will do whatever must be done for all to be OK.

If somehow, I did not cite a fact that a person owns or a quote somebody once spoke first, it surely was not my intention. If you find any such instances in this work, I will do my best to cite in place before the next printing or take the offensive fact or quote out of the book completely at your pleasure. I use a printing system that prints books as ordered so there would be no waste to change books to reflect any needed updates. Just let me know. This book is built for fun, not to create anybody angst.

It took me about two months to write. If I were to have made sure a thought that I had was not a thought somebody else ever had, this book never would have been completed or the citations pages would exceed the prose.

I used LSU's season summaries from whatever source I could to get the scores and as many details as possible of all the games. I could not include everything that I found because you only have one lifetime to read this book. I verified facts when possible. For other notions, I used reasonability tests.

There are many web sites that have great information and facts. Nobody knows 100% what is true but this book is as accurate as it could be. Ironically most Internet stories are the same exact stories so the original source is often difficult to discern. While I was writing the book, I wrote down a bunch of Internet references that I include within the paragraphs and sections and stories that I cite in place.

There are many great sources for information available for your perusal on many sources on the Internet—including the fine archives of The University Web site, LSU.COM and the LSU Daily Reveille, which since 1997, has been since 1887 the student newspaper at Louisiana State University in Baton Rouge, Louisiana. The paper prints once a week on Wednesdays during the fall, spring and summer semesters. The Daily Reveille has a weekly circulation of about 6,000 copies. Enjoy.

Preface:

LSU is a long time great school and a perennial football power. Though the institution does not have just one legendary coach in its history such as Alabama's Paul 'Bear' Bryant, one of college football's most legendary coaches, it does have a number of outstanding coaches to its credit. One of those great LSU coaches is Nick Saban who is the current coach at Alabama and who undeniably is one of the best coaches ever.

In fact, Nick Saban led his teams to six National Collegiate Athletic Association (NCAA) top-division football national championships and is considered by modern football analysts and other coaches as one of the greatest college football coaches of all time is not the greatest in terms of national championship games as well as national championships. In 2018, for example, Nick Saban tied Bear Bryant's record for most NCAA football national championships by a coach in the 2018 College Football Playoff National Championship Game..

Before Coach Saban tied the record at Alabama, he coached for the Tigers at Louisiana State University and with his national championship here, he ranks as one of the university's best all-time coaches though he did not stay long enough to smash records. Nick Saban led the LSU Tigers to the BCS National Championship in 2003.

The LSU Tigers have had 32 football coaches since their inaugural season in 1893. Since that time, the program has tallied an impressive 812 wins (12th all-time), 13 conference titles, and 3 national championships.

With such a prestigious program, it was truly a daunting task to have to rank such legendary coaches as Charles McClendon, Nick Saban, Paul Dietzel and Les Miles. There have been numerous LSU coaches that have contributed a great deal to make the "Bayou Bengals" the illustrious program they are today.

LSU ranks 16th most in victories in NCAA Division I FBS history and claims four National Championships (1958, 2003, 2007, and 2019), 16 conference championships, and 35 consensus All-Americans

By the way, there are those who still lament that Nick Saban left LSU for a try at the NFL. Nick Saban is one of those because his two years were not so stellar and he came back to college football but Les Miles was already building his legacy at LSU. Here we are and it has been over 15 years since the Doctor of Football, Nick Saban, decided to try his hand as an NFL head coach, leaving LSU to take over the Miami Dolphins.

Alabama is tickled pink that after two undistinguished seasons Saban realized that he was better off in college football after all. But for LSU, for some, until the 2019/2020 National Championship victory, Saban was a memory they needed to relive. Now as reigning national championships, with Saban in the loser's mix, everything is OK at LSU.

On Nov 9, 2019, LSU took control of its own legacy and defeated Alabama and Nick Saban, 46-41. Saban lost again v Auburn ending their chance at a National Championship. LSU beat everybody who they played with a 15-0 season. Now for LSU fans, Nick Saban, and can live at Alabama in peace with no regrets here.

Of the three coaches we discussed so far in this preface to LSU football moments, all three, Miles, Saban, and Orgeron are on the LSU greatest coaches list. Heck, there's not even a lot of candidates for the greatest of them all. There are, for example, only eight coaches in LSU's 119 year history who have even coached five seasons. On top of that, only seven coaches have even won a SEC title. So that means there is a pretty small group of guys to look at as viable contenders for the title of LSU's best coach ever.

The unlucky two who stayed for five years without an SEC title, post-WWII, are Gus Tinsley and Gerry DiNardo. Tinsley coached from 1948-54 and only had two winning seasons and a .500 record. The process of elimination says he is not in consideration,.DiNardo started off with three winning seasons and LSU's second 10-win season since 1961, but he ended with two terrible seasons. The coach made a difference as DiNardo could not break .500 in his last two seasons, Nick Saban brought a 12-4 record to the Tigers the very next year. It was Saban's first of five seasons.

Here is a chart of the best LSU coaches plus Orgeron, who will have his five in this year:

Coach	Dates	#sns	WLT	PCT	SEC/ mnc	10- win	2-loss
Bernie Moore	1935-1947	13	83-39-6	.672	2	0	5
Paul Dietzel	1955-1961	7	46-24-3	.651	2/1	1	3
Charles McClendon	1962-1979	18	137-59-7	.692	1/0	0	4
Nick Saban	2000-2004	5	48-16	.750	2/1	2	1
Les Miles	2005-2016	12	114-34-0	.770	3/1	7	5
Ed Orgeron	2016-present	4	56-36	.816	1/1	2	1

Opening its first story at the very beginning of Football as a sport in America, this book goes all the way to Coach Ed Orgeron's last win for the football championship..

It is written for those of us who love Louisiana State University (LSU) Football. The book first tells the story about LSU's founding in 1860. In story-telling mode, it recounts the events leading to the first football game in 1867, and it continues to the first LSU Football Game in 1893.

It then advances through the years when a coach lasted just about a year, onward to the great immortal LSU coaches of historical fame—Bernie Moore, Paul Dietzel, Charles McClendon, Les Miles and now the present day Ed Orgeron, a future legend.

Predicting that another future immortal great is in our midst, the book takes us up to the current season with Coach Ed Orgeron, who after just a bit more than three seasons is clearly on a path of excellence. Finally, to sum it all up, Brian Kelly, your author, caps off the experience with information on a ton of great players in LSU football from way back to the present. These are the young men who made LSU the football legacy that it is.

This book is all about the great moments in LSU Football. It touches every aspect of the historical and mythical LSU Football Teams. It tells exhilarating stories about LSU's 32 coaches and its 126 seasons worth of great games (812 wins, 415 losses, 47 ties = 1274 games).

The book stops every now and then, and takes the reader on a side excursion in time to learn about a particular event or a great player such as Billie Cannon, Patrick Peterson, Kevin Faulk, Tommy Casanova, Y.A. Tittle, Leonard Fournette, and the newest great, Joe Burrow

I predict that you will not be able to put this book down

You are going to love this book because it is the perfect read for anybody who loves the Louisiana State University and LSU Football and wants to know more about one of the most revered athletic programs of all time.

Few sports books are a must-read but Brian Kelly's Great Moments in LSU Football will quickly appear at the top of America's most enjoyable must-read books about sports. Enjoy!

Who is Brian W. Kelly?

Brian W. Kelly is one of the leading non-fiction authors in America with this, his 238th published book. Brian is an outspoken and eloquent expert on a variety of topics and he has also written several hundred articles on topics of deep interest to Americans.

Most of Brian's early works involved high technology. Later, he wrote a number of patriotic books and most recently he has been writing human interest books such as The Wine Diet and Thank you, IBM. This is his sixtieth major sports book. Last year he actually wrote three children's books. He enjoyed writing the children's books almost as much as everybody enjoyed reading them. His books are always well received.

Chapter 1 Introduction to the Book

In 2018 LSU celebrated its many national college football championships in its 125th year. In 2019, it picked up one more.

Ed Orgeron, soon to be Immortal LSU Coach “Post Miles” Leading the Tigers

In 2020, LSU celebrates its 127th season of football, which of course excludes 1918 when the school did not play sports during World War I. As part of the celebration, the University would be pleased for you to visit its athletic website that honors all LSU Tigers Sports. I promise that if LSU chooses to create a new web site commemorating this its great moment in its football history of 130 years in 2022, I will create a new version of this book to provide you all with the link and I will update the Kindle version so it can be downloaded immediately. Thank you for reading this book. I know you will love it as you love the Louisiana State University Tigers, Go Tigers!

OK, well, not exactly!

Anyone who is a true LSU football fan knows for a fact that when it comes to saying "Go Tigers," the proper spelling is "Geaux Tigers." This comes from the French/Cajun character of South Louisiana, which is where the Louisiana State University is located, in the city of Baton Rouge.

This book is proud to celebrate Louisiana State University Football; its founding; its struggles; its greatness; and its long-lasting impact on American life. People like me, who love the greatness of Louisiana State University, will love this book. LSU haters, such as fans from Auburn or Alabama, will want their own copy just for additional ammo (facts). Yet, it won't help them! Hah! They still think that LSU has their Trophy. Not so! It was on loan until Coach Orgeron put his best team together.

We begin the rest of the LSU Football Story in Chapter 2 with the founding of the institution and we continue in subsequent chapters right into the founding of the football program in 1893.

In defining the format of the book, we chose to use a timetable that is based on a historical chronology. Within this framework, we discuss the great moments in LSU Football History, and there are many great moments. No book can claim to be able to capture them all, as it would be a never-ending story, but we sure try.

Any former coach or player from LSU can attest to the fact that because of all the great coaches and players in all LSU sports, 13 jerseys have been retired to celebrate the work of some of the finest athletes in the world. Jerry Stovall's jersey is the last to come from LSU football. Stovall, a native of West Monroe, La., became the 13th LSU athlete or coach to have his/her jersey retired, joining Cannon and Casanova. If LSU were not so selective in recognizing greatness by retiring jerseys, there is the likelihood with all of the history of this great football program, there would be no numbers left.

I like to use this idea to help promulgate the notion that nobody can write a full book about LSU Football History that is all inclusive, because even if it can be written, it would be too big to ever be read. I hoped this book would come in at a little over 150 pages, but if it had, you would not have liked it. Read what you can in this book when you can. If you love LSU, it will surely be a fun experience.

I capture all the great moments in this book. OK, I get most of them! If I missed any and you tell me, then we'll do a second edition and a third and a fourth but we'll get it right. The great moments naturally include a lot of great people, including players and the 29 great coaches that over time would make or break the University of Louisiana.

If LSU were ever to break because of any coach, as some believe it has at times, (but the LSU legacy proves these were only bends, not breaks) simply because it is Louisiana State, the University not only would continue from any issue coming its way. it will always continue. History proves that. LSU has a he of a lot of moxie as an institution. Go LSU on that one for sure.

After 32 mostly great coaches and as non-fans actually believe -- a zillion national championships, LSU has been able to again become the most respected program of its peers and it is also now the most feared and the most respected college football team of the modern era. If you don't believe that, then you are simply not paying attention.

Ask any coach in 2020, which team would you prefer not to play, and the answer would not be anything other than LSU. That is the reality of having a winning record and a coach who can win anywhere!

LSU has been able to survive a number of coaches who could not survive themselves, while the university and the football program have both grown in acceptance and popularity.

We all as individuals and as honest institutions, such as LSU do our best in life and sometimes it is just enough. Sometimes it is just not enough. Even if we survive and become more than OK, detractors may suggest our success is not enough. I disagree. Let the naysayers say "nay," and go away! Who can deny LSU is the greatest football team that ever lived. I bet Knute Rockne would give today's coach Ed Orgeron a fine "High Five."

Let me please assure you that I have done my best to portray an accurate depiction of LSU Football History, displayed in a properly summarized format so that none of us are reading this book forever. There are a ton of great stories for sure. More importantly, none of us should need to search further than this book for the truth about many of the depictions in this book.

I worried from the inception of this project about how I could reduce LSU football to a single book. I can't! Nobody can! But we can do something close to satisfying what needs to be said about this outstanding football program, fully supported by the institution as well as the whole state of Louisiana.

In fact, I can, and I have done so in this book. We can deliver an understanding of Louisiana State Football and all of its years without talking about the mice that ate the cheese in the men's locker room in game X of season Y. Yes, indeed. I am pleased that I have achieved this objective in this book.

Who thinks that in 2020, there is a better team in college football than LSU? Pardon my French but only an idiot!

LSU has its own legacy as do many great college programs but an honest look says the Louisiana State Tigers are so unusual, it forms the greatest program ever in college football. It does not matter from which university you gained your alma mater. If you like Football and you like honesty and you like winning, LSU and Ed Orgeron's National Champion Tigers. LSU is the only good bet in town.

The secret in writing this book has been to know that there is always more. My job has been to show things that are known already in encyclopedias, and the vast resources of the Internet. I did not have to personally speak with Les Miles, Bernie Moore, Paul Dietzel or Charles McClendon, to get the truth about what was happening in their lives or the football time-period in which they excelled. Their stuff shows in their public records.

An Early LSU Football Team taking some time out for a Photograph

LSU has no revered history of groups of players such as the four horsemen of Notre Dame gaining recognition above and beyond the program and the team. LSU's coaches over the years especially Les Miles and Charles McClendon, and now Ed Orgeron have taken great athletes, who had no clue how far they could go, without fanfare, and these great coaches turned them into great players.

The players for their own reason did not group together into the four horsemen or the five oxes or the three birds or anything like that as their mission was to play great for the Louisiana State University and they gained their reputations from doing exactly that.

I have performed no magic in this book and I know it well. But nobody else has ever done what I have done with a project such as this. I have taken the well-known LSO Tigers football history of our times and I have made it both readable and exciting, even without including every phrase, paraphrase, paragraph, sentence, conjunctive verb, or otherwise forgotten notion that may have been included in somebody else's description of events.

If this book were written to be 75,000 pages, I still could not have included everything. But, then again, I knew I was not writing a tax code for the US. Who reads the tax code anyway?

My job was to bring this work about LSU's great moments together, and to show enough to the reader to make the journey through the beginning of football through Coach Orgeron's last win an easy adventure. In fact easier to make than it could have ever been. As I read and reread this book myself, I do believe I achieved that goal. I sure hope you like it.

What reader wants to do the research in order to be fulfilled about LSU football history other than me? This book makes LSU history and its great moments in football history both exciting and real. Of course, it is also much easier than if the reader had to look up all this great stuff by himself. It brings the Tigers and LSU Tiger football to life for the reader.

Instead of lots of work, we can just sit in our easy chairs or lounges at the pool or beach and we can learn and enjoy and enjoy and learn about a football team and a university that we have come to love. Along the way, every now and then, we'll probably fall asleep with a smile on our faces, and we'll dream about a fine story starring Bill Arnsparger, Paul Dietzel, Bernie Moore, or Mike Archer, LaRon Landry, Billy Cannon, Josh Reed, Ja'Marr Chase, or Joe Burrow or perhaps the inimitable Nick Saban himself!

How did I do it? How did I make this book inclusive and yet not exhaustive or exhausting?

I started right at the beginning of the football era, while football was being invented, and the rules were being formed by the greats of the day. Then, I began to write about things as they were happening back then. I moved this book slowly, chapter by chapter through the beginning of the Louisiana State University; the beginning of football; and then the beginning of LSU Football. I made sure that I got the essence and that the tales were not boring.

I took the flow of the book through periods in which student athletes were coaching football at LSU. I took it to eras in which coaches did not last much more than a year while better coaches lasted two to four years. Heck Ed Orgeron will have to play 4 games in the 2020 season to complete his 4th full season with the Tigers.

Then, before I knew it I was sneaking up on the decades in which more coaches made an impact in more years than in the beginning through the 1920's. I then took the flow of the book to the era of the great Charles McClendon and Paul Dietzel.

Eventually, I moved through each and every one of the thirty-two Louisiana State University coaches in just enough measure so that we all would know their mission and their results. I made sure that we captured their best stories.

Eventually, as the flow took us through thirty-one coaches, in 2016, after Les Miles basically retired, we got to examine a thirty-second coach who came from the defensive side of the LSU coaching staff and surprised everybody but the administration with his abilities as a great future legend, Ed Orgeron.

Yes, that's when Coach Ed was promoted as the thirty-second head coach of the Tigers. And did he show what he was made of and quickly. Then, I reexamined the great era of Les Miles and pulled out all the research on the new and great Ed Orgeron, a guy who did what few coaches have ever done—he brought the bacon home to Louisiana State and won the 2020 National Championship.

As I am reviewing Chapter 1 again, making sure I did all I said I would, I find that I have completed the Louisiana State University story and the LSU football story so you can now fill your leisure time with smiles and wonderment. Don't you dare put this book down!

“I the Winner” LSU did not leave the 2020 National Championship on the table. It took it with them.

Even if you choose never to take a break while reading this book, I get the whole teaching job done in something just less than 500 pages of the most enjoyable content you will ever read. It's all about LSU Football. Who could ask for more?

Les Miles, a man who some claim is LSU's best-ever coach, extended the great LSU coaching era right to 2016 when he lost to Auburn and it upset the alum and others. Coach Miles was not the least of the LSU greats for sure, nor would he be the last because out of the defense emerged an all-around coach who knew he could and he did—Ed Orgeron.

I see the current coach as he directs this team, to continue to become the best of the best. It took him just three years to win the big crown and he did it undefeated 15-0. Who else? He is now among the hallowed immortals and they cannot deny Coach Orgeron his new immortality claim. Nor would they want to do so. Let Ed Orgeron and his tell-tale coaching voice live long and prosper!

Using this format of enough told to get the story told, in the rest of the chapters in this book, we examine every football season from the first in 1893 to the last, which as of today is the Ed Orgeron Era's 2020 season with his new LSU National Championships and third overall championship for LSU making up the school's great record.

Within each season, as depicted in the book, we highlight its great moments but we also do one thing that makes this book useful as a reference document about all of the LSU Football Teams of the past. We chronicle each and every game in text summary form.

Some games are portrayed with great detail after the summation because of their historical significance or simply to tell a great story about a great game; great coach; great player; or sometimes even a great opponent.

Nonetheless, all games are listed and chronicled from 1893, the first LSU football season. You will absolutely love this book from page 1 to the end. Each time I read it now that it is built, I enjoy it even more.

In this book, we tell you the season, the opponent, the venue (home or away), and of course we tell you the outcome with a score that is easy to find. And, then to make it even easier to analyze and browse for specifics, we designate each win or loss with a big W or a big L so that it stands out in the text.

The Louisiana State University is proud of its history and its founding when Col W. T. Sherman accepted the position as superintendent in 1859..

And, of course LSU is very proud of its football program, and its legacy. LSU was, is and will continue to be a great university first, and a great home for the greatest football teams that God has ever created or will create—the LSU Tigers. .

Thanks for choosing to take this fun ride with us through LSU Football History. The great moments noted in this book are simply great! You'll love them all!

As you enjoy this book, however, it is somewhat incomplete. I like to find the oldest players I can to write some stories about. Oh, there were some old players alright but the stories were few and far between. I am going to have to wait until this book is published and I can get a good look at the LSU campus archives and other sources. There is enough here to pique your interest but nobody can accomplish everything in a book that captures 126 years of history. 1993-2019. I tried. If I come back again and find a bunch of other great players, I promise I will let you know. God bless.

Chapter 2 The Founding of the University of Louisiana State

The State University of Louisiana (LSU)

Origins from 1860

History of LSU

Courtesy of the Louisiana State University Archives

Louisiana State University began as a small all-male military school near Pineville, Louisiana. Originally called the Louisiana State Seminary of Learning and Military Academy (or variations thereof), classes began on January 2, 1860. The first superintendent, William Tecumseh Sherman, and five faculty members, taught the first students. The Seminary offered classes in engineering, chemistry, Latin, Greek, English, and mathematics. Cadets, as the students were called, submitted to military-style discipline and were required to stand inspections, drill, stand guard, and attend classes. They were awakened by a bugler sounding reveille and went to bed at taps.

The school's administrative structure consisted of a Board of Supervisors appointed by the governor, who was (and still is) also an ex officio member; the superintendent; the faculty; surgeon; and secretary. The most prominent member of the Board of Supervisors at this time was Gen. George Mason Graham, a planter who owned Tyrone Plantation in Rapides Parish, and was brigadier general in the state militia. He was called the "father of LSU" because of his strong commitment to the school and for his long service on the board. He was responsible for most of the major decisions regarding the Seminary including supervising construction of the building, creating its first curriculum, and insisting upon a military character.

William Tecumseh Sherman was chosen as the Seminary's first superintendent (equivalent to today's president) in 1859. An 1840 graduate of West Point, he served in the army until 1853 and subsequently became a lawyer and banker before applying for the superintendent's position. When he arrived at the Seminary, Sherman had a building but little else. He had to secure books, uniforms, furniture, and other materials so that classes could begin. The senior professor was Anthony Vallas, a Hungarian émigré who taught mathematics and natural philosophy. Francis W. Smith became professor of chemistry and commandant of cadets.

He was a graduate of Virginia Military Institute and the University of Virginia. David F. Boyd was hired as professor of ancient languages and English and was also a graduate of the University of Virginia. E. Berté St. Ange, professor of modern languages, had been an officer in the French Marines and had a reputation as a duelist. John W. Sevier, at one time a filibuster in Central America with William Walker, became surgeon and assistant professor of ancient languages, but stayed only a short time and was replaced by Powhattan Clarke. Sherman remarked that "...on the whole, the professors are above mediocrity."

The Seminary grounds, located near Pineville in Rapides Parish, was purchased in 1853 from Mrs. E.R. Williams for $3,190 and comprised 438 acres. An additional eighty acres were purchased in 1855. This location was chosen because of its centrality, access to water transportation on the Red River, and the area's perceived healthfulness. The fact that George Mason Graham lived in Rapides Parish also played a role.

LSU Seminary and its grounds

There were a few buildings on the property, but they were deemed unsuitable for use as a school, and $15,000 was allocated for construction of a new building which began in 1856. The building itself, one of the largest public buildings in the state upon completion, was an imposing three-story 72-room U-shaped structure with a central quadrangle. The building combined classrooms, dining hall, library, and quarters for the students as well as faculty until homes could be built for them.

In 1861, Louisiana joined other Southern states in seceding from the Union and Sherman resigned to join the United States Army. He would remain a friend and benefactor of the school for the rest of his life. When the Civil War began, most of the students and faculty members left the Seminary to fight for the Confederacy causing the school to close. After a few attempts to reopen, the Seminary closed for the duration of the war in April of 1863.

the Seminary reopened in September of 1865 with David F. Boyd, one of the original faculty members, as superintendent. Although the building survived the war intact, most of the equipment and books were destroyed or missing. During the immediate postwar period and throughout Reconstruction, the Seminary had great difficulties that were due primarily to a lack of funding.

From 1865 to 1869, the legislature made appropriations to the Seminary, but inflation and the increasing number of beneficiary cadets (chosen from each parish whose fees were to be paid by local police juries, but often were not) used much of the funding intended for school operations. Boyd and members of the Board of Supervisors had to appear before a reluctant legislature each year to appeal for funding. Faculty were affected by the Seminary's financial uncertainty and many resigned.

The unsettled nature of the Seminary also caused a decrease in enrollment, especially after 1867. The news was not all bad in that the library was built up from duplicates held by the state library and legislation provided for a scientific survey of the state to be undertaken by Samuel Lockett, professor of engineering and Dr. F.V. Hopkins, professor of geology. The survey was completed in 1872 and Lockett published the resulting report as Louisiana as it is the following year. This would be the first major scientific work completed by university faculty.

In June of 1869, the Seminary held a commencement ceremony for its first graduating class. This would be the first and only commencement held at the Seminary. On October 15, 1869, fire destroyed the seminary building.

State Institution for the Deaf, Dumb, and Blind in Baton Rouge.

All of the library books and some of the scientific apparatus and textbooks were saved, but about $20,000 in supplies were destroyed. On November 1, the cadets moved to the State Institution for the Deaf, Dumb, and Blind in Baton Rouge.

The move to Baton Rouge was supposed to be temporary, but the school remained at the Institution for the Deaf, Dumb, and Blind for eighteen years. The Seminary occupied half of the large building while inmates of the institute used the remainder. Throughout Reconstruction in the 1870s and into the 1880s, LSU continued to struggle financially and was nearly forced to close in 1875.

Financial instability also caused a revolving door of faculty; teachers would be hired, but when they were not paid, or paid late, they would resign.

LSU had to compete for funding with the Louisiana Agricultural and Mechanical College (in existence from 1874 to 1877) and in theory was racially integrated (but no African American students were actually admitted); and the University of Louisiana (Tulane University after 1884), both based in New Orleans. The Agricultural and Mechanical College was also allowed to use proceeds from the Morrill Land Grant Act of 1862. In 1877, after much political wrangling, LSU and the Agricultural and Mechanical College merged to form Louisiana State University and Agricultural and Mechanical College based in Baton Rouge, the name it would keep until 1965.

After the merger, LSU's financial woes continued, due in no small part to the constitutional convention of 1879. Louisiana's new constitution reduced the university's income and it still had to compete with the University of Louisiana for the small education appropriation from the legislature. The legislature restored some funding in 1880, but it was not enough to adequately maintain the university. There was talk of consolidating the two schools with the law and medical departments remaining at the University of Louisiana and LSU retaining the academic department, but nothing came of it.

By 1878, the inmates of the Institution for the Deaf, Dumb, and Blind had been moved to other locations leaving the entire building available for LSU. This move provided the university with additional space for laboratories and classrooms. Student enrollment steadily rose during this period but remained below 200 students. Student performance suffered during the 1878-1886 period because of continued financial instability, conflict among faculty members and members of the Board of Supervisors, and a revolving door of university presidents who in turn had conflicts with the Board and the legislature.

David Boyd was ousted in 1880 and replaced by William P. Johnston from 1881 to 1883. Johnston was replaced by James Nicholson in 1883-1884. David Boyd was called back to serve from 1884 to 1886 and Thomas Boyd (David's younger brother and a faculty member) replaced him in 1886-1887.

Nicholson served again from 1887 to 1896 and Thomas Boyd returned to the presidency from 1896 to 1927. Development of more scientific work began in the 1880-1887 period with the advent of an agriculture course and improvements to the mechanics, civil engineering, and commercial courses. For agriculture, the State Experiment Station in Baton Rouge was established in 1886 and was devoted to experiments with crops grown in the state. Two other experiment stations, at Calhoun in north Louisiana and near New Orleans (the Sugar Experiment Station), were also established. Beginning in 1909, experiment station staff disseminated (and continue to do so through the Agricultural Extension Service) important information to the agricultural interests throughout the state.

Although LSU was the sole occupant of the Institution for the Deaf, Dumb, and Blind, it did not own the building. Since the Seminary was destroyed by fire in 1869, several groups from central Louisiana had wanted the school to return to Rapides Parish, but there was never enough support in the legislature to construct new buildings or rebuild the old one. In 1886, LSU received permission to use the former military post in Baton Rouge where the new state capitol is situated today.

The university had been interested in the post for a number of years but was unable to secure permission to use it. The post had been unoccupied except for a caretaker since the end of Reconstruction and the buildings had begun to deteriorate, but after LSU had gained permission to use them, they were cleaned and repaired. By 1900, a major building program began with the construction of an auditorium, a new library, engineering shops and classrooms, and more dormitory space. In 1902, the federal government gave LSU title to the former military post and by 1915, the 200-acre site had reached the point where there was no more room left to expand.

In the 1890s, student life began to change. Debating and literary societies had existed, and beginning in 1893, LSU began to field teams in football, baseball, tennis, and track and field, and cadets were allowed more time for recreation. The military system of discipline was still in force as it had been since 1860, but with a regular army office detailed to the University as commandant. Cadets had complete uniforms and were issued rifles, and an artillery battery was formed.

There was a demerit scale for such infractions of the rules as gambling, fighting, drinking, and absence without leave, and a cadet could be expelled if he received enough demerits. “Town students,” those who did not live in the barracks on campus, were subject to similar discipline, but were required to wear their uniforms only when actually on campus.

As far as academics were concerned, LSU offered courses primarily to provide industrial and technical training and this was the case into the early 20th century. In 1887, there were only two courses: The Agricultural Course and the Mechanical and Engineering Course. In 1892, a Latin-Science Course was added and a General Science Course was added in 1894. There was also a Literary Course, but it was not as well equipped or staffed as the science and technical courses. Student population grew from around 200 in the early 1890s to over 400 by 1902 including 21 foreign students.

With an increased enrollment came an increase in the number and types of classes offered. In 1906, the law school was established, women were admitted for the first time, and by 1908, the college system was established that formed the basis of the school and college system used today.

The new colleges were the College of Arts and Sciences (now the College of Humanities and Social Sciences), College of Agriculture, College of Engineering, Audubon Sugar School (now part of the LSU AgCenter), Teacher's College (now the College of Education and Human Sciences), the Law School (Paul M. Hebert Law Center), the Graduate Department (now the Graduate School), the School of Agriculture (a three-year course for those unable to pursue a full four-year course in the College of Agriculture), and the School of Commerce (part of the College of Arts and Sciences; now the E.J. Ourso College of Business).

Upon America's entry into World War I, LSU students and faculty signed up to fight and many faculty members were employed by the federal government as experts in such fields as agriculture, food distribution, and information dissemination. President Thomas Boyd headed a program to train and employ a corps of shipbuilders. William Dalrymple, professor of veterinary medicine, organized a knitting club for the female students to make socks, caps, and gloves for soldiers at the front. The war ended before many of the programs, such as the corps of shipbuilders, could get off the ground.

The Memorial Oak Grove (Picture above near the LSU Union) was planted in 1926 to commemorate the students who lost their lives in the war.

The Memorial Tower, completed in 1925, honors all Louisianans killed in the war.

By 1918, LSU was experiencing growing pains and President Thomas Boyd began looking for land to build a new and larger campus. For several years, Boyd had his eye on Gartness Plantation south of Baton Rouge along the Mississippi River, thinking that the land would provide enough space for the university's physical growth and further its agricultural mission. Several faculty members and prominent Baton Rouge citizens purchased an option to buy Gartness until the state could come up with funding to purchase it. This property, along with portions of Arlington and Nestle down plantations, make up LSU's present campus in Baton Rouge.

With support from Governor John M. Parker and utilizing a newly-enacted severance tax, construction began on March 29, 1922. The first building completed was the dairy barn followed by other agricultural buildings, and by the fall of 1925, many classes were held on the new campus that was formally dedicated on April 30, 1926.

The physical layout of the campus was designed by the Olmsted Brothers landscape architecture firm in 1920-1921, but since the Olmsted's were not building architects, Theodore Link was hired in 1921 to design the buildings. Link also made a few changes to the Olmsted layout. The original campus buildings around the quadrangle and including the Memorial Tower and Power House were designed in a northern Italian renaissance style featuring archways, pantile roofs, and stucco walls. This style of architecture was continued on other buildings, such as Himes and Allen halls, constructed throughout the 1930s.

After Huey Long was elected governor in 1928, funding for LSU became a priority and the university entered what may be called a golden age. Long wanted LSU to be the best university in the nation and during the 1930s, and despite the Great Depression, the number of buildings increased and the number of courses grew and improved. LSU's president from 1931 to 1939, James Monroe Smith, played a large role in this expansion. Smith supported new courses in the arts and literature, and LSU Press and The Southern Review began in 1935.

Foreign languages also received greater attention with the completion of the French House in 1935, which provided an immersion program for French language, literature, and culture. The LSU Cadet Band and football team received special attention from Long and were used as public relations tools for the university and the state.

Much of LSU's growth in the 1930s was funded by the Works Progress Administration and other New Deal programs instituted by the Roosevelt administration. As the decade came to an end, allegations of misuse of these funds began to surface. Various state and federal agencies investigated the university's administration and entities with which it had done business. The investigators found that corruption and graft existed at the highest levels, and James Monroe Smith and Governor Richard Leche, among others, received prison sentences in connection with the so-called "University Scandals." One of the reforms brought about by the scandals was an overhaul of LSU's accounting system that forms the basis of the one used today.

LSU Department of Bands Circa 1915

During World War II, LSU became a major center for the Army Specialized Training Program and was one of the Army's top providers of officers. Student population decreased from a high of 7,500 in 1941 to around 3,400 by 1944 because so many student-age men were off at war. In 1944, women students outnumbered men for the first time and they began to take more technical courses.

Women also joined the Cadet Band for the first time during the war. By 1947, GIs (many of whom were married with families, a rarity before the war) returning from the war increased the student population to just over 10,000 and another major building program took place to house and provide classrooms for the new students and their families.

Throughout the 1950s, LSU would continue to grow and began to evolve from a teaching university mainly concerned with agricultural research to an institution where teaching and research went hand in hand. The first major research grant awarded to LSU came from the National Science Foundation. New programs such as nuclear science and computer science also began in 1950s, and Boyd Professorships recognizing faculty excellence began in 1953.

The building boom that began after World War II continued with the expansion of Tiger Stadium to include more seats and dormitory rooms (1953) and completion of much-needed new main library (now known as Middleton Library after LSU President Troy Middleton) in 1958. A commuter campus in New Orleans (originally LSU-NO, now UNO and part of the University of Louisiana System) also opened in 1958.

LSU's demographics began to gradually change after World War II. In 1946, for the first time, African Americans began to attempt to register at LSU. Many were veterans of World War II eager to use the educational benefits provided by the GI Bill. State law required that African Americans attend historically black colleges such as Southern and Grambling or go to college out of state. Beginning in 1950, federal court decisions stated that if a comparable graduate program was not available at a historically black college, LSU and other historically white colleges in Louisiana had to allow African Americans to enroll.

From 1950 until the Civil Rights Act of 1964 was passed, potential African American students had to file suit in federal court to show why they should be admitted. This ruling was expanded to allow undergraduates to enroll under similar conditions in 1953, but A.P. Tureaud, Jr. was the only African American undergraduate to enter LSU until the passage of the Civil Rights Act.

The 1960s and 1970s saw many changes in student life on campus. A new spacious student union was completed in 1964 that provided meeting and gallery space, a theater, and dining facilities. The union replaced cramped facilities in the Huey Long Fieldhouse and the Gym-Armory (now the Cox Academic Center for Athletes). The passage of the Civil Rights Act of 1964 forced LSU to allow African American students to enroll. Even though LSU was (and still is) a relatively conservative campus, students began to question established rules and ideas held by the administration, and wanted to have more say in their own lives. Students began to protest the Vietnam War, the dress code, and mandatory ROTC.

Huey Long Fieldhouse Early Pictures

By 1972, the age of majority had been lowered from 21 to 18 and the concept of in loco parentis (in the place of the parent) ended rendering moot many university rules governing conduct and living arrangements. Students also advocated for a Black Studies program and hiring more African American faculty and administrators. By the mid-1970s, women students were allowed to enter ROTC and women's intercollegiate sports began to be recognized as more than an intramural activity.

During the 1960s and 1970s, fueled by tax revenue from the booming oil and petrochemical industries, research flourished in medicine, engineering, nuclear science, computers, fisheries, and agriculture. New buildings such as the Life Sciences Building, Choppin Hall, Williams Hall, and the Center for Engineering and Business Administration (CEBA; now Patrick Taylor Hall) were constructed to support additional teaching and research. Branch campuses opened in New Orleans (1958), Alexandria (1960), Eunice and Shreveport (1967). The LSU Agricultural Center and the law school (now the Paul M. Hebert Law Center) broke away to form separate campuses in 1972 and 1977 respectively.

Agricultural Center

The ebb and flow of LSU's funding continued in the 1980s and into the mid-1990s. LSU continued to suffer from sharply declining revenue due to reduced values for oil and gas and was, along with other Louisiana colleges and universities, embroiled in a lengthy federal lawsuit alleging that the state operated a dual system of higher education in violation of the Civil Rights Act. The lawsuit called into question every program offered by all universities and required court approval for any new funding or academic programs. Both of these events caused uncertainty among the students and faculty as academic programs were cut, fees and tuition increased, and salaries for faculty and staff remained stagnant.

By the late 1990s, LSU had begun to recover from the setbacks that began in the 1980s and became a land, sea, and space-grant university with a diverse student body that numbers around 30,000. Yearly budget cuts beginning in 2008 brought about changes in the administrative structure and as in the 1980s, some low-enrollment courses were eliminated. LSU has also become responsible for managing Louisiana's indigent healthcare system.

The agricultural center and law center also reintegrated into the Baton Rouge campus. Despite these recent impediments and increased responsibilities, LSU has embarked on an ambitious program to increase the amount of research grants and contracts, improve student retention and graduation rates, and improve its academic reputation.

LSU has persevered through war and peace and through good economic times and bad. Many of the trials through which the university has passed have threatened its existence, but LSU has continued to educate, and through research to further the world's knowledge.

Early Campuses of LSU

On January 2, 1860, Louisiana State Seminary of Learning opened in Pineville with 17 students and five faculty members. Fire of unknown origin destroyed the school in October, 1867.

On November 1, 1869, the seminary reopened in Baton Rouge, sharing quarters with the Institute of the Deaf and Dumb and Pond.

In 1886, the school moved into its third home, the U. S. Army Barragon Barracks, and acquired adjacent lands in the area of what is now the state capital administrative complex.

This view shows the cadets in formation at the barracks site with downtown Baton Rouge in the background. The street (formerly Third Street and now Riverside Mall) intersected the campus. On land across the street, the University had room to expand.

And expand it did. The decade 1900-1910 marked the greatest building program an educational institution in the state had ever witnessed. Some 22 buildings (a few shown above) were erected and the foundation laid for the beginning of a true University. Handy had the last building been completed when the need arose for additional space. A movement for a "greater university" on a former plantation site three miles south of the city gained enthusiastic statewide support. Construction began in 1922, and by 1925 the move to the present campus was started—an undertaking that was finally completed in 1932.

The Louisiana State University is naturally proud of its history; and its founding in January, 1860; and William Tecumseh Sherman, who was the first superintendent. He, along with five faculty members taught the first students.

LSU Admissions Department

Our Mission

The Office of Multicultural Affairs, a unit of the Office of Diversity, creates an environment at LSU that embraces individual difference, advocates for social justice and cultivates a campus atmosphere of inclusion.

Our Vision Statement

We are a premier model of collaborative and equitable programs and services in cultivating intentional solutions to complex and emerging challenges to diversity and inclusion that empowers and engages all members in examining multidimensional perspectives of personal and cultural engagement through intellectual curiosity and advocacy, for the benefit of the entire university and the world.

Chapter 4 Louisiana State's First Football Team

LSU

LSU Tigers First Football Team – 1893-1894

1893: Over 37 years from the founding

LSU Lunches its first football team

LSU got its football program going a year after one of its two nemeses, Alabama played its first season. Some say that Alabama football began with a game in Birmingham on a Friday afternoon in November of 1892. But, there was more to the story than just showing up for the game.

One of my favorite sayings in life is that “nothing worth having in life is easy.” Even something as simple as forming a football team at a premiere university that had little knowledge or inclination of the game. Sometimes, a little help from the outside is all that is needed to start a tide rolling.

It happens that for the University of Alabama, all the historical logs suggest it was not the President or Board of Directors or an Athletic Director or a local sports club that got the Tide rolling for Alabama Football. No, it was none of those. It was a law student William G. Little of Livingston, Alabama.

Auburn is LSU's other nemesis. It too got started a year before LSU. Ironically before LSU played its first game, Auburn had stolen something valuable from LSU—its team name -the Tigers. By the way, Tigers is the most popular team name in sports.

With five College teams using the moniker “Tigers” as their team name. Putting together the organization for Auburn's s first football was the handiwork of George Petrie, who some may know led the 1892 Auburn Tigers to a 2-2 record in their inaugural season. Petrie was the bloke who chose burnt orange and navy blue as the official colors for Auburn athletic teams. This color scheme was inspired by his alma mater, the University of Virginia.

Just a Year later

Coach Charles E. Coates.
<< 1st LSU Football Coach

Starting a football team was always quite a task for any one person or organization—even for a state such as the state of Louisiana. And, so LSU had a lot more to worry about in year one than anything Alabama or Auburn may have been up to in the prior year. 1993 was their first year playing football and they only were able to schedule one game

Louisiana State University (LSU) got to play in just one football game in its inaugural season of 1993. In fact, LSU played its first football game in school history on November 25, 1893, two days after Thanksgiving. The “team” lost to all sports rival and fellow Louisiana University, Tulane. It was in the first intercollegiate contest ever played in the Pelican State.

The game was an “away” contest, played at Sportsman’s Park in New Orleans and it was called The Battle of the Rag. Tulane’s Green Wave rose to the occasion and smothered the LSU Tigers that day L (0-34). Since it was the first and only game of the season, LSU officially had a losing season in year 1.

Dr. Charles Edward Coates, 1st LSU Football Coach

This game sparked a continual rivalry between the LSU Tigers and the Tulane Green Wave that has lasted generations. Football was in its infancy and so it was tough to find a coach for real back then so LSU “settled” for a Doctor from the faculty to coach the team. University professor Dr. Charles E. Coates took on the task. He was not known in sports circles but instead, he was known for his work in the chemistry of sugar.

The team had a special player who would soon become a famous person in Louisiana history. Future Louisiana Governor Ruffin G. Pleasant became the quarterback and captain of this first LSU team. In the first game against Tulane, LSU football players wore purple and gold ribbons on their uniforms.

According to the legend of the day back when, purple and gold were chosen because they were Mardi Gras colors, and the green color ribbons apparently were already sold out.

An LSU baseball team had also worn purple and gold in its first varsity game against Tulane earlier in Spring 1893, even though LSU's official colors at the time were actually blue and white. Walter Camp's rules were being formed and manipulated regularly in those days. In fact, the rules of play in 1893 were more likely influenced by rugby rules than what we would consider modern day American football.

LSU had to go another year to finally achieve its first victory. The Tigers defeated the Natchez Athletic Club 260 in 1894. Samuel Marmaduke Dinwiddie Clark had the honor of scoring the very first touchdown in LSU history. The first football game played on the LSU campus was at State Field on December 3, 1894, a loss against Mississippi.

LSU's only touchdown in that game was scored by the head coach, Albert Simmons. This was the first year of play for William S. Slaughter who lettered as an end for 5 years (1894, 1895, 1896, 1897, 1898). Slaughter was LSU's first five time football letterman. By 1895, LSU had its first win in Baton Rouge.

One of my favorite sayings in life is that “nothing worth having in life is easy.” Even something as simple as forming a football team at a premiere university that had little knowledge or inclination of the game. Sometimes, a little help from the outside is all that is needed to start a tide rolling.

Heisman Trophy

LSU's great running back Billy Cannon won the Heisman Trophy in 1959 and then everybody's Heisman pick in 2019 was Joe Burrow who led the Tigers to the National Championship. LSU had some close calls in it many years of football play since the Heisman became a trophy in 1935.

I have to admit, I scoured for sources that could explain the lack of more Heisman Trophies at LSU. LSU officials, when you read this and you know or find out, let me know, and in a future update to this book, I will more than likely include your perspective.

LSU fans are typically very happy

Overall, those of us who root always or often for LSU are seldom disappointed. What a football tradition. Go Tigers.

Chapter 5 The Evolution of Modern Football

Lots of playing before playing became official

The official agreed upon date for the first American-style college football game is November 6, 1869. If you can find a replay of this game someplace in the heavens, however, you would find it would not look much like football as we know it. But, it was not completely soccer or rugby either.

Before this game, teams were playing a rugby style similar to that played in Britain in the mid-19th century. At the time in the US, a derivative known as association football was also played. In both games, a football is kicked at a goal or run over a line. These styles were based on the varieties of English public school football games. Over time, as noted, the style of "football" play in America continued to evolve.

On November 6, 1869, the first football game in America featured Rutgers and Princeton. Before the teams were even on the field it was being plugged as the first college football game of all time.

The first game of intercollegiate football was a sporting battle between two neighboring schools on a plot of ground where the present-day Rutgers gymnasium now stands in New Brunswick, N.J. Rutgers won that first game, 6-4.

There were two teams of 25 men each and the rules were rugby-like, but different enough to make it very interesting and enjoyable.

Like today's football, there were many surprises; strategies needed to be employed; determination exhibited, and of course the players required physical prowess.

1st Game Rutgers 6 Princeton 4 College Field, New Brunswick, NJ

At 3 p.m. the 50 combatants as well as 100 spectators gathered on the field. Most sat on a low wooden fence and watched the athletes discard their hats, coats and vests. The players used their suspenders as belts. To give a unique look, Rutgers wore scarlet-colored scarves, which they converted into turbans. This contrasted them with the bareheaded boys from Princeton.

Two members of each team remained more or less stationary near the opponent's goal in the hopes of being able to slip over and score from unguarded positions. Thus, the present day "sleeper" was conceived. The remaining 23 players were divided into groups of 11 and 12. While the 11 "fielders" lined up in their own territory as defenders, the 12 "bulldogs" carried the battle.

Each score counted as a "game" and 10 games completed the contest. Following each score, the teams changed direction. The ball could be advanced only by kicking or batting it with the feet, hands, heads or sides.

Rutgers put a challenge forward that three games were to be played that year. The first was played at New Brunswick and won by Rutgers. Princeton won the second game, but cries of "over-emphasis" prevented the third game in football's first year when faculties of both institutions protested on the grounds that the games were interfering with student studies.

This is an excerpt of the Rutgers account of the game on its web site. A person named Herbert gave this detailed account of the play in the first game:

"Though smaller on the average, the Rutgers players, as it developed, had ample speed and fine football sense. Receiving the ball, our men formed a perfect interference around it and with short, skillful kicks and dribbles drove it down the field. Taken by surprise, the Princeton men fought valiantly, but in five minutes we had gotten the ball through to our captains on the enemy's goal and S.G. Gano, '71 and G.R. Dixon, '73, neatly kicked it over. None thought of it, so far as I know, but we had without previous plan or thought evolved the play that became famous a few years later as 'the flying wedge'."

"Next period Rutgers bucked, or received the ball, hoping to repeat the flying wedge," Herbert's account continues. "But the first time we formed it Big Mike came charging full upon us. It was our turn for surprise. The Princeton battering ram made no attempt to reach the ball but, forerunner of the interference-breaking ends of today, threw himself into our mass play, bursting us apart, and bowing us over. Time and again Rutgers formed the wedge and charged; as often Big Mike broke it up. And finally, on one of these incredible break-ups a Princeton bulldog with a long accurate, perhaps lucky kick, sent the ball between the posts for the second score.

It was at this point that a Rutgers professor could stand it no longer. Waving his umbrella at the participants, he shrieked, "You will come to no Christian end!"

Herbert's account of the game continues: "The fifth and sixth goals went to Rutgers. The stars of the latter period of play, in the memory of the players after the lapse of many years, were "Big Mike" and Large (former State Senator George H. Large of Flemington, another Princeton player) ...

The University of the State of Louisiana did not get into the football act until the early 1890's. At this time, the rules of rugby kept changing to accommodate the infatuation for the Americanized style of "football" play that would ultimately become the American game of football.

Walter Camp: the father of American football?

Walter Camp was a very well-known rugby player from Yale. In today's world, he would have been characterized as a rugby hero. It was his love of the game, his knowledge of the game as it was played, and his innovative mind that caused him to take the evolution of football even further. He pioneered the changes to the rules of rugby that slowly transformed the sport into the new game of American Football.

The rule changes that were introduced to the rugby and association style of play were mostly those authored by Camp, who was also a Hopkins School graduate. For his original efforts, Walter Camp today is considered to be the "Father of American Football". Among the important changes brought to the game were the introduction of a line of scrimmage; down-and-distance rules; and the legalization of interference (blocking).

There was no such thing in those days as a forward pass and so the legalization of interference in 1880 football permitted blocking for runners. The forward pass would add another dimension to the game that made it much different than rugby or association football.

Soon after the early football changes, in the late nineteenth and into the early twentieth centuries, more game-play type developments were introduced by college coaches. The list is like a who's who of early American College Football. Coaches, such as Eddie Cochems, Amos Alonzo Stagg, Parke H. Davis, Knute Rockne, John Heisman, and Glenn "Pop" Warner helped introduce and then take advantage of the newly introduced forward pass. College football as well as professional football, were introduced prior to the 20th century. Fans were lured into watching again and again once they saw the game played.

College football especially grew in popularity despite the existence of pro-football. It became the dominant version of the sport of football in the United States. It was this way for the entire first half of the 20th century. Bowl games made the idea of football even more exciting in the college ranks. Rivalries grew and continued and the fans loved it! This great football tradition brought a national audience to college football games that still dominates the sports world today.

This book has little to do with pro-football or any other sport. However, there is no denying that the greatest college football players more often than not eventually found their fortunes in professional football. Pro football can be traced back to the season Before LSU got into pro football.

It was 1892 when William "Pudge" Heffelfinger signed a $500 contract to play for the Allegheny Athletic Association against the Pittsburgh Athletic Club.

Twenty-eight years later, the American Professional Football Association was formed. This league changed its name to the National Football League (NFL) just two years later. Eventually, the NFL became the major league of American football. Originally, just a sport played in Midwestern industrial towns in the United States, professional football eventually became a national phenomenon.

We all know this because from August to February, in America, many of us are glued to our TV sets or chained to our seats in some of the most intriguing pro-football stadiums in America.

Rules and Penalties

The big problem players from different teams and different geographies had when playing early American-style football in college was that the style of play was not standardized. The rulebooks were not yet written or were at best incomplete and disputable.

A rule over here, for example, would be a penalty over there. And, so in the 1870's there was a lot of work to try to make all games to be played by the same rules. There were minor rule changes such as team size was reduced from 25 to 20 but of course over the years, this and all other rules continued to evolve. For years, there was no such thing as a running touchdown. The only means of scoring was to bat or kick the ball through the opposing team's goal.

Early rugby rules were the default. The field size was rugby style at 140 yards by 70 yards v 120 X 53 1/3 (including end zones) in today's football game. There was plenty of room to huff and puff and almost get lost. There were no breaks per se for long periods. Instead of fifteen minute quarters, the game was more like Rugby and Soccer with 45 minute halves played continuously.

In 1873 to put some order to the game, Columbia, Princeton, Rutgers, and Yale got together in a hotel in New York City and wrote down the first set of intercollegiate football rules. They changed a few things along the way but the end product was a much more standard way of playing football games. Rather than use the home team's rules, all teams then were able to play by the same rules

Harvard did not to comply with rules

For its own reasons, Harvard chose not to attend the rules conference. Instead, it played all of its games using the Harvard code of rules. Harvard therefore had a difficult time scheduling games. In 1874, to get a game, Harvard agreed to play McGill University from Montreal Canada. They had rules that even Harvard had never seen. For example, any player could pick up the ball and run with it, anytime he wished.

Another McGill rule was that they would count tries (the act of grounding the football past the opponent's goal line. Since there was no end zone, which technically makes a football field of today 120 yards long, a touchdown gave no points. Instead, it provided the chance to kick a free goal from the field. If the kick were missed, the touchdown did not count.

In 1874 McGill and Harvard played a two-game series. Each team could play 11 men per side. This was in deep contrast to the even earlier days of college football before standard rules when games were played with 25, 20, 15, or 11 men on a side.

The first game was played with a round ball using what were known as the "Boston" rules (Harvard). The next day, the teams played using the McGill rules, which included McGill's oval ball which was much like an American football, and it featured the ability to pick up the ball and run with it.

Harvard enjoyed this experience especially the idea of "the try" which had not been used in American football. Eventually, the try evolved into the American idea of a touchdown and points were given when a try was successful.

Not all the rules lasted the duration and some were very strange by today's standards. One of the most perplexing rules was that a man could run with the ball only while an opponent chose to pursue him. When a tackler abandoned the ball-carrier, the latter had to stop, and was forced to kick, pass or even throw away what was called "his burden."

McGill has a great account of this match on their web site. Type mcgill web site football against Harvard into your search engine.

Their players wore no protective pads. Woolen jerseys covered the torso, while white trousers encased the players' legs. Some trousers were short and some were long. It did not seem to matter for the game. A number of the men wore what they called black "football turbans" which were the ancestors of the modern helmet; others chose to wear white canvas hats.

The Harvard players wore undershirts made of gauze. Think about that for a while. They also wore what were called full length gymnasium costumes. They also wore light baseball shoes. Most of the team wore handkerchiefs, which were knotted about their heads.

The gauze undershirts were a trick. There was strategy in this choice of top uniform. When a player was first tackled, the gauze would be demolished and the next opponent would have nothing to grab other than "slippery human flesh." Harvard won this game by a score of 3-0

The next go at playing by the rules was when Harvard took on Tufts University on June 4, 1875. This was the first American college football game played using rules similar to the McGill/Harvard contest. Tufts won this game. Despite the loss, Harvard continued pushing McGill style football and challenged Yale.

The Bulldog team accepted under a compromise rule set that included some Yale soccer rules and Harvard rugby rules. They used 15 players per team. It was November 13, 1875 for this first meeting of Harvard v Yale. Harvard won 4-0. Walter Camp attended the game and the following year he played in the game as a Yale Bulldog.

Camp was determined to avenge Yale's defeat. Onlookers from Princeton, who saw this Harvard / Yale game loved it so much, they brought it back to Princeton where it was quickly adopted as the preferred version of football.

Once Walter Camp caught onto the rugby-style rules, history says he became a fixture at the Massasoit House conventions. Here the rules of the game were debated and changed appropriately. From these meetings, Camp's rule changes as well as others were adopted.

Having eleven players instead of fifteen aided in opening the game and it emphasized speed over strength. When Camp attended in 1878, this motion was rejected but it passed in the 1880 meeting. The line of scrimmage and the snap from center to the quarterback also passed in 1880.

Originally the snap occurred by a kick from the center, but this was later modified so the ball would be snapped with the hands either as a pass back (long snap) or a direct snap from the center.

It was Camp's new scrimmage rules, however, which according to many, revolutionized the game, though it was not always to increase speed. In fact, Princeton was known to use line of scrimmage plays to slow the game, making incremental progress towards the end zone much like today during each down.

Camp's original idea was to increase scoring, but in fact the rule was often misused to maintain control of the ball for the entire game. The negative effect was that there were many slow and unexciting contests. This too would be fixed with the idea of the first down coming into play.

In 1882, at the rules meeting, Camp proposed that a team be given three downs to advance the ball five yards. These rules were called the down and distance rules. Along with the notion of the line of scrimmage, these rules transformed the game of rugby into the distinct sport of American football.

Among other significant rule changes, in 1881, the field size was reduced to its modern dimensions of 120 by $53 \frac{1}{3}$ yards (109.7 by 48.8 meters). Camp was central to these significant rule changes that ultimately defined American football. Camp's next quest was to address scoring anomalies. His first cut was to give four points for a touchdown and two points for kicks after touchdowns; two points for safeties, and five points for field goals. The notion of the foot in football /rugby explains Camp's rationale.

In 1887, game time was fixed at two halves of 45 minutes each. Additionally, college games would have two paid officials known as a referee and an umpire, for each game. In 1888, the rules permitted tackling below the waist and then in 1889, the officials were given whistles and stopwatches to better control the game.

An innovation that many list as most significant to making American football uniquely American was the legalization of blocking opponents, which back then was called "interference." This tactic had been highly illegal under the rugby-style rules and in rugby today, it continues to be illegal.

The more those who know soccer and football find rugby to be more like soccer.

Though offsides is a penalty infraction today, offsides in the 1880's in rugby was very much the same as offsides in soccer. The prohibition of blocking in a rugby game is in fact because of the game's strict enforcement of its offsides rule.

Similar to soccer, this rule prohibits any player on the team with possession of the ball to loiter between the ball and the goal. Blocking continues as a basic element of modern American football, with many complex schemes having been developed and implemented over the years, including zone blocking and pass blocking.

Camp stayed active in rule making for most of his life. He had the honor of personally selecting an annual All-American team every year from 1889 through 1924. Camp passed away in 1925. The Walter Camp Football Foundation continues to select All-American teams in his honor.

With many rule changes as noted, as American style rugby became more defined as American football, more and more colleges adopted football as part of their sports programs. Most of the schools were from the Eastern US. It was not until 1879 that the University of Michigan became the first school west of Pennsylvania to establish a bona-fide American-style college football team.

Back then, football teams played whenever they could in the fall or the spring. For example, Michigan's first game was in late spring, near the end of what we would call the academic year. On May 30, 1879 Michigan beat Racine College 1–0 in a game played in Chicago. In 1887, Michigan and Notre Dame played their first football game, which did not benefit from Camp's rules. LSU did not play football until 1893.

The first night time game

It was not until September 28, 1892 that the first nighttime football game was played. Mansfield State Normal played Wyoming Seminary in Mansfield, Pennsylvania. These schools are close to where I live. The game ended at a "declared" half-time in a 0-0 tie. It had become too dark to play.

Wyoming Seminary was not a college and to this day it is not a college. I live about five miles from the school. It is a private college preparatory school located in the Wyoming Valley of Northeastern Pennsylvania. During the time period in which the game was played, it was common for a college and high school to play each other in football—a practice that of course has long since been discontinued.

The reason that it got too dark to play, ironically was not because the game began at dusk. Mansfield had brought in a lighting system that was far too inadequate for game play. This historical game lasted only 20 minutes and there were only 10 plays. Both sides agreed to end at half-time with the score at 0-0. Though it may seem humorous today, for safety reasons, the game was declared ended in a 0-0 tie after several players had an unfortunate run-in with a light pole.

Mansfield and Wyoming Seminary are thus enshrined in football history as having played in the first night game ever in "college football." History and football buffs get together once a year to celebrate the game in what they call "Fabulous 1890's Weekend." This historic game is reenacted exactly as it occurred play by play just as the actual game is recorded in history. Fans who watch the game are sometimes known to correct players (actually actors) when they deviate from the original scripted plays. Now, that shows both a love of the game and a love of history.

Mansfield and Wyoming Seminary's game added additional fame to both schools when the 100th anniversary of the game just happened to occur on Monday, September 28, 1992. Monday Night Football celebrated "100 years of night football" with its regularly scheduled game between the Los Angeles Raiders and the Kansas City Chiefs at Arrowhead Stadium. The Chiefs won 27–7 in front of 77,486 fans. How about that?

More football history was recorded when Army played Navy in 1893. This was during the first season of LSU football. In this game, we have the first documented use of a football helmet by a player in a game. Joseph M. Reeves had been kicked in the head in a prior football game. He was warned by his doctor that he risked death if he continued to play football.

We all know how tough the Midshipmen and Black Nights (Cadets) are regardless of who they may be playing. Rather than end his football playing days prematurely, Reeves discussed his need with a shoemaker in Annapolis who crafted a leather helmet for the player to wear for the rest of the season.

Football conferences

Things were happening very quickly in the new sport of football. Organization and rules became the mantra for this fledgling sport. It was being defined while it was being played. Formal college football conferences were just around the corner. In fact, the Southeastern Conference and the Atlantic Coast Conference both got started in 1894.

The Southeastern Conference (SEC) was established on December 8 and 9, 1932, when the thirteen members of the Southern Conference located west and south of the Appalachian Mountains left to form their own conference.

Ten of the thirteen founding members have remained in the conference since its inception: The University of Alabama, Auburn University, the University of Florida, the University of Georgia, the University of Kentucky, Louisiana State University ("LSU"), the University of Mississippi ("Ole Miss"), Mississippi State University, the University of Tennessee, and Vanderbilt University.

Many, throughout the country see the SEC as a money-printing, championship-winning behemoth across college sports. It is home to 14 schools that compete in just about every sport across college athletics, it has its own television network and it inspires regional pride unrivaled across the nation.

The forward pass

None of Walter Camp's rules for American Football included the most innovative notion of them all – the forward pass. Many believe that the first forward pass in football occurred on October 26, 1895 in a game between Georgia and North Carolina. Out of desperation, the ball was thrown by the North Carolina back Joel Whitaker instead of having been punted. George Stephens, a teammate caught the ball.

Despite what most may think or surmise, it was Camp again when he was a player at Yale, who executed the first game-time forward pass for a touchdown. During the Yale-Princeton game, while Camp was being tackled, he threw a football forward to Yale's Oliver Thompson, who sprinted to a touchdown. The Princeton Tigers naturally protested and there appeared to be no precedent for a referee decision.

Like many things in football including a game-beginning coin-toss, the referee in this instance tossed a coin, and then he made his decision to allow the touchdown.

Hidden ball trick

Dome one-time tricks have not survived football. For example, on November 9, 1895 Auburn Coach John Heisman executed a hidden ball trick. Quarterback Reynolds Tichenor was able to gain Auburn's only touchdown in a 6 to 9 loss to Vanderbilt. This also was the first game in the south that was decided by a field goal.

The trick was simple but would be illegal today. When the ball was snapped, it went to a halfback. The play was closely masked and well screened. The halfback then thrust the ball under the back of the quarterback's (Tichenor) jersey. Then the halfback would crash into the line. After the play, Tichenor "simply trotted away to a touchdown."

The end of college football?

Football was never a game for the light of heart. You had to be tough physically and tough mentally to compete. Way back in 1906, for example complaints were many about the violence in American Football. It got so bad that universities on the West Coast, led by California and Stanford, replaced the sport with rugby union.

At the time, the future of American college football, a very popular sport enjoyed by fans nationwide was in doubt. The schools that eliminated football and replaced it with rugby union believed football would be gone and rugby union would eventually be adopted nationwide.

Soon other schools followed this travesty and made the switch. Eventually, due to the perception that West Coast football was an inferior game played by inferior men when compared to the rough and tumble East Coast, manhood prevailed in the West over the inclination to make the game mild.

The many tough East Coast and Midwest teams had shrugged off the loss of the few teams out West and they had continued to play American style football.

And, so the available pool of rugby union "football" teams to play remained small. The Western colleges therefore had to schedule games against local club teams and they reached out to rugby union powers in Australia, New Zealand, and especially, due to its proximity, Canada.

The famous Stanford and California game continued as rugby. To make it seem important. The winner was invited by the British Columbia Rugby Union to a tournament in Vancouver over the Christmas holidays. The winner of that tournament was rewarded with the Cooper Keith Trophy. Nobody in America cared. Eventually the West Coast came back to football.

Nonetheless the situation of injury and death in football persisted and though there was a lot of pushback, it came to a head in 1905 when there were 19 fatalities nationwide. President Theodore Roosevelt, a tough guy himself, is reported as having threatened to shut down the game nationwide if drastic changes were not made. Sports historians however, dispute that Roosevelt ever intervened.

What is certified, however, is that on October 9, 1905, the President held a meeting of football representatives from Harvard, Yale, and Princeton. The topic was eliminating and reducing injuries and the President according to the record, never threatened to ban football.

The fact is that Roosevelt lacked the authority to abolish football but more importantly, he was a big fan and wanted the game to continue. The little Roosevelts also loved the sport and were playing football at the college and secondary levels at the time.

Meanwhile, there were more rule changes such as the notion of reducing the number of scrimmage plays to earn a first down from four to three in an attempt to reduce injuries. The LA Times reported an increase in punts in an experimental game and thus considered the game much safer than regular play. Football lovers did not accept the new rule because it was not "conducive to the sport."

Because nobody wanted players injured or killed in a game, on December 28, 1905, 62 schools met in New York City to discuss major rule changes to make the game safer. From this meeting, the Intercollegiate Athletic Association of the United States, later named the National Collegiate Athletic Association (NCAA), was formed.

The forward pass is legalized

One rule change that was introduced in 1906 was devised to open up the game and thus reduce injury. This new rule introduced the legal forward pass. Though it was underutilized for years, this proved to be one of the most important rule changes in the establishment of the modern game.

Because of these 1905-1906 reforms, mass formation plays in which many players joined together became illegal when forward passes became legal. Bradbury Robinson, playing for visionary coach Eddie Cochems at St. Louis University, is recorded as throwing the first legal pass in a September 5, 1906, game against Carroll College at Waukesha.

Later changes were in the minutia category but they added discipline and safety to the game without destroying its rugged character. For example, in 1910, came the new requirement that at least seven offensive players be on the line of scrimmage at the time of the snap, that there be no pushing or pulling, and that interlocking interference (arms linked or hands on belts and uniforms) was not allowed. These changes accomplished their intended purpose of greatly reducing the potential for collision injuries.

As noted previously, great coaches emerged in the ranks who took advantage of these sweeping changes. Amos Alonzo Stagg, for example, introduced such innovations as the huddle, the tackling dummy, and the pre-snap shift. Other coaches, such as Pop Warner and Notre Dame's Knute Rockne, introduced new strategies that still remain part of the game.

Many other rules changes and coaching innovations came about before 1940. They all had a profound impact on the game, mostly in opening up the passing game, but also in making the game safer to play without diminishing its quality.

For example, in 1914, the first roughing-the-passer penalty was implemented. In 1918, the rules on eligible receivers were loosened to allow eligible players to catch the ball anywhere on the field. The previously more restrictive rules allowed passes only in certain areas of the field.

Scoring rules also changed which brought the scoring into the modern era. For example, field goals were lowered from five to three points in 1909 and touchdowns were raised from four to six points in 1912.

Star Players

Star players emerged in both the collegiate and professional ranks including Jim Thorpe, Red Grange, and Bronko Nagurski. There were also other stars. These three in particular were able to move from college to the fledgling NFL and they helped turn it into a successful league. Notable sportswriter Grantland Rice helped popularize the sport of football with his poetic descriptions of games and colorful nicknames for the game's biggest players, including Notre Dame's "Four Horsemen" backfield and Fordham University's linemen, known as the "Seven Blocks of Granite".

Jim Thorpe, Circa 1915

The Heisman

Jay Berwanger (above) was the 1st Heisman Winner. In 1935, New York City's Downtown Athletic Club awarded its first Heisman Trophy to University of Chicago halfback Jay Berwanger (left).

He was also the first ever NFL Draft pick in 1936. The trophy continues to this day to recognize the nation's "most outstanding" college football player. It has become one of the most coveted awards in all of American sports.

As professional football became a national television phenomenon, college football did as well. In the 1950s, Notre Dame, which had a large national following, formed its own network to broadcast its games, but by and large the sport still retained a mostly regional following.

New formations and play sets continued to be developed by innovative coaches and their staffs. Emory Bellard from the University of Texas, developed a three-back option style offense known as the wishbone. Bear Bryant of Alabama became a preacher of the wishbone.

The strategic opposite of the wishbone is called the spread offense. Some teams have managed to adapt with the times to keep winning consistently. In the rankings of the most victorious programs, Michigan, Texas, and Notre Dame for many years were ranked first, second, and third in total wins. Things have changed. Now, LSU nemesis Alabama is recognized in this list in front of Notre Dame, which at the time of this list, had just came off an unusual four-win season.

1	Michigan	935
2	Yale	890
3	Nebraska	889
4	Ohio State	888
5	Texas	891
6	Alabama	878
7	Notre Dame	874
8	Oklahoma	864
9	Harvard	860
10	Penn State	867

And so, that is as far as we will take it in this chapter about the early evolution of football. With so many conferences and sports associations as well as pro, college, high school, and mini sports, something tells me we have not yet seen our last rule change.

Chapter 6 LSU's Great Football Fields & Stadiums

Check the snake. Looks like my kind of fun. :

Tiger Stadium opened in 1924, and before that, the home field of LSU football was called State field, I think. In the waning moments of 1922 an alternate use for State Field was found in 1922. A current alum went through a box of 25 old photos and found one of State Field in a sort of pep rally called the Snake Dance.

Yes, the officials were outing on a Snake Dance on the State field at LSU. E.L. Stephan's, president of the Alumni Association, proposed that one game be attended by the alumni in a body to boost Tiger morale, many were dressed in pajamas and that sort of casual fun attires. Cute Grads turned out by the thousands for the 20th meeting with the Green Wave. It was called the first Homecoming celebration by the Reveille.

State Field had a big purpose for sure for the fledgling LSU Tigers football team. In 1893, when one away game was played at Tulane, State Field was not needed but it was nonetheless listed as the home field for the Tigers. That it was. It was the home stadium of the Louisiana State University Tigers football team prior to 1924. The field was built on the old downtown campus of LSU. No alums remember it because it has been gone for almost a hundred years. It was located east of the Pentagon Barracks and at the site of the current Louisiana State Capitol Building. To say it in less words, prior to 1924, LSU played its home football games at State Field, which was located on the old LSU campus in Downtown Baton Rouge.

Day 24 of Countdown to Kickoff for the under construction Tiger Stadium

It took almost 30 years to squeeze a new stadium out of LSU officials. When it finally came, it was a hum-dinger and would grow ten-fold over the next almost 100 years. In the above picture. The new stadium is under construction in 1924 and the photo reflects the fan anticipation for the opening of the Tigers' new DIGS.

So we celebrate the exact caption of this picture from back then:

Waiting for Countdown 'til Kickoff (Day 24): I

In 1924, LSU retired State Field and broke ground with Tiger Stadium, opening with a capacity of 12,000 seats. Now seating 102,321 Tiger faithful, the cathedral of college football is the 6th largest stadium in the NCAA and host to the greatest atmosphere in CFB!

Here is some LSU hype about its great world-famous stadium:

“It’s Saturday Night in Death Valley and here come your Fighting Tigers of LSU.” This is how every home game begins for the Louisiana State Tigers. The Bayou Bengals play ball in front of some of the most passionate and raucous fans in college football, over 102,000 each time they are at home.

What’s even more impressive is that on game day, Tiger Stadium transforms into one of the largest cities in Louisiana. Like many other places in the country, LSU football is more than sports; it’s a way of life. People in this part of the country are as passionate about their Tigers as any other fans in college football. It’s been called “the most feared road game in the country” and “Death Valley” for a reason.

Tiger Stadium was constructed in the early 1920s and opened on November 25, 1924 when LSU battled Tulane. The original stadium seated 24,000 fans, with grandstands on both sides of the gridiron. Six major expansions have been completed at the stadium over its nearly nine decades of existence.

Two additions were completed in the 1930s, the first was in 1931, when the capacity increased by 10,000. The second was completed in 1936, when the north endzone was enclosed increasing the seating capacity to 46,000.

The south endzone was enclosed in 1953 and the first of two upper decks was added in 1978 pushing the capacity to over 78,000. The 11,600 seat addition in 2000 allowed the Tigers to pack even more screaming fans into Tiger Stadium. Throughout the 2005 season, the Tigers continued to expand Tiger Stadium with the west side expansion. This $60 million expansion added 3,255 club seats, a new press box and upper deck on the west side of the stadium.

Completed by the 2006 season, this expansion increased the seating capacity of Tiger Stadium to 92,400. This addition allowed LSU to continue to average over 90,000 fans per game.

In February 2012, LSU announced plans to further expand Tiger Stadium by the 2014 season. This expansion project connects the existing upper decks on the south side of the stadium, adding a lower level containing 4,000 club seats, two levels of luxury suites and a 1,500 seat upper deck increasing the seating capacity to over 102,000.

It is now the 6th largest stadium in the country and Tiger Stadium remains one of the most exciting places to watch a football game in the country. This is my personal appeal to Ed Argeron for four front row seats for me and my family. I'll bring a bunch of books with me—promise...

The best part about Tiger Stadium is not the raucous crowds that it attracts every game, but the mammoth structure itself. The university has continued to add more and more seating, including a 4,000-seat club level and two levels of suites in 2014. The stadium has three different JumboTrons, all relative in size. Also titled "Death Valley," Tiger Stadium is one of the craziest and most exciting places to watch a game, and it's hard to beat the atmosphere when Alabama comes to town.

Not every university is so fortunate

When you finish reading this whole book, you will know that The LSU Fighting Tigers Football Team represents the University of Louisiana State and the team has competed in football since 1892. Although the LSU campus is physically located in Baton Rouge Louisiana, through the history of the program, as you now know State Field helped pave the way for almost thirty years of great football for the Tigers. This stadium plus Tiger stadium, counting 1893 in a ready-status, played host to the fine Louisiana football teams during LSU football's more than 125 seasons.

Few universities have had such a plethora of stadiums to choose from in their history. Technically each renovation brought forth a new Tiger Stadium but there was no name change as LSU is the Tigers. Today, the home stadium is a huge and wonderful stadium. It was once a little State field before the campus made it into a big stadium in 1924. Amen!

Go Tigers!

1894 LSU's 2nd Football Season Coach Albert Simmonds

Before the 2019 season at 15-0, LSU had already notched six unblemished seasons in its history. The Tigers first went undefeated and untied in 1895 under head coach A. P. Simmons with a 3-0 record, but the first truly great LSU team is considered to be the 1908 squad led by one of the most legendary players to wear the Purple and Gold--Doc Fenton. That 1908 team, coached by Edgar R. Wingard, soared through a 10-game schedule without a loss or tie as Fenton scored an incredible 125 points on the year. It was 50 years before LSU would post another perfect season, winning the national championship in 1958 with an 11-0 mark. It took over 60 years for the next in 2019. Let's hope we don't have a seventy-year wait for the next.

As noted in Chapter 4, LSU's football program began in 1893 with a one-game losing season. The loss was against Tulane, a Louisiana University that continued as an LSU rival over the years. The team was coached by Dr. Charles E. Coates who stepped down after the one-game season ended. Albert Simmonds took over the coaching for LSU in 1894.

Special Treat—Top Players—in this Book

When it comes to the top college football programs in America, LSU has to be near the top of that list.

With four National Championships, 14 conference titles and 27 football All-Americans to come through the university, the LSU football program has been loaded with talent throughout its rich history.

Of course, we all know about names such as Morris Claiborne, Patrick Peterson and Dwayne Bowe, but what about the guys who established this school as a national powerhouse back in the mid-1900s? Do any of these greats compare to the LSU players of today?

You will find sprinkled throughout this book in the proper seasons, short biographies of some of the best players to ever don an LSU football uniform. Watch for them with the Heading Top LSU Players. It will be your chance to read about some of the best players in LSU football history. Enjoy!

1894 LSU Football Season Albert Simmonds Coach # 2

His full name was Albert Price Simmonds. His duration on earth was similar to the length of his name (October 29, 1875 – November 13, 1953). He is known as an American football coach. He served as the head coach at LSU aka (Louisiana State University) for two seasons from 1894 to 1895. Most coaches at LSU at the time put in a year or a few at most. His second and third seasons in the LSU Tigers football program's existence, saw him compiling a record of 5–1.

Coach Simmonds was a graduate of Yale University. He was born in Baltimore, Maryland in 1875 and later was an insurance agent in New York City. In 1951, at the age of 76, Simmonds was working for the Hygienic Phone Service. He died on November 13, 1953.

His head coaching record is as follows

1894	LSU	2-1 record
1895	LSU	3-0 record
Total	LSU	5-1 record

<< Coach Simmonds

The 1894 LSU Purple & White football team represented the Louisiana State University in the 1894 college football season. The team was known as the LSU Fighting Tigers but in recent years, the adjective, Fighting is not always used.

Charles Coates, who was the main man in LSU's initial season for its one game, stepped down and the Tigers found a new coach, Albert Simmonds, for their three-game 1894 season. This was a winning season, though short. It was the year in which LSU saw its first victory, a shutout over the Natchez Athletic Club.

In this game, the LSU football captain, Samuel Marmaduke Dinwiddie Clark, became the first LSU player to score a TD in a game against Natchez A.C. This year's first football game was played on the LSU campus on December 3, 1894, against Mississippi. LSU's player head coach Albert Simmons had the honors of scoring only touchdown in that game.

Simmons was wearing his Yale jersey in an old 1895 photo at LSU. This was also the first year of football play for William S. Slaughter who put in four additional years after 1894.. He also lettered for LSU in 1895, 1896, 1897, and 1898). Slaughter was LSU's first five-time football letterman.

Games of the 1894 Season

In the season opener on Nov 30 at the Natchez Athletic Club in Natchez, MS. LSU shut-out Natchez W (26–0) for their first win. On Dec 3, Ole Miss defeated the Tigers at home in the State Field, Baton Rouge, LA. L (6-26). Then, in the season finale, on Dec 21, at home against Centenary, the LSU Tigers shut out the visitors, and assured their first winning season at home at State Field in Baton Rouge, LA. W (30-0) (rivalry)

Since this is such an early LSU team, I would like to present you with a picture of the team's roster.

1895 LSU Football Season Albert Simmonds Coach # 2

The 1895 LSU Purple & White football team represented the Louisiana State University in the 1895 college football season. The team enjoyed LSU's first undefeated season at 3 wins, 0 losses. It was LSU's third season and coach Albert Simmons second and last year at LSU.

This was the first unbeaten season in LSU football history. The season also featured the first home victory in LSU history with a win over Tulane in front of 1,500 spectators.

An account from back in that period reads "The Tulane football team, with its band of shouters and several crippled players, returned to the city yesterday morning wearing dejected faces, as a result of the defeat administered at Baton Rough Saturday. LSU joined the Southern Intercollegiate Athletic Association in 1895. It began SIAA conference games in 1896.

Games of the 1895 Season

In the season opener on Oct 26 at home in State Field, the Fighting Tigers defeated Tulane W (8-4) before 1,500. On Nov 2, at Centenary in Jackson, LA, the Tigers triumphed again W (16-6). Then, on Nov 18, in the season finale, in the first game ever played against Alabama at home in State Field, LSU defeated the Crimson White W (12-6) giving the team its first undefeated season.

1896 LSU Tigers

1896 LSU Football Season Allen Jeardeau Coach # 3

Allen Wilson Jeardeau whose time on earth included April 1, 1866 – April 10, 1900, was an American athlete who later became an effective coach.

They called the football game American football back then and baseball was baseball. He was good at both. Jeardeau served as the head football coach at the Platteville Normal School—now the University of Wisconsin–Platteville—in 1895 and 1898 and at Louisiana State University (LSU) from 1896 to 1897. In 1896, his first season with the LSU Tigers, Jeardeau led the team to a fine 6–0 record and a Southern Intercollegiate Athletic Association (SIAA) championship.

He was also the head coach of the LSU Tigers baseball team in 1898. Jeardeau was a graduate of the Platteville Normal School and a student at Harvard University. He died of pneumonia, which was not always a treatable disease in his time on April 10, 1900, at his home near Platteville, Wisconsin. What a loss for LSU, for his family, and for America.

The LSU Fighting Tigers football team represented the LSU Tigers of Louisiana State University during the 1896 Southern Intercollegiate Athletic Association football season. This was LSU's fourth season overall and its first season playing as a member of the Southern Intercollegiate Athletic Association (SIAA). It was coach Allen Jeardeau's first of two seasons at LSU.

Led by coach Jeardeau, the Tigers were undefeated and untied with a 6-0 record. They won the SIAA as co-champions. It was the team's second undefeated season in football. The 1896 team was also recognized as the first LSU team to use the nickname "Tigers".

Games of the 1896 Season

In the season opener on Oct 10 at home in State Field, the Fighting Tigers pounded Centenary W (46-0). On Oct 24, at Tulane in New Orleans, in the Battle for the Rag, LSU beat the Green Wave W (6-0) On Nov 13, c Ole Miss in Vicksburg, MS, the Tigers prevailed W

On Nov 15, at home in State Field, the Tigers triumphed again W (14-0) v Texas. 6-6). Then, on Nov 20, at home LSU shellacked Mississippi A&M W (52-0). Then, in the season finale, on Nov 28, at the Southern Athletic Club in Lew Orleans LA, the Tigers prevailed W (6-0) giving LSU its second undefeated season with its most games played in a season to date.

1897 LSU Football Season Allen Jeardeau Coach # 3

The LSU Fighting Tigers football team represented the LSU Tigers of Louisiana State University during the 1897 Southern Intercollegiate Athletic Association football season. This was LSU's fifth season overall and its second season playing as a member of the Southern Intercollegiate Athletic Association (SIAA). It was coach Allen Jeardeau's second of two seasons at LSU.

Led by coach Jeardeau, the Tigers had a 1-1 record in their two games played this season. The season was cut short due to a yellow fever outbreak throughout the South which caused the postponement of LSU's classes starting, and the football season was cut back to only two games. No conference games were played.

Games of the 1997 season

In the season opener on Dec 20, the Tigers defeated the Montgomery Athletic Club at home in State Field, Baton Rouge, LA. W (28-6). Then, squeezing in a game on January 8 against Cincinnati, the LSU Tigers were defeated L (0-26) at home in State Field.

1898 LSU Football Season Edmond Chavanne Coach # 4

Coach Chavanne in LSU Cadet Uniform

Edmond Auguste M. Chavanne was an Early LSU coach whose birth was in August 6, 1877 and who died in 1941. Chavanne played American football and later used his playing talents to become a head coach in the early days of college football.

He served as the head coach at Louisiana State Tigers football for two seasons, 1898 and 1900. His record was 3–2. In between, he stepped down and the team was coached by John P. Gregg, who coached the team in 1899.

Chavanne was the first LSU football coach to have gotten his pigskin from the university. He is also the only player-coach in LSU football history. The 1898 season was delayed due to the yellow fever outbreak throughout the South. Those of us in 2020 living through the US pandemic know too well how disruptive to life and limb such diseases can be.

Prior to the season starting, LSU's previous football coach, Allen Jeardeau, had departed the school and the coaching position. Since the school had not made any provision to name a replacement coach, the job was left to Chavanne, the team's captain. LSU was not about to abandon football. Chavanne had graduated from LSU in 1898. He had previously played on the school's football team from 1896-1898. He was named as Commandant of Cadets at LSU in 1899, and football coach in 1900.¹

The LSU Fighting Tigers football team represented the LSU Tigers of Louisiana State University during the 1898 Southern Intercollegiate Athletic Association football season. This was LSU's sixth season overall and its third season playing as a member of the Southern Intercollegiate Athletic Association (SIAA). It was coach Edmond Chavanne's first of this one season tour. Chavanne would be back again in 1900.

Led by coach Chavanne, the Tigers had a 1-0 record in their one game season. They were 1-0 also in the SIAA. Yellow fever again played havoc with the football schedule. It was similar to the outbreak in 1897 and it caused LSU to play only one game. By the time LSU was able to play this one game season, coach Jeardeau had left the school as head football coach, and LSU had made no other provision to replace him.

Edmond Chavanne then inherited the coaching job because he was the team's captain. This marked the only time a player was coach in LSU football history. 1898 marked the final year of play for William S. Slaughter, LSU's first five time football letterman. Ironically, Slaughter played about a season's worth of games in his five years on the varsity.

The only game of the season was played on December 14, 1898 against Tulane at home in State Field in Baton Rouge, LA. The Tigers shut out Tulane W (37-0).

1899 LSU Football Season John P. Gregg Coach # 5

John P. Gregg coached the LSU football team to a 2-4 record in 1899, his only season as a college coach. He played his college football at Wisconsin before arriving in Baton Rouge. Gregg passed away in 1963 at the age of 86.

<< Coach John Gregg

The LSU Fighting Tigers football team represented the LSU Tigers of Louisiana State University during the 1899 Southern Intercollegiate Athletic Association football season. This was LSU's seventh season overall and its fourth season playing as a member of the Southern Intercollegiate Athletic Association (SIAA). It was coach John P. Gregg's first and only season at LSU.

Led by coach Gregg, the Tigers had their first losing season since 1893. They sported a 1-4 record in their five-game season. They were 1-2 also in the SIAA. They came in 12th place in the conference.

This was a poor showing year for LSU as coach John Gregg's team scored its only win in an exhibition game against a high school team (which LSU does not officially record as a win) and against rival, Tulane. Noteworthy of course is that this was the first year of play for LSU's second five-year letterman, John J. Coleman (1899, 1900, 1901, 1902, 1903).

Games of the season

On Nov 3 in the season opener, LSU was knocked off by Ole Miss at Meridian, MS (new rivalry) L(0-11). On Nov 10 at Lake Charles H.S. in Lake Charles, LA, the Tigers got a win W (48-0). Then on Nov 13, the Tigers were beaten by a tough Sewanee team at home in State Field, Baton Rouge, LA L (0-34). Then on Nov 30 at Texas' Varsity Athletic Field in Austin, TX, the Texans prevailed L (0-29). On Dec 2, LSU lost at Texas A&M in College Station, TX L (L 0-52). In the season finale on Dec 8, the Tigers defeated Tulane's Green Wave in State Field, Baton Rouge, LA in the Battle for the Rag, W (38-0)

1900 LSU Football Season Edmond Chayanne Coach # 4 (again)

The LSU Fighting Tigers football team represented the LSU Tigers of Louisiana State University during the 1900 Southern Intercollegiate Athletic Association football season. This was LSU's eighth season overall and its fifth season playing as a member of the Southern Intercollegiate Athletic Association (SIAA). They rehired coach Edmond Chayanne for this season. It was coach Edmond Chayanne's second season and last at LSU.

Led by coach Chayanne, the Tigers had their first break-even season. They sported a 2-2 record in their four-game season. They were 0-1 in the SIAA. They played Millsap twice this year.

Games of the 1900 Season

In the season opener on Nov 11, they beat Millsaps at home in the State Field in Baton Rouge, LA W (70-0). Then, on Nov 17 at Tulane in New Orleans, LA (Battle for the Rag), the LSU Tigers lost in a shutout L (0-29). On November 30, in the second game with Millsap played in Jackson Ms. The Tigers lost in a nail-biter L (5-6). In the Season Finale, on Dec 5, LSU beat a team comprised of LSU Alumni at State Field in Baton Rouge, LA W (10-0)

1901 LSU Football Season W. S. Borland Coach # 6

The LSU Fighting Tigers football team represented the LSU Tigers of Louisiana State University during the 1901 Southern Intercollegiate Athletic Association football season. This was LSU's ninth season overall and its sixth season playing as a member of the Southern Intercollegiate Athletic Association (SIAA). They hired coach W.S. Borland upon coach Chayanne's departure. And, he stayed three years which was the longest at the time.

<<< Coach Borland

Led by coach Borland, the Tigers had a nice 5-1 season. leading the team to a successful 5–1 season. They received a gift from Tulane this year when the Green Wave forfeited a game on November 16 due to a ruling from the SIAA. A game v rival Tulane was very important and cheating was not recommended as a winning strategy.

The 1901 edition of the Battle for the Flag against LSU was originally recorded as 22-0 Tulane victory but LSU found a few shenanigans that they protested. Upon examination, the SIAA petition by LSU was successful and the game went down as a 0-11 loss for Tulane.

What happened? After the game, LSU protested to the Southern Intercollegiate Athletic Association, alleging that Tulane had used a professional player during the game. Several months later, the SIAA ruled the game an 11-0 forfeit in favor of LSU. Never look a gift-horse in the mouth. I still do not know who the mysterious professional player was.

Games of the 1901 Season

In the season opener on October 28 at Louisiana Tech in Ruston, LA, LSU prevailed with a monstrous win W (57–0). Then, on Nov 8, LSU thumped Ole Miss at home in State Field, Baton Rouge, LA W (46–0). Then, on Nov 16 at Tulane in New Orleans, LA in an appealed game, LSU prevailed in its appeal and got credit for the win W (11–0) before 5,000.

On Nov 20 Auburn pounded LSU at home at State Field, Baton Rouge, LA (L (0–28). On Nov 28 LSU defeated the New Orleans YMCA at State Field, Baton Rouge, LA W (38–0) Wrapping up the

1901 season we would find LSU on the winning side on Dec 5 defeating Arkansas at home in State Field, Baton Rouge, LA W (15–0)

1902 LSU Football Season W. S. Borland Coach # 6

The LSU Fighting Tigers football team represented the LSU Tigers of Louisiana State University during the 1902 Southern Intercollegiate Athletic Association football season. This was LSU's tenth season overall and its seventh season playing as a member of the Southern Intercollegiate Athletic Association (SIAA). This was coach Borland's second season of three.

Led by coach Borland, the Tigers had a nice 6-1 season. leading the team to a successful 6–1 season. Their SIAA record was 5-1. The seven-game 1902 season was the longest for the Tigers since their first game in 1893 and also featured the most games on the road: five games played away and only two in Baton Rouge. Overall, it was a good year with a tie for second place in the SIAA.

Games of the Season

In the season opener on October 16 at Southwestern Louisiana in Lafayette, LA. LSU prevailed W (42–0). Then, on Oct 18 at Texas in San Antonio, LSU won the game in a close match W (5–0). Auburn came in to State Field on Oct 27 and left after being defeated W(5-0) in Baton Rouge, LA. On Nov 8, LSU beat Ole Miss in New Orleans, LA W (6–0).

Then, on Nov 17, the Tigers lost to a tough Vanderbilt team at home in State Field, Baton Rouge, LA L (7–25). Then on Nov 27 at Mississippi A&M in a game played in Starkville, MS, LSU won the contest W (6–0). Then, in what would soon become the rivalry of rivalry games, on Nov 29 at Alabama's "The Quad" in Tuscaloosa, AL, the LSU Tigers whipped the Crimson White W (11–0).

1903 LSU Football Season W. S. Borland Coach # 6

The LSU Fighting Tigers football team represented the LSU Tigers of Louisiana State University during the 1903 Southern Intercollegiate Athletic Association football season. This was LSU's eleventh season overall and its eighth season playing as a member of the Southern Intercollegiate Athletic Association (SIAA). This was coach Borland's third season of three.

Led by coach Borland, the Tigers had a not so great 4-5 season. Their SIAA record was 0-5. Something bad had surely happened. 1903 was W. S. Borland's third and final season as LSU head coach as he finished 4-5 for the season (15-7 in all three years as head coach).

The 1903 season broke the previous season's record for most games played (seven) with nine games. The Tigers played four home games; three in Baton Rouge and one in New Orleans, but were on the road the rest of the season. For the 1903 season, point values were different from those used in modern games. In 1903 a touchdown was worth five points, for example, and a field goal was also worth five points. A conversion (PAT) was worth one point. It is tough to explain the dismal season for coach Borland but LSU expected more and Borland was gone at the beginning of the next year.

The home and season opener for LSU was on October 14 in a game in which the LSU team beat the LSU Alumni W (16-0) at State Field. On Oct 24, LSU beat the Eagles-New Orleans at home W (33-0). Then, on Oct 30 at Louisiana Tech in Ruston, Louisiana The Tigers prevailed W (16-0)/ The next day Oct 31, the team traveled to Shreveport LA to play the Shreveport Athletic Club. They won the game in a shutout by a TD, W (5-0).

When LSU started to play v SIAA teams, their season fell apart. For example on Nov 7, at Mississippi A&M at the Starkville Fairgrounds in Starkville, Mississippi, the loss was L (0-11). Then, on Nov 9 v Alabama in The Quad / Tuscaloosa, Alabama, the loss was L (0-18). Then, on Nov 11 at Auburn's Tigers beat LSU's Tigers L (0-12), Then, on Nov 16 at home, Cumberland pounded the Tigers L (0-41). In the season finale, on Nov 21, Ole Miss beat LSU 1 (0-11) in New Orleans.

1904 LSU Football Season Dan A. Killian Coach # 7

Dan Arnold Killian was his long name. His longevity on earth has been measured in this period (February 5, 1880 – January 15, 1953). For LSU, he was Coach Killian. He was a football and baseball coach. At the time, football was played by very evolving rules of American Football. Killian served as the head football coach at Louisiana State University (LSU) from 1904 to 1906, compiling a record of 8–6–2. For early football teams, this was a fine record..

An athlete in his genes, the football coach was also the head coach of the LSU baseball team from 1905 to 1906. He was a good coach with a mark of 14–9). Trying to make a buck in sports, LSU also paid Killian to be the head coach of the LSU Tigers track and field team from 1905 to 1906. For an big bonus, to help him live on his salaries, Killian also served as athletic director.

This LSU coach was a graduate of the University of Michigan, where he lettered as a shortstop in baseball in 1902. Everybody knows that shortstops are the best athletes on a baseball team. Even catchers like me knew that. He was a good thrower from SS to 1st which helped him also play the position of QB on the football team, which he did, but he apparently was a better short stop than QB as he did not qualify for a letter.[7]

In 1906 he left coaching "to do sporting work for a newspaper" in Chicago. His life continued through the normal episodes and after time passed, he moved to and died in Lansing, Michigan in 1953.[8]

<<< Coach Killian

The LSU Fighting Tigers football team represented the LSU Tigers of Louisiana State University during the 1905 Southern Intercollegiate Athletic Association football season. This was LSU's twelfth season overall and its ninth season playing as a member of the Southern Intercollegiate Athletic Association (SIAA). This was coach Killian's first season of three.

Led by coach Killian, the Tigers had a not so great 3-4 season. Their SIAA record was 1-2. The team finished SIAA play in 11th place.

Games of the 1904 Season

In the season and home opener on Oct 16, LSU defeated Louisiana Tech in State Field, Baton Rouge, LA W (17-0). On Oct 22 at Shreveport AC in Shreveport, LA, LSU lost L (0-16). On Oct 23 at Louisiana Tech in Ruston, LA, Tech defeated LSU L (0-6)

Then on Nov 5, LSU beat Ole Miss at home in State Field, Baton Rouge, LA W (5-0). Then, on Nov 10, LSU beat Nashville Medical at home in State Field, Baton Rouge, LA W (16-0). On Nov 19 at Tulane, New Orleans, LA in the Battle for the Rag, the Green Wave won L (0-5). On Dec 1, in the season finale, at home at State Field, Baton Rouge, LA Alabama beat LSU L (0-11)

1905 LSU Football Season Dan A. Killian Coach # 7

The LSU Fighting Tigers football team represented the LSU Tigers of Louisiana State University during the 1905 Southern Intercollegiate Athletic Association football season. This was LSU's thirteenth season overall and its tenth season playing as a member of the Southern Intercollegiate Athletic Association (SIAA). This was coach Killian's second season of three.

Led by coach Killian, the Tigers had an undefeated season at 3-0. Their SIAA record was 2-0. The team finished SIAA play in 12th place.

Games of the 1905 Season

In the home and season opener on November 18, 1905, LSU defeated Louisiana Tech at home in State Field, Baton Rouge, LA W (16-0). On Nov 25 at Tulane in New Orleans, LA in the Battle for the Rag, LSU beat the Green Wave W (5-0). Then in the season finale on Dec 1, LSU beat Mississippi A&M at home in State Field, Baton Rouge, LA W (15-0)

1906 LSU Football Season Dan A. Killian Coach # 7

The LSU Fighting Tigers football team represented the LSU Tigers of Louisiana State University during the 1906 Southern Intercollegiate Athletic Association football season. This was LSU's fourteenth season overall and its eleventh season playing as a member of the Southern Intercollegiate Athletic Association (SIAA). This was coach Killian's third season of three.

Led by coach Killian, the Tigers had an OK season at 2-2-2. Their SIAA record was 0-2. The team finished SIAA play in 3rd place.

Games of the 1906 Season

In the home and season opener on Oct 10. LSU defeated Monroe AC at State Field in Baton Rouge, LA W (5-0). On Oct 20, Ole Miss beat LSO at home in State Field, Baton Rouge, LA (rivalry) L (0-9). On October 27 LSU tied Mississippi A&M in Columbus, MS T (0-0) . Then, on Nov 9, LSU defeated Louisiana Tech at home in State Field, Baton Rouge, LA W (17-0).

On Nov 19, Texas A&M beat LSU at home in State Field, Baton Rouge, LA L (12-21). In the season finale on Nov 29, Arkansas tied LUS at home in State Field, Baton Rouge, LA T (0-0)

1907 LSU Football Season Edgar Wingard Coach # 8

<<< Coach Wingard

LSU fired coach Dan Killian after a dismal 1906 season. It's not that the team was terrible, LSU was a respectable 2-2-2, but the style of play was dreadful. Still trapped in the thrall of the flying wedge which had killed 20 people in 1905, LSU won by scores of 5-0 and 17-0 and the two ties? Both scoreless draws.

Change came in the form of Edgar Wingard, a "notorious hell raiser", who quickly installed a fast-paced offense which relied on deception, speed, and the newly invented forward pass. He had his charges play soccer in practice to learn footwork and agility. But for all of his forward-thinking ingenuity as a strategist, LSU truly hired Wingard for his skill as a recruiter.

Wingard immediately went to work on recruiting his fellow Pennsylvanian, Doc Fenton. In 1904, Fenton starred on the rugby team of St. Michael's College in Canada. He returned to Pennsylvania in 1906 to play football at Mansfield State Normal School. Fenton was eyeing a move South and had been in contact with Mississippi A&M coach Fred Furman.

Wingard made up for lost time, bringing Doc on a recruiting trip to Baton Rouge, sealing the deal with the promise of nickel beers and a reminder of Starkville's blue laws. That was enough for Fenton, who signed with LSU and immediately transformed the team.

Furman would take issue with Wingard's recruiting tactics and fumed about possible payments made to Fenton. However, Fenton kept all of his letters from Furman, which detailed the promises he made for Fenton to attend A&M. The matter was quickly dropped.

The Bacardi Bowl

A team that had scored just 34 points in six games in 1906 scored 28 points in its season opener in 1907. After some midseason struggles, the Tigers finished up their campaign with a 48-0 blowout win over Baylor and an invitation to play the University of Havana in the Bacardi Bowl, becoming the first American college team to play on foreign soil. It was a bold trip, given that nerves in Cuba were still raw over the Spanish-American War.

Fearing the game would be a financial disaster, the promoter tried to back out of the game, but the Havana locals ensured the game would be played. Speculators sold tickets for as high as $10, and nearly 10,000 fans, including Cuban high society and local American servicemen, witnessed Fenton and LSU whip the hometown team 56-0.

Two Seasons: 1908 and Next Year

Only one player graduated from the 1907 team, and Wingard replaced the loss by recruiting the Smith brothers of Tulane protest fame back into the fold. Wingard grabbed another player out of Pennsylvania, Mike Lally, and then moved his star, Doc Fenton, to quarterback so he could handle the ball on nearly every play. The roster moves worked.

LSU became a point-a-minute team. LSU outscored its opponents 442 to 11 on the season. That is not a misprint. Mike Lally scored 14 touchdowns and 81 points. Not to be outdone, Doc Fenton scored 13 touchdowns, 6 field goals, and 125 points. By modern scoring rules, Doc Fenton would have scored 144 points. The National Football Foundation recognized Fenton as the retroactive Heisman winner.

Going back to that Vaselined Redhead nickname, this is because Wingard soaked Fenton's shirt in a mild acid solution before each game, causing the fabric to weaken and tear when defenders tried to grab a hold of him. Wingard essentially invented the tear-away jersey a half century before its time.

On Halloween, LSU traveled to Drill Field to play SIAA preseason favorites Auburn. Trailing 5-0 in the first half, Auburn blocked an LSU punt, recovered by Doc Fenton in the end zone. A fan then hit Fenton over the head with his cane, knocking Fenton unconscious before he could get out of the end zone. It would be Auburn's only points of the game, and LSU held on for 10-2 win without the Wingard was a good coach for sure.

The LSU Fighting Tigers football team represented the LSU Tigers of Louisiana State University during the 1906 Southern Intercollegiate Athletic Association football season. This was LSU's fifteenth season overall and its twelfth season playing as a member of the Southern Intercollegiate Athletic Association (SIAA). This was coach Wingard's first season of two.

Led by coach Wingard, the Tigers had an OK season at 7-3. Their SIAA record was 3-1. The team finished SIAA play in 7th place. It was also the first year at LSU for star player, Doc Fenton.

Games of the 1907 Season

In the season opener on October 19, 1907, at Texas's Clark Field in Austin, LSU was defeated by the Longhorns L (5-12). On Oct 21 at Texas A&M in College Station, TX, the Aggies defeated LSU L (5-11). On Oct. LSU shellacked Howard (AL) at home in State Field, Baton Rouge, LA W (57-0). Then, on Nov 6, at home, LSU beat Arkansas at State Field, Baton Rouge, LA W (17-12)

At home on Nov 9, LSU beat Mississippi A&M in State Field, Baton Rouge, LA W (23-11). At Ole Miss on Nov 16, in Oxford, MS, LSU shut out the Rebels W (23-0). 1908 LSU Football Season Edgar Wingard Coach # 8

The LSU Fighting Tigers football team represented the LSU Tigers of Louisiana State University during the 1908 Southern Intercollegiate Athletic Association football season. This was LSU's sixteenth season overall and its thirteenth season playing as a member of the Southern Intercollegiate Athletic Association (SIAA). This was coach Wingard's last season of two.

Led by coach Wingard, the Tigers had a fine season at 10-0. Their SIAA record was 2-0. The team finished SIAA play tied for 1st place. The team had a fine year all around, outscoring its opponents 442 to 11

There were issues this year despite the great record. For example, Doc Fenton, who was a triple threat quarterback led the nation in points scored. The Tigers were retro-picked as co-national champion by the National Championship Foundation, and the NCAA recognizes LSU as national champion for that season along with Penn. However, LSU for its own reasons, LSU chooses not to officially recognize this season as a national championship season.

Additionally, the season was clouded by accusations of professionalism by Grantland Rice and rival school Tulane. Were pros playing for LSU? The SIAA conducted an investigation that cleared LSU of any wrongdoing. Unfortunately, because many publications voted for the SIAA champion prior to the conclusion of the investigation, they did not recognize LSU's title. What a shame.

Games of the 1908 Season

In the home and season opener at State Field in Baton Rouge, LA on October 3, 1908, LSU shellacked the Young Men's Gymnastic Club-New Orleans W (41-0). 1916 LSU Football Season E. T. MacDonnell Coach # 12
Irving Pray & Dana Bible also coached LSU this year

Dana X. Bible was a sharp, scripture-quoting son of a Latin and Greek scholar. His unspectacular coaching techniques brought solid, fundamental football to the Southwest. At Mississippi College (1913-1915), LSU (1916), Texas A&M (1917, 1919-28), Nebraska (1926-36), Texas (1937-46) -33 years in all- Bible's teams rolled to a 198-72-23 record. All told, Bible squads won 14 conference championships. Bible frowned on fancy football. His idea of living dangerously was a fake-and-run punt formation on third down. LSU could have effectively deployed Bible in its winning ways over the years.
<<< Dana X. Bible

In his book, CHAMPIONSHIP FOOTBALL, Bible outlined the importance of scouting an opponent. He required each of his scouts to answer 42 pages of mimeographed questions on each game, and fill out another eight pages with comments and diagrams. Bible was boss at all times, running his clubs in a logical, well-planned manner. Bible began his career as a prep coach in Tennessee, and diligently studied the outstanding gridiron mentors of his time. In 11 years at Texas A&M, Bible did not have a losing season. At Nebraska, he lost only three games in eight seasons of conference competition. At Texas, Bible went 55-13-2 in his last seven years.

The LSU Fighting Tigers football team represented the LSU Tigers of Louisiana State University during the 1916 Southern Intercollegiate Athletic Association football season. This was LSU's twenty-fourth season overall and its twenty-first season playing as a member of the Southern Intercollegiate Athletic Association (SIAA). This was coach MacDonnell's third season of three. Mac had some help coaching this year from Irving Pray and Dana Bible

Led by coach MacDonnell at the beginning of the season, the Tigers had a fine overall season at 7-1-2. Their SIAA record was 2-1-1. The team finished SIAA play in 7th place.

Games of the 1916 Season

The 1916 LSU season opener was played September 30, 1916 v Southwestern Louisiana in Lafayette, LA. The Tigers prevailed W (24-0). Then, on Oct 7, LSU skunked Jefferson (MS) W (59-0) in a home game at State Field, Baton Rouge, LA. Moving along with the season, on Oct 14 Texas A&M did not have enough and were beaten by LSU in Galveston, TX W (13-0). On Oct 21, LSU pounded Mississippi College at the home field in State Field, Baton Rouge, LA W (50-7). The Indian team was tough to beat and LSU could not do it this year on Oct 28 vs. Sewanee in New Orleans, LA L (0-7)

On Nov 5 LSU defeated Arkansas away at the Fair Grounds, Shreveport, LA W 17-7. On Nov 15 at Mississippi A&M, LSU prevailed at the New Athletic Field, Starkville, MS W (13-3) On November 19 LSU blaster Ole Miss at home in the State Field, Baton Rouge, LA W (41-0). The LSU Fighting Tigers football team represented the LSU Tigers of Louisiana State University during the 1917 Southern Intercollegiate Athletic Association football season. This was LSU's twenty-fifth season overall and its twenty-second season playing as a member of the Southern Intercollegiate Athletic Association (SIAA). This was coach Sutton's first and last season at LSU.

Led by coach Sutton, the Tigers had a so-so season at 3-5. Their SIAA record was 1-3. The team finished SIAA play in 9th place. LSU had the next year off due to WW I so there was no difficulty in finding a new coach after the poor showing of Coach Wayne Sutton.

Games of the 1917 Season

In the season and home opener of the 1917 season, on Oct 6, LSU defeated Southwestern Louisiana at home in State Field, Baton Rouge, LA W (20-6). Then at Ole Miss on Oct 13, in Hemingway Stadium, Oxford, MS. LSU ripped Ole Miss a new one or so they say, W (52-7). On Oct 20, a tough Tennessee Sewanee team playing in New Orleans, LA, beat LSU L (0-3) in a nail-biter. Then, on Oct 27 Texas A&M smashed LSU in San Antonio, TX L (0-27). The season continued

On Nov 3, Arkansas beat the Tigers at the Fair Grounds in Shreveport, LA, L (0-14). Then, on Nov 10. LSU knocked off a scrappy Mississippi College crew at home in State Field, Baton Rouge, LA W (34-0). On Nov 17 a familiar name for LSU, Mississippi A&M came to a Tigers home game at the State Field in Baton Rouge, LA, and beat LSU L (0-9). In the typical last game of the season, the finale, as it is called, in the Battle for the Rag (Flag) on Nov 29 Tulane won the flag at State Field in Baton Rouge, LA L (6-28). And thus came a losing season for the LSU Tigers.

1918 LSU Football Season WW I – No team; No coach

One hundred years ago, LSU football players hung up their cleats for a greater cause. Many students and faculty of the Ole War Schule left the campus to serve in World War I, continuing the school's military tradition and canceling the 1918 gridiron season.

In honor of those who did not return, 30 trees were planted in the Memorial Oak Grove with one additional tree dedicated to “The Unknown” missing in action.

To commemorate the century mark of the Silent Season of 1918, LSU would emerge 100 years later in 2018 on Saturday, Oct. 20, from the Tiger Stadium chute in specially designed uniforms that saluted the past and pay homage to heroes. Bravo LSU

1923 Football Season Mike Donahue Coach # 17

<<Michael Joseph "Iron Mike" Donahue (June 14, 1876 – December 11, 1960) was an American football player, coach of football, basketball, baseball, tennis, track, soccer, and golf, and a college athletics administrator. He served as the head football coach at Auburn University (1904–1906, 1908–1922), at Louisiana State University (1923–1927), and at Spring Hill College (1934).

In 18 seasons coaching football at Auburn, Donahue amassed a record of 106–35–5 and had three squads go undefeated with four more suffering only one loss. His .743 career winning percentage is the second highest in Auburn history, surpassing notable coaches such as John Heisman and Ralph "Shug" Jordan. Donahue Drive in Auburn, Alabama, on which Jordan–Hare Stadium is located and the Tiger Walk takes place, is named in his honor, as is Mike Donahue Drive on the LSU campus.

Donahue also coached basketball (1905–1921), baseball, track, and soccer (1912–?)^[1] at Auburn and baseball (1925–1926) and tennis (1946–1947) at LSU. He was inducted as a coach into the College Football Hall of Fame as part of its inaugural class in 1951.

Top LSU Players Abe Mickal HB 1933-1935

Abe Mickal played halfback for LSU from 1933-1935. He was born in Talia, Lebanon on Jul 09, 1912 and he passed away in New Orleans, LA, Sep 20. Mickal wore Jersey Number 84. He played the fields smaller in size than most today at 5-10; 180 lbs. He graduated from High School in McComb, MS at McComb HS.

They called him "Miracle" Abe Mickal, for it seemed the Louisiana State back was capable of pulling off the impossible, particularly when it came to passing the football. He was deadly accurate and had developed a long-bomb mastery which defied the difficulty it normally took to throw the football in those days.

The ball was rounder than today's pigskin and much more difficult to grasp, much less throw with pin-point precision. Yet, Mickal displayed a unique touch, and in 1933 managed touchdown heaves of 48 and 57 yards. His 27-yard TD aerial that year provided a 7-7 tie with rival Vanderbilt. As a junior in 1934, Mickal and fellow Hall of Famer Gaynell Tinsley combined for one of Southern football's greatest aerial duos, each capturing All-America mention.

When the two connected on a last-ditch 65-yard TD pass to tie Southern Methodist, 14-14, they set a record for the longest scoring pass ever in the South. The record stood for several years. The Fighting Tigers finished 7-2-2 for that 1934 campaign. All told, in 32 games at LSU, Mickal played an important role leading the Tigers to a 23-4-5 record.

LSU Athletics Hall of Fame Inductee Bernie Moore

This is the sixth and final story profiling the members of the 2009 class of the LSU Athletic Hall of Fame.

by Chad Vignes & R.J. Marse LSU Sports Information

In June 1933, former LSU track and field coach Bernie Moore packed his five-man team and their equipment into his black Plymouth and headed north to Chicago to compete in the NCAA track and field national championship meet.

Coach Bernie Moore

With only $137 allocated for the trip, Moore said his athletes would be able to “live off the land” as they competed. The five athletes ? shot-put and discus thrower Jack Torrance, pole-vaulter Matt Gordy, high-and-low hurdler Al Moreau, hurdler and quarter-miler Glen “Slats” Hardin and javelin-thrower Bubby Blair ? would, as they lived off the land, go on to win the first track and field national championship in LSU history. But it wasn't easy.

Former LSU athletic director Joe Dean called Hardin “the greatest track athlete to ever attend LSU.” Hardin competed for Moore in both track and field and football at LSU, and his performance on the track is what made him one of the all-time greats.

A native of Greenwood, Miss., Hardin was the most accomplished of the five, competing in the 1932 Summer Olympics in Los Angeles and winning a silver medal in the 400-meter hurdles. Hardin would continue to perform at a high level in Chicago and help start the momentum that would lead the Tigers to a championship, setting a world record as he won the 440-yard high hurdles and then, after being set a yard behind the field for a false start, setting another record in winning the 220-yard low hurdles. Hardin finished with 20 of LSU's 58 points in the meet.

“I don't know how long they had been running the 400 (meter) hurdles then,” Hardin once said, “but I do remember that (coach) Moore didn't know anything about them and I didn't, either.”

“Baby Jack” Torrance, as he was known, was also a two-sport star in football and track and field at LSU. One of the premier shot-putters in the world at the time, Torrance won the first of three consecutive NCAA titles and followed it with a third-place finish in the discus for the Tigers. Blair then finished fourth in the javelin and Moreau was able to grab second in the high hurdles and sixth in the 220-yard low hurdles.

It came down to Gordy, the 135-pound pole-vaulter from Abbeville, La., who had never cleared more than 13'-4” prior to the NCAA championship. LSU stood ahead of Southern California by four points and Bill Graber, USC's world-record pole-vaulter, had already cleared 14 feet in his final jump. Gordy failed his first two attempts and if he failed his final attempt he would fall into a three-way tie for second behind Graber, tying LSU and USC for first place.

“I looked up to the top of the stadium and saw Coach Moore pacing up and down like an expectant father,” Gordy said in a 1971 interview with the New Orleans Times-Picayune. “I laughed and I guess that laugh really relaxed me.”

Gordy made the jump, tying Graber for first place and besting his previous personal-best by eight inches. LSU had beaten USC by four points, 58-54, and a track dynasty was born with Bernie Moore as its leader.

On Tuesday, Moore will be inducted into this year's LSU Athletics Hall of Fame along with five other legends at the Pete Maravich Assembly Center. Other inductees include baseball and basketball coach Harry Rabenhorst (profile), long-time LSU trainer Dr. Martin J. Broussard (profile), track and field Olympian Esther Jones (profile), softball All-American Britni Sneed (profile) and football great Anthony McFarland (profile).

Tuesday night's 2009 LSU Hall of Fame Banquet is sponsored by Moniotte Investments, Deumite Construction, and Rabenhorst Funeral Homes.

In his 18 seasons as head track coach, Moore led the Tigers to an unprecedented 12 SEC titles, including the inaugural conference championship in 1933. Under Moore, LSU athletes set five world records, won eight NCAA titles and collected 29 All-America honors.

Coaching teams with multiple SEC titles in one sport is certainly a famed accomplishment, but an SEC title in two sports is nearly unheard of. Not for Bernie Moore. In addition to leading LSU track to national prominence, Moore also coached LSU's football team to two SEC titles in 1935 and 1936.

Louisiana senator Huey P. Long endorsed the new head football coach in 1935 saying, "winning that track meet showed me he could handle men."

In Moore's first season as football coach, All-American Gaynell Tinsley and the Tigers posted a 9-2 record and LSU's first Sugar Bowl appearance. It was the first time in SEC history a coach won SEC titles in two major sports in the same year.

If that weren't enough, Moore did it again in 1936 when he led the football team to its second SEC championship and the track team to its fourth straight SEC title.

Moore led the Tigers to three-straight Sugar Bowl appearances in his first three years as head coach. Unfortunately, all three Sugar Bowl appearances resulted in LSU losses. Moore was able to overcome the postseason losing streak in 1943 when the great Steve Van Buren led the Tigers to a 19-14 victory over Texas A&M in the Orange Bowl, giving LSU its first bowl game win.

One of Moore's most memorable games came in what would later be known as the "Ice Bowl." January 1, 1947, in the Cotton Bowl, LSU duelled Arkansas to a 0-0 final score, despite out-gaining the Hogs 271-54 in total yardage on the legs of Y.A. Tittle. The Tigers finished that season 9-1-1, one of Moore's better seasons, though no title was won.

Moore stepped down as head football coach after the 1947 season, with a career record of 83-29-6 in 13 seasons. He is second, only to Charles McClendon, in most career wins all-time at LSU. In 1948, Moore became the commissioner of the SEC and would hold that office for the next 18 years. He was the longest-tenured SEC commissioner in history.

After he was inducted into the College Football Hall of Fame in 1954 and the Louisiana Sports Hall of Fame in 1963, Moore finally retired in 1966.

Moore died the following year in 1967, but his body was honorably laid to rest by the men who first benefitted from his legacy.

Matt Gordy, pole-vaulter on that historic 1933 National Champion Track team, was vice-president of Pan-American Oil in 1967. He flew his private jet to Baton Rouge to pick up his four teammates from that 1933 championship team.

From there Gordy, Jack Torrance, Buddy Blair, Al Moreau and Glenn Hardin flew to Moore's hometown of Winchester, Tenn. to serve as pallbearers in Moore's funeral ceremony.

Today, Bernie Moore's legacy lives on, as the LSU outdoor track stadium still bears his name; a fitting memorial to an LSU legend.

Top LSU Players Y. A. Tittle QB, 1946-1947

YA Tittle one of the most famous LSU QBs of all time, passed away at 90 years old in 2017. He was a two-time All-SEC quarterback for the Tigers in 1946 and 1947. Tittle's 1946 season helped LSU seal a bid to the Cotton Bowl, where the Tigers and Razorbacks went to a 0-0 tie in the "Ice Bowl". Tittle had chosen to play at LSU over Texas in a well-chronicled recruiting battle between both programs.

Y. A. Tittle of LSU & NY Giants Fame

Tittle's 2,525 passing yards and 23 touchdowns were an LSU school record that stood until Bert Jones topped the mark in the 1970s. He played on both offense and defense for the Tigers.

Tittle was drafted by the Detroit Lions with the sixth pick in the 1948 NFL Draft. He then kicked off his pro career with the Baltimore Colts in the AAFC, then the San Francisco 49ers and the New York Giants in the NFL.

He was named the 1948 AAFC Rookie of the Year, and he ultimately played pro football from 1948 to 1964.

1948 Football Season Gaynell Tinsley Coach # 21

<<< Gaynell Tinsley

Gaynell Charles “Gus” Tinsley (February 1, 1915 - July 24, 2002) lettered in and captained the Louisiana State University Tigers for three years both the baseball and football teams, earning All-American football honors in both 1935 and 1936.

Gus played tight end at LSU and in 1936, as a member of the college all-stars playing in the annual game against an NFL team, this time the Green Bay Packers, Tinsley scored the only points of the game on a pass from Hall of Famer Sammy Baugh as the all-stars beat the Packers 6-0.

The Chicago Cardinals took Gaynell in the second round of the 1937 NFL Draft out of LSU. In Tinsley’s first season with the Cardinals, he led the NFL in receiving yards (675), average yards per reception (18.8) and average yards per game (61.4) while scoring five touchdowns. He only played three seasons in Chicago (1937-1938, 1940) before retiring from the playing field, but finished his career ranked fourth in NFL history in pass receptions. Gaynell was named to the NFL All-Pro First Team in 1937 and appeared in the 1938 NFL Pro Bowl.

He posted 1,401 all-purpose yards and scored a total of 48 points on eight career touchdowns, including one fumble recovery for a score. Gaynell Tinsley finished his playing career with 1,356 yards on 93 pass receptions, scoring seven touchdowns and averaging 46.8 yards per game. Following his playing days, Gaynell returned to Baton Rouge to coach the Tigers.

In seven years at the helm of the LSU football team, Tinsley compiled a 35-34-6 record (42-44-7 total as a head coach) led them to the 1950 Sugar Bowl against the Oklahoma Sooners. Gaynell Tinsley was inducted into the College Football Hall of Fame in 1956.

Top LSU Players Sid Fournet, G, 1951-1954

Sid Fournet did a little bit of everything for this LSU program back in the mid-1950s. What can I mean by a little bit of everything? Well for starters, Fournet was so talented that he actually started on both sides of the ball for this LSU program. He was so dominant on both sides of the line that he was named an All-American in the 1954 season.

Sid Fournet – Always ready for game action!

He typified what it meant to be a "hard-nosed" college football offensive lineman.

As an All-American tackle at LSU in 1954 and a member of the LSU Athletic Hall of Fame, Sid Fournet was one heck of a football player. He passed away at 78 years of age.

Sid was a Bogalusa native. He earned four varsity letters for the Tigers under coach Gaynell "Gus" Tinsley from 1951-54 and was a first-team All-Southeastern Conference honoree his final two seasons.

He was also a second-team All-SEC selection in 1951, he became an All-American in 1954 after starring for the Tigers on both sides of the line. The versatile Fournet played both guard and tackle in his All-American season and was credited with seeing action in 83 percent of LSU's total plays. He was a busy guy.

His brother, Emile, played for LSU's national championship team in 1958 as a member of the Chinese Bandits. Another brother, Dan, was named Southeastern Louisiana's team MVP in 1956 after earning All-Gulf States Conference recognition in 1955.

Sid Fournet was selected in the second round of the NFL draft in 1955 and went on to play seven seasons with the Los Angeles Rams, Pittsburgh Steelers, Dallas Texans and New York Titans/Jets. He was one heck of a great player.

New Coach in Louisiana Town—Paul Dietzel

After graduating from Miami in 1948, Dietzel began his coaching career as an assistant coach. He served under such legendary coaches as Red Blaik at Army and Bear Bryant at the University of Kentucky. In 1955, Dietzel became the head coach at LSU. ... After 1958, Dietzel continued to have success at LSU.

Dietzel and Heisman winner Billy Cannon on the LSU sidelines

The following is a brief biography of one of LSU's best coaches ever, Paul Dietzel, from Saturday Down Under. Paul Dietzel was a college football coach and administrator for nearly 40 years, including stints as a head coach and athletic director at South Carolina and LSU. After working as an assistant at a handful of schools from 1948-1954 Dietzel accepted his first head coaching job with the LSU Tigers in 1955.

In seven seasons as head coach Dietzel was 46-24-3, including two 10-win seasons. His 1958 squad finished a perfect 11-0, winning the national championship, and his 1961 team won the SEC title with a 10-1 record and a 6-0 run through the conference. Dietzel led LSU to three bowl games, going 1-1 in two Sugar Bowl appearances in addition to winning the 1961 Orange Bowl. He was the 1958 SEC Coach of the Year. Dietzel returned to LSU as its athletic director from 1978-1982.

Dietzel left LSU after the 1961 season, and following three seasons as the head coach at Army he accepted the job at the University of South Carolina beginning with the 1966 season. In nine seasons as coach of the Gamecocks – five seasons in the ACC and four as an independent – Dietzel recorded just three winning seasons and posted an overall record of 42-53-1.

His 1969 team went 7-4 including a perfect 6-0 in the ACC to win the conference title. That year the Gamecocks played in their only bowl game under Dietzel, losing the Orange Bowl. Dietzel also served as athletic director from 1966-1974 while coaching the football team. He passed away in 2013 at the age of 89.

1955 Football Season Paul Dietzel Coach # 22

<<< Paul Dietzel

The LSU Fighting Tigers football team represented the LSU Tigers of Louisiana State University during the 1955 Southeastern Conference football season. This was LSU's sixty-second season overall and its twenty-third playing as a member of the Southeastern Conference (SEC).

Led by coach Dietzel, in his first season of seven as head coach of LSU, the Tigers had a poor season at 3-5-2. Their SEC record was 2-3-1. The team finished SEC play in 9th place. LSU was unranked in the AP poll at the completion of the 1955 season.

After struggling for most of the Tinsley seasons, for LSU fans, when Paul Dietzel took over as coach the LSU record did not improve all of a sudden. Like many coaches, when instituting their own brand of football in a new school, Dietzel struggled to come up with break-even seasons after taking over the program. After breaking even in his third year, however, Dietzel made LSU into one of the best modern era football teams and he provided four solid years of great coaching before he went to Army in 1962 and finished his career with South Carolina. .

Top LSU Players Billy Cannon HB 1957-1959

Billy Cannon sat out his freshman year but after that no coach in his right mind would ever have Cannon sit a game out again. He was a great football player from LSU and was born, William Abb Cannon. He was one of the greatest running backs of all time. He was called an American football running back and he also played tight end professionally in the American Football League and the National Football League.

He was a true tiger, and attended Louisiana State University, where he played college football as a halfback, return specialist, and defensive back for the LSU Tigers. At LSU, Cannon was twice unanimously named an All-American, helped the 1958 LSU team win a national championship, and received the Heisman Trophy as the nation's most outstanding college player in 1959.

His punt return against Ole Miss on Halloween night in 1959 is considered by fans and sportswriters to be one of the most famous plays in LSU sports history. Cannon was selected as the first overall pick in the 1960 NFL Draft and as a first-round territorial pick in the 1960 American Football League draft, resulting in a contract dispute that ended in court.

Besides LSU, Cannon, (August 2, 1937 – May 20, 2018) played professionally in the American Football League (AFL) and National Football League (NFL). He attended Louisiana State University (LSU), where he could play anywhere but in fact played his football as a halfback, return specialist, and he also played defensive back for the LSU Tigers.

He made All-American twice at LSU At LSU, and he helped the 1958 LSU team win a national championship. He also received the Heisman Trophy as the nation's most outstanding college player in 1959.

Cannon was selected as the first overall pick in the 1960 NFL Draft and as a first-round territorial pick in the 1960 American Football League draft, resulting in a contract dispute that ended in court. Cannon played in the AFL for the Houston Oilers and Oakland Raiders before ending his football career with the Kansas City Chiefs of the NFL.

He began playing professional football as a halfback for the Oilers. A two-time AFL All-Star, Cannon led the league in rushing and all-purpose yards in 1961. He was named the most valuable player of the first two AFL championship games, which were won by the Oilers. He was moved to fullback and later tight end after being traded to the Raiders, with whom he won another league championship in 1967.

That season, he played in the second AFL–NFL World Championship game, retroactively known as Super Bowl II, in which his team was defeated by the Green Bay Packers.

Cannon became a dentist after retiring from football. In 1983, after a series of bad real estate investments, he became involved in a counterfeiting scheme and served two and a half years in prison.

In 1995, Billy Cannon the great halfback was finished with sports. He applied and was hired as a dentist at Louisiana State Penitentiary, a position he held until his death in 2018. His jersey number 20 was retired by LSU football in 1960, and he was inducted into the LSU Athletic Hall of Fame in 1975, the Louisiana Sports Hall of Fame in 1976, and the College Football Hall of Fame in 2008. He was a good man overall and a great athlete.

OK, let's take a quick quiz before we finish writing up Billy Cannon, how about you name the first and for many years before Burrow, the only LSU football player to win the Heisman Trophy award?

The answer is Billy Cannon.

Cannon was a stud running back for the Tigers all the way back in the late 1950s. In fact, in addition to being the school's only Heisman Trophy winner for many years, Cannon also led the Tigers to their first AP National Championship back in 1958.

During his outstanding collegiate career, Cannon received over 25 prestigious awards. He was a two-time All-American and was elected in the College Football Hall of Fame in 1983, though he was stripped of the honor after being involved in a counterfeiting scheme.

The Hall took him back in 2008.

When it comes to the top college football players in LSU's rich history, many would argue that Cannon stands alone on top of that long, prestigious list.

1958 Football Season Paul Dietzel Coach # 22

The LSU Fighting Tigers football team represented the LSU Tigers of Louisiana State University during the 1958 Southeastern Conference football season. This was LSU's sixty-fifth season overall and its twenty-sixth playing as a member of the Southeastern Conference (SEC).

Led by coach Dietzel, in his fourth season of seven as head coach of LSU, the Tigers had a great championship season at 11-0. Their SEC record was 6-0 for a first place finish. The team was one of the best LSU ever fielded. LSU was ranked #1 in the AP poll and the Coaches poll at the completion of the 1958 season.

With a 10-0 final record the team was named national champion by the Associated Press (AP) and the Coaches Poll (UPI). This was LSU's second national championship recognized by the NCAA and the college football community at large. The Tigers' first championship came when the Tigers were retro-picked as national champions in 1908 by the National Championship Foundation.

However, it is the first national championship claimed by the school.[1] It was also LSU's first undefeated and untied season since 1908, and was the last undefeated season for the school until 2019.

This year, the LSU Tigers were led by a backfield of Louisiana locals Billy Cannon, Warren Rabb, and Johnny Robinson. These three ALL-SEC players gained first-team All-SEC honors after the season. The team is perhaps most remembered for coach Paul Dietzel's unique "three-platoon system", of which the "Chinese Bandits" were a part.

Greatest Generation: 1958 team remains LSU's only undefeated national champion ... for now Jan. 12, 2020

BATON ROUGE — LSU's Greatest Generation — the surviving members of its first national championship football team in 1958 — have celebrated and treasured the national championship teams that have come after theirs in 2003-04 and 2007-08.

But this 2019-20 team that could become just the second undefeated national champion at LSU — well, it makes them feel young again. "Oh God, I would've loved it if I could have played on a team like this," said the 82-year-old Warren Rabb this week. Rabb was the quarterback on the 11-0 1958 Tigers that finished its season at No. 1 with a 7-0 win over No. 12 Clemson (8-3) in the Sugar Bowl on Jan. 1, 1959, in Tulane Stadium in New Orleans.

The current No. 1 Tigers (14-0) play No. 3 Clemson (14-0) at 7 p.m. Monday in the Mercedes-Benz Superdome in New Orleans at 7 p.m. on ESPN.

Rabb, who poetically runs a company in Baton Rouge that makes championship rings, averaged 8.1 passes a game in 1958, completing 45-of-90 for 505 yards and seven touchdowns. At Baton Rouge High, he was a single wing running back, which operated like a quarterback, and threw more than 20 times a game.

"I felt like I could throw the ball pretty good. I was pretty accurate with the football," he said. "And I would've been in heaven in this offense."

LSU Heisman Trophy-winning quarterback Joe Burrow, who is 23, threw for seven touchdowns in one game Dec. 28 as the Tigers beat Oklahoma, 63-28, in a national semifinal to reach Monday night's title game. He finished 13 yards short of Rabb's season total as he completed 29-of-39 for 493 yards.

Burrow has completed 371-of-478 passes for a NCAA record .776 completion percentage, and he has set Southeastern Conference records for passing yards at 5,208 yards and touchdowns at 55. He is No. 2 in the nation with 372 yards passing a game.

"This is the greatest offense LSU has ever had," said Rabb, who attends practices regularly. "And I tell you what, this is probably the best LSU football team over all I've ever seen as a group. The defense is good and getting better, and that group of wide receivers are the best three LSU has ever had."

Wide receivers Ja'Marr Chase and Justin Jefferson are Nos. 2 and 3 in receiving yards in the nation at 1,559 on 75 catches with 18 touchdowns and 1,434 yards on 102 catches with 18 touchdowns, respectively, while Terrace Marshall Jr. has 43 catches for 625 yards. Rabb recently spoke at practice with LSU's first-year phenom pass game coordinator Joe Brady, a former assistant with the New Orleans Saints.

"He told me LSU has a better group of receivers than he had with the Saints," Rabb said. "And Joe is a quarterback who can throw the football on the money, and he is very smart. The offensive line has really come around very well, too. I'm very impressed."

Rabb's offense was much more run-oriented with the likes of running backs Billy Cannon (686 yards on 115 carries, 10 TDs), who would win the 1959 Heisman Trophy, and Johnny Robinson (485 yards on 86 carries, 5 TDs) from Istrouma High and University High in Baton Rouge, respectively.

"You could have thrown a handkerchief over our whole formation we lined up so close together," Rabb said.

"This team spreads wide. They're in the no huddle. They adjust so rapidly. They do everything in a matter of seconds. It's something to see," said 1958 running back Don "Scooter" Purvis, who gained 253 yards on 61 carries with two touchdowns that season.

"My gosh, this team has offered some of the greatest thrills in football I have ever seen," said Purvis, who was LSU's secondary coach from 1970-79. "They've steadily grown, and it's such a complete team from the players to the staff. It has had such an impact on people."

Purvis, who lives in Baton Rouge, particularly likes the philosophy of coach Ed Orgeron, who has said, "One team, one heartbeat," since he became interim head coach in 2016.

"Every great team has its own personality," Purvis said. "We cared for each other in 1958, and we had a lot of camaraderie and team attitude."

This was fostered by the platoon system used by coach Paul Dietzel with the White and Gold — later Go — team offenses and the Chinese Bandits defense.

"You pulled for all the other guys," he said. "I see that in this team. Joe Burrow is the star of the team like Cannon was, but both are great team players and keep their heads on straight. All these guys are together like we were."

The 2019 Tigers are one win away from the perfect season and immortality.

"I'll be in a store and notice someone looking at me," he said. "Just the other day this happened. Some guy says, 'Hey, don't I know you?' And I say, 'I don't know. I hope I don't owe you any money.' But it's amazing. LSU people never forget their national champion teams."

Games of the 1958 Season

In the season opener at Rice Stadium, Houston, TX, on September 20, 1958, LSU snagged the first of its 11 wins in this national championship season W (26–6) before 45,000. The next week on Sep 27 at Alabama, #15 LSU defeated the Crimson Tide in Ladd Memorial Stadium, Mobile, AL for its second victory W (13–3) before 34,000. Then at home on Oct 4 #13 LSU defeated Hardin–Simmons in Tiger Stadium, Baton Rouge, LA W (20–6) before 45,000. Then, on Oct 10 at Miami (FL), the now #11 LSU Tigers grabbed their third win against Miami in the Orange Bow, in Miami, FL W (41–0) before 40,614. On Oct 18. #9 LSU pounded Kentucky for win #5 of 5 at Tiger Stadium, Baton Rouge, LA W (32–7) before 65,000.

On Oct 25, #3 LSU defeated Florida for its 6th win in an almost-season-spoiling nail-biter at home in Tiger Stadium, Baton Rouge.. n, LA W (10–7) before 62,000. This win lifted LSU to first place in the National Standings, a place never relinquished for the rest of the season. On Oct 31, #1 LSU defeated #6 Ole Miss at Tiger Stadium, Baton Rouge, LA W (14–0) before 68,000.

Then, in a blowout win, on Nov 8, #1 LSU pounded Duke at home in Tiger Stadium, Baton Rouge, LA, W 50–18 before 63,000. On Nov 15, #1 LSU saved its season by edging out #20 Mississippi State at the Mississippi Veterans Memorial Stadium in Jackson, MS W 7–6, before 26,000. Then in the regular season finale, on Nov 22 at Tulane, the undisputed #1 team in the nation let it all out against this rival at Tulane Stadium in New Orleans, LA in the annual Battle for the Rag W (62–0) before a capacity crowd of 83,221.

In the Sugar Bowl on January 1, 1959, #1 ranked LSU played the #12 team in the nation, Clemson at Tulane Stadium in New Orleans, LA. In a defensive battle LSU got the win and the National Championship W 7–0 before 80,331

25th Annual Sugar Bowl Classic ~ January 1, 1959

#1 LSU 7 (Final: 11-0-0)

#12 Clemson 0 (Final: 8-3-0)

Clemson head coach Frank Howard was fully prepared and motivated to knock LSU from its pedestal – as were most of the South Carolina contingent on the chilly, overcast New Year’s Day, 1959.

How LSU and Clemson Met in the 1959 Sugar Bowl

“They (the press) keep telling us we’re not worth a darn,” the tobacco-chewing coach of the 11th-ranked Clemson

Tigers drawled. “I don’t know, maybe we’re not. But you keep telling a feller that long enough and it begins to get under his hide.”

It was, however, the quick-silver LSU Tigers that put in the early bid for points, driving to the Clemson 22-yard line late in the first quarter before a fumble thwarted the march. When Clemson couldn’t move the ball, Charlie Horne dropped back to punt. He got a bad snap and under a strong rush by Max Fugler, hooked the ball straight up and out-of-bounds for a minus two-yard punt at the 29-yard line.

LSU inched to the 12, but came up empty again when quarterback Warren Rabb missed on four straight passes, including one on a fourth-down fake field goal.

Later in the second period, Rabb ignited another drive, running for 33 yards but breaking his hand on the tackle. “I didn’t know it was broken until I came out before the half,” he explained. “I think it got hit with a helmet.” Rabb continued to pilot the drive, completing a 24-yard pass to end Mickey Mangham and guiding the Tigers to the 1. J. W. Brodnax crashed into the end zone but fumbled. Doug Cline recovered for the Clemson touchback. “I thought it was over,” Brodnax said with insistence afterward.

LSU had muffed three scoring opportunities in the first half, and lost its quarterback in the process, changing the game plan.

“I was glad, in a way, the first half ended the way it did . . . I felt certain they thought they had us,” Dietzel said.

That’s what it seemed in the third quarter when Clemson, which posed no serious threat in the opening half, pounded its way to the LSU 20 – where George Usry was hit by Red Hendrix and fumbled.

Fighting off every Clemson thrust, George Strange recovered for LSU on the play.

Tommy Davis boomed a 52-yard punt, and when Clemson failed to move again, it appeared the two sets of Tigers were settling down into trench warfare. A reserve center, Paul Snyder, was in during this series. As it happened, when Clemson tried to punt, Synder’s snap went awry and bounced off the leg of kicker Doug Cline. LSU tackle Duane Leopard fell on the loose ball at the Clemson 11.

On third and nine, Billy Cannon took a pitch-out, rolled to his right, and shot a pass to Mangham, who was clear in the end zone. The play was not run as diagrammed. “I didn’t throw it, the Lord did,” Cannon said later. “I looked for (halfback) Johnny Robinson, and they had him covered. . . . then I spied Mickey and let go . . . I wasn’t sure it would get to him until he grabbed it . . . It went off with a prayer.”

With time becoming critical, quarterback Harvey White started a drive from the Clemson 17 and whipped his unit to within sight of the goal line. Dietzel sent in his rested Chinese Bandits, the third-string unit of over-achievers that had sparked the Tigers throughout the season.

At the 25 the Chinese Bandits threw up one of their patented stands. Gaining one yard in three plays, White flipped a screen pass to Usry, who appeared to have running room. The left halfback started to run before he had complete possession and dropped the ball. Howard was certain Usry “would have gone all the way,” had the pass been complete. “It was the perfect play,” he added. “All the downfield blockers were in position to clear the road to the goal.”

Howard admitted his strategy didn’t work out the way he figured and said, in his opinion, Strange, not Cannon, deserved the MVP award, dismissing the Tiger halfback’s touchdown pass, his PAT, his 51 yards rushing out of LSU’s total of 114, and being in on several key tackles. “We figured we could drive Strange back 10 yards a crack – and planned our offense to run right at him,” Howard said. “But, as it turned out, he was the toughest man on the field.”

Because he was, LSU finally won a Sugar Bowl game – and in the process became the first national champion to do so since 1940.

1959 Football Season Paul Dietzel Coach # 22

The LSU Fighting Tigers football team represented the LSU Tigers of Louisiana State University during the 1959 Southeastern Conference football season. This was LSU's sixty-sixth season overall and its twenty-seventh playing as a member of the Southeastern Conference (SEC).

Led by coach Dietzel, in his fifth season of seven as head coach of LSU, the Tigers had a great season at 9-2. Their SEC record was 5-1. for a tie for a second place finish. The team was a great one—on e of the best LSU teams. #3 in both the AP poll and the Coaches poll at the completion of the 1959 season.

Having won the national championship and the SEC Championship in 1958. The pundits unanimously expected the Tigers to repeat as national champions in 1959. After all, they had almost their whole team back, including the All-American halfback Billy Cannon.

Cannon had come in third in the 1958 Heisman balloting and he was expected to win the Trophy this year.

The team was like a big Mack truck rolling over opponents in the first 6 games in 1959, though, even with Cannon, its offense was not as potent as 1958's. However, its defense was even tougher than 1958's squad. LSU made up for its offense by being stingy on "D," allowing only 6 points in 6 games.

Top Moment in LSU Football-The Halloween Run

THE HALLOWEEN RUN was on Oct. 31, 1959 in Tiger Stadium in Baton Rouge. People and pundits say that as far as the single greatest play in LSU football history, this is it. With about 10 minutes to play and No. 3 Ole Miss leading No. 1 LSU 3-0 in an early "Game of the Century," LSU senior tailback Billy Cannon fielded a punt at his 11-yard line. "No, no, no," coach Paul Dietzel yelled from the sideline as his rule said not to field any punt inside your 20. That soon turned to "Go, go, go," as Cannon broke several tackles on the way to an 89-yard touchdown and 7-3 lead. A goal-line stand by the Tigers, featuring Cannon in a dual role as linebacker, sealed the win and the Heisman Trophy for Cannon.

Here is how that went down. Once it got by its toughest test of the season it was expected that the team would win out. They defeated Ole Miss on Halloween at home in Tiger Stadium. It as a well-hyped game between #1 LSU and #3 Ole Miss. It had been touted as 1959's "Game of the Year." Ole Miss was winning throughout until the 4th quarter. There was a lot of punting on first down due to the very wet conditions on the field.

When there was just 10 minutes left in the game, Ole Miss punted and Billy Cannon found some traction after he took the punt from the LSU 11. Cannon scooted down the Ole Miss sidelines, weaving between Rebel defenders, eluding tacklers, and speeding towards the goal line for an 89 yard punt return touchdown. That was the game.

Ole Miss did not give up, however, as they began a fine drive and rammed the ball down to the two yard line with 18 seconds left. It was 4th and goal and the next play was the game decider. So, with the game in the balance, Ole Miss QB Doug Elmore took off for a TD but was stopped in his tracks at the one by Cannon and his teammates to ensure LSU's 7-3 victory.

The first blemish however, came the following week as the Tigers lost its next SEC game against Tennessee at Knoxville, in a squeaker L (13-14). With the extra point, they had a tie but Dietzel went for the win. Unfortunately, Cannon's run for a 2 pt. conversion failed. The loss not only cost LSU a shot at repeating as national champion, it also denied them the SEC championship, which went to the Georgia Bulldogs. Piling on the meaning of that run, it ended the Tigers' 19 game win streak, which was the longest in school history. The streak had begun in the last game of the 1957 season. The Tigers defeated Mississippi State and Tulane to finish the regular season 9-1. They were ranked #3 in the nation behind No. 1 Syracuse and #2 Ole Miss.

As noted previously, Billy Cannon won the Heisman Trophy by one of the widest margins in the history of the trophy balloting at the time. The Tigers were invited to play in the Sugar Bowl, and their opponent was Ole Miss, in a rematch.

At first Paul Dietzel, LSU's coach, was not anxious to replay the Rebels, but he was persuaded to do so by the athletic director, Jim Corbett. By the time January 1 came, three LSU star players were injured, including quarterback Warren Rabb, and halfbacks Wendell Harris and Johnny Robinson. The Tigers were soundly beaten by the Rebels, 21-0, and were outgained 373-74. It was a tough loss to a team that on any other day could have been beaten by the Tigers.

Following the Sugar Bowl, Cannon signed a professional contract with the Houston Oilers of the American Football League, which was scheduled to begin play in September 1960, spurning an offer from the National Football League's Los Angeles Rams. The AFL would become a force with which to be reckoned in the 1960's and there was a lot of good pro ball in 1960 with great players such as Billy Cannon on the rosters of the AFL team.

Games of the 1959 Season

In the season and home opener on September 19, 1959, #1 ranked LSU defeated Rice at home in Tiger Stadium, Baton Rouge, LA. The win was nice W (26–3) before 48,613. On Sep 26, LSU beat #9 TCU at home in Tiger Stadium, Baton Rouge, LA, W (10–0) before 65,694. At Baylor on Oct 3, #1 ranked LSU defeated the Bears at State Fair Stadium, Shreveport, LA, W (22–0) before 32,308. #1 LSU beat Miami on Oct 10 in Tiger Stadium, Baton Rouge, LA W (27–3) before 64,864. On Oct 17, #1 LSU beat Kentucky at McLean Stadium, Lexington, KY, W (9–0) before 33,230. Then, on Oct 24 at Florida, the #1 LSU Tigers shut out the Florida Gators in Florida Field, Gainesville, FL W (9–0) before 47,578.

On Oct 31, #1 LSU skidded by #3 Ole Miss at Tiger Stadium in the “Halloween Run” game, Baton Rouge, LA, W 7–3, before 67,327. Then on Nov 7 at # 13 Tennessee, the #1 LSU Tigers were nosed out the Volunteers in a close contest as the Volunteers put the first blemish in 19 games on the Tigers and kept them from another championship. The game was played at Shields–Watkins Field in Knoxville, TN L (13–14) before 45,682

On Nov 14, #3 LSU shut-out Mississippi State at home in Tiger Stadium, Baton Rouge, LA W (27–0) before 63,272. Then in the season finale on Nov 21 at Tulane, the #3 LSU Tigers beat the Green Wave at Tiger Stadium, Baton Rouge, LA in the Battle for the Rag, W (14–6) before 65,057.

It was January 1, 1960. With far more injuries than LSU would have liked, on January 1, 1960, in a rematch, #2 Ole Miss defeated the #3 LSU Tigers at Tulane Stadium, New Orleans, LA in the Sugar Bowl. L (0-21) before 81,141.

After LSU shocked Ole Miss on Halloween Night behind star Billy Cannon's fourth-quarter super-human 89-yard punt return for a touchdown, the Ole Miss faithful had an outstanding opportunity for revenge – the Rebels and the Tigers would rematch in the 1960 Sugar Bowl.

How They Got Here

The game, of course, would be televised, the first bowl to be telecast in color from coast-to-coast, but tickets were being swapped for used cars and refrigerator repairs. Four tickets went for a 14-foot fiberglass boat; 60 tickets went for a 1952 Cadillac and 4 new tires. The sizzle of the rematch had fans steaming. It was estimated the Sugar Bowl had over a quarter of a million requests for tickets.

Ole Miss had given up only 21 points the entire season, the lowest for a major college in 20 years – since the 1939 Tennessee Vols went undefeated, untied and unscored upon. LSU gave up only 29 points. The rivals were ranked one-two nationally on defense. LSU allowed an average of 2.5 yards per play to the opposition; Ole Miss gave up an average of 2.8 yards.

Before the rematch, an Ole Miss fan said unsmilingly to a newsman, “We’d rather beat LSU than be president.”

Coach Johnny Vaught gave his constituency a victory in a landslide. Vaught, criticized for his conservative approach in the 7-3 regular season Tiger win, gave the Rebels the green light to “go for broke.” He wasn’t going to hold anything back.

Warren Rabb, the LSU quarterback, was still hobbled from a knee strain from the Tennessee game more than a month before. Further complicating matters for LSU was halfback Johnny Robinson, who started with a protective covering over his fractured hand. He would not carry a single time in the Sugar Bowl, nor did another halfback, Wendell Harris, whose injuries kept him completely sidelined. It all meant the Ole Miss defense could zero in on LSU’s only threat, Billy Cannon.

“We did something I don’t think we had ever done before,” said Rebel safety Billy Brewer. “We went to a man defense in the secondary because we knew LSU wouldn’t be a passing threat. My assignment was to stay with Cannon, go everywhere he went.”

Murky, damp weather made the field muddy in spots, and a cold wind lowered the temperature to 49 degrees at kickoff, opening a half in which the seven-point favorite Rebels put constant pressure on the Tigers, who were saved by an interception at the LSU 5, a missed field goal from the 18, and at the 11 where the Tiger defense held.

Despite its problems, LSU kept the Rebels even on the scoreboard. Then, with 38 seconds left and Mississippi on its 42, the Tigers were assessed a 15-yard personal foul penalty. Ole Miss' Jake Gibbs, who led the SEC in total offense, received instructions from the bench. He took the snap, started to roll out, and pulled up behind tackle. Delaying for an instant while Ole Miss' other receivers flared to different areas, taking the deep defenders with them, James "Cowboy" Woodruff raced downfield behind end Larry Grantham and cut slightly to the center where Gibbs' pass was arching down.

No Tiger was within 15 yards of the receiver.

"I don't think there is any question that the touchdown pass just before the end of the half broke our backs," Paul Dietzel said. "It might have been a different game if we had gone into halftime 0-0."

Grantham caught an 18-yard touchdown pass from Bobby Franklin in the third quarter, and then Franklin threw a nine-yard fourth-period TD pass to George Blair. Those touchdowns were a striking illustration of just how dominant Ole Miss was: The touchdown pass just before halftime was the first passing score against LSU in 14 games, and against the Rebels the Tigers yielded three in one afternoon.

Ole Miss held an awesome edge in statistics, 363 yards to 74, the lowest offensive total in Sugar Bowl annuals; the Tigers gained 49 yards rushing but lost 64 for a net gain of minus 15 yards. The longest Tiger gain of the day was eight yards by Darryl Jenkins of the Chinese Bandits – the defensive unit. It had taken LSU more than 25 minutes to get its initial first down – and that was the only one the Tigers were credited with in the first half. Cannon made eight yards in six carries.

Vaught was magnanimous in victory, pointing out the injuries that decimated the Tiger team that beat the Rebels in the regular season. "Don't forget LSU lost three pretty good football players," he said. "Rabb wasn't at his best; Robinson was of little use offensively and Harris didn't dress out. Those are three mighty fine football players."

Most Ole Miss people didn't want to hear anything that might take the edge off their win.

In the satisfied Rebel locker room, Woodruff sighed, "I always thought we had a better one (team), and I kind of feel we proved it today."

1960 Football Season Paul Dietzel Coach # 22

The LSU Fighting Tigers football team represented the LSU Tigers of Louisiana State University during the 1960 Southeastern Conference football season. This was LSU's sixty-seventh season overall and its twenty-eighth playing as a member of the Southeastern Conference (SEC).

Led by coach Dietzel, in his sixth season of seven as head coach of LSU, the Tigers had a respectable season at 5-4-1. Their first three losses were by a total of 11 points. Their SEC record was 2-3-1 brought the Tigers an eighth place finish. The team was a good one but not one of Dietzel's best LSU teams. After burning up College football for two years, this year's LSU team was unranked nationally. It was a nice year off but the Tigers would be back in 1961 in Coach Dietzel's final year with a vengeance. Watch out SEC in 1961!

At Georgia Tech on October 8, the Yellow Jackets squeaked by the Tigers at Grant Field in Atlanta, GA L (L 2-6) before 44,176. On Oct 15, Kentucky gave LSU its third loss in a row. This game was played at Stoll Field in Lexington, KY L (0-3) before 28,000. LSU took its fourth loss in a row on Oct 22 at home in Tiger Stadium, Baton Rouge, LA as Florida's Gators beat the Tigers L (10-13) before 51,528.

On Oct 29, LSU tied #2 Ole Miss at Hemingway Stadium Oxford, MS T 6-6 before 34,000. LSU came out of its funk in a big game on Nov 5 when its pummeled South Carolina at home in Tiger Stadium in Baton Rouge, LA W (35-6) before 52,650. On Nov 12, LSU defeated Miss State at home in Tiger Stadium, Baton Rouge, LA W (7-3) before 48,804. Another win for the Tigers came at the expense of Wake Forest on Nov 19 at home in Tiger Stadium, Baton Rouge, LA, W (16-0) before 49,909. The Tigers wrapped up the season against Tulane in the Battle for the Rag on Nov 26 at Tulane Stadium, New Orleans, LA W (17-6) before 74,000 for a 5-4-1 1960 season record.

Top LSU Players Jerry Stovall RB 1960-1963

Jerry Stovall carries the ball v. Texas in the 1963 Cotton Bowl

Jerry Lane Stovall (born April 30, 1941) is a former All-American running back and head football coach for LSU. He was also a star in track and was a defensive back in the NFL for the St. Louis Cardinals.

Jerry attended Louisiana State University from 1959 – 1962, where he was an All-American running back and runner-up for the Heisman trophy in 1962. He received his undergraduate degree from Missouri Baptist College, while playing in the National Football League for the St. Louis Cardinals, who chose him as their #1 draft choice (2nd overall) in the 1963 NFL Draft.

Jerry was a 3-time Pro Bowl defensive back for the Cardinals and played 9 seasons in St. Louis before retiring from the NFL in 1971. With his professional football career behind him, Jerry was hired as an assistant coach to Paul Dietzel at the University of South Carolina before he returned to Baton Rouge to serve as an assistant coach to Charles McClendon.

Stovall was promoted to head football coach at LSU in 1980, and during his three-year tenure he was named SEC Coach of the Year (1983) and Walter Camp National Coach of the Year (1983). He also led the Tigers to an Orange Bowl bid in 1983.

In 1993, Jerry accepted the leadership role and founded the Baton Rouge Area Sports Foundation in 1994. The mission of the Sports Foundation is to assist in the securing and staging of statewide, regional, national and international sporting competitions and special events for the Greater Baton Rouge Area, thereby having a positive economic impact on the Baton Rouge community.

Mr. Stovall was inducted into the National Football Foundation College Football Hall of Fame in December of 2010 and enshrined in July 2011. Jerry is also a member of LSU Hall of Fame and the Louisiana Sportswriters Hall of Fame. He was amid the 1990 Volunteer Activist of the Year and in 1993 was named to the LSU Modern Day Team of the Century. In 2007, Jerry was honored with the Brotherhood/Sisterhood award for his work in the Baton Rouge community.

Jerry and Judy Stovall, his wife of 52 years, have two children; Jay and Jodi and five grandchildren; Jerry, Elizabeth, Andrew, Stovall and Macy Claire. He is a member and Sunday School teacher at First Presbyterian Church in Baton Rouge.

1961 Football Season Paul Dietzel Coach # 22

The LSU Fighting Tigers football team represented the LSU Tigers of Louisiana State University during the 1961 Southeastern Conference football season. This was LSU's sixty-eighth season overall and its twenty-ninth playing as a member of the Southeastern Conference (SEC).

Led by coach Dietzel, in his seventh and last season of seven as head coach of LSU, the Tigers had a great season at 10-0-1. Their SEC record was 6-0. brought the Tigers a tie with Alabama for First place in the SEC and a #3 finish in the national coach's poll. The team was a great one. It was a hair away from being as good as Dietzel's best team from 1959.

After the Tigers' Orange Bowl victory vs. Colorado, Paul Dietzel departed to take the head coaching position at Army.

After the season Paul Dietzel left LSU for Army

Paul Dietzel coached LSU from 1955 until 1961, leaving for Army and then South Carolina. He also broadcast Southern Conference football games and helped create Samford University's athletic department before returning to LSU as its athletic director from 1978 until 1982.

When he passed away at 89 years of age, Dietzel was the last living member of the staff that guided LSU to an undefeated season and national championship in 1958. The Tigers beat Clemson in the 1959 Sugar Bowl.

Dietzel's memoir "Call Me Coach: A Life in College Football" was published in 2008 by Louisiana State University Press.

"Coach Dietzel was a man of great honor and integrity. He was the perfect role model for young people, and I will always cherish the moments that I was able to spend with him," LSU vice chancellor and athletics director Joe Allewa said in a statement from LSU.

"Looking back at what he accomplished here at LSU, he was way ahead of his time as a football coach. His 1958 national championship set LSU on a path of being what it is today."

Obituary note from Coach Les Miles:

Very sad to hear of passing of Paul Dietzel...was a key part of this LSU program...From one coach to another you will be missed. LM

South Carolina coach Steve Spurrier met Dietzel when Dietzel returned to South Carolina last year for a football function.

"First order of business is to say coach Dietzel was a heck of a guy. One of the best to coach college football I guess," Spurrier said Tuesday.

Dietzel was born Sept. 5, 1924, in Fremont, Ohio. The family moved to Mansfield, in northwest Louisiana, where he played football, basketball and track in high school.

He was a freshman engineering student at Duke when he got a draft notice and left school to enlist in the Army Air Corps, beginning pilot training in January 1944 on a Stearman biplane and that fall on a B-24 bomber. His bomber was among 300 that firebombed Tokyo in May 1945, according to his memoir.

After the war, he enrolled as a pre-med major in Miami University in Oxford, Ohio, where he played under Sid Gillman, winning first-team All-American honors in 1947 from Williamson National Rating System Inc.

He worked as an assistant for Gillman at Miami, West Point and the University of Cincinnati, becoming plebe coach at West Point instead of enrolling in medical school at Columbia University. At Cincinnati, he named his defense the "Chinese Bandits" -- a name that later became famous at LSU -- after bad guys in the comic strip "Terry and the Pirates."

He left Cincinnati in 1951 for Kentucky, as Bear Bryant's offensive line coach.

After LSU fired Gus Tinsley, Dietzel got a three-year contract for $13,000 a year. He was 29 and the youngest member of the LSU staff, according to the university's obituary.

His first three seasons the Tigers were 3-5-2, 3-7 and 5-5. But the players he signed as freshmen in 1956 included Billy Cannon. Life would change for Dietzel and LSU.

The undefeated season in 1958 ended 62-0 at Tulane before 83,221 people, then an SEC record. LSU then beat Clemson 7-0 at Tulane Stadium in the Sugar Bowl.

Games of the 1961 Season

In the season and home opener on September 23, Rice defeated LSU at Rice Stadium, Houston, TX L (16-3). On Sep 30, LSU defeated Texas A&M at home in Tiger Stadium, Baton Rouge, LA W (16-7). Then on Oct 7, LSU beat #3 Georgia Tech at Tiger Stadium, Baton Rouge, LA W (10-0). At South Carolina on Oct 14, at Carolina Stadium in Columbia, SC. LSU walloped the Gamecocks W (42-0). Then, on Oct 21, #10 LSU beat Kentucky at home in Tiger Stadium, Baton Rouge, LA W (24-14). At Florida on Oct 28, #7 LSU shut out the Gators at Florida Field in Gainesville, FL W (23-0)

In a rivalry game of championship teams, on Nov 4, #6 LSU edged out #2 Ole Miss at home in Tiger Stadium, Baton Rouge, LA W (10-7). At North Carolina on Nov 11, the #4 Tigers thumped the Tarheels at Kenan Memorial Stadium, Chapel Hill, NC, W (30-0). On Nov 18, #4 LSU beat Mississippi St. at home in Tiger Stadium, Baton Rouge, LA W (14-6). Then, in the season finale on Nov 25 at home in Tiger Stadium, Baton Rouge, LA in the annual Battle for the Rag, the Tigers shellacked the Green Wave, W (62-0)

Orange Bowl LSU made a post season bowl, and in the Orange Bowl on January 1, 1962 at 12:30 pm, the #4 LSU Tigers took on the #7 Colorado Buffaloes and prevailed at the Orange Bowl in Miami, FL W (25-7).

The 1962 Orange Bowl Game LSU (25) v Colorado (7)

The game time temperature was 67° with 90% relative humidity. How would the teams hold up in the balmy conditions?

Two teams from far away failed to fill the warmth of the Orange Bowl. Attendance was announced as 68,150. Spectators needed raincoats and umbrellas as the game was played in a steady drizzle - supposedly a first for an Orange Bowl game.

LSU won the toss and elected to receive. The First Quarter choice to receive proved very good for the Tigers as they drove to the first score of the game. QB Jimmy Field skirted RE for 10y on 3rd-and-6 to keep the drive alive. Two plays later, Field threw his first pass, completing to Jerry Stovall for 7yds into Colorado territory at the 46. On 3rd-and-1, Stovall got just enough at RG to move the chains.

After Wendell Harris's zero gain, Field threw to him. Harris made a great reception for 14yds and another first down at the 30. Despite being hit by LB Loren Schweninger, the QB, a senior from Baton Rouge reached back and grabbed the ball with one hand. Stovall got 3 before FB Earl Gros smashed through LG for a first down on the 17. A delay of game was next and that proved too much to overcome. When Field's third-down pass to E Jack Gates was broken up in the corner of the endzone, Harris booted a 30y FG. LSU 3 Colorado 0 (6:59 1Q)

Buffalo's first possession started badly when Bill Harris fumbled the kick-off on the 3 and had to fall on it at the 9. When two plunges gained only 3, Coach Grandelius lived up to his pledge "we will never kick on third down" with disastrous results. QB Gale Weidner's pass was almost intercepted by E Bob Flurry. So Chuck McBride dropped back to punt. He juggled the snap, giving Gary Kinchen time to block the kick through the end zone. LSU 5 Colorado 0 (5:01 1Q)

In 2Q play. Blair dropped Weidner's 2nd-down pass. Then, Harris gained 2. McBride got off the punt this time, LSU's Harris signaled for a fair catch at the CU 47 and reeled it in.

Two plays later Buffalo took the lead. Field rolled right and, under a heavy rush, threw off balance. LB Schweningen picked off the wobbly toss and sped untouched down the sidelines 50 yds to pay dirt. Jerry Hillebrand added the PAT. Colorado 7 LSU 5 (12:54)

Dietzel sent in the Go Team, and they quickly regained the lead, driving 82yds in eight plays. Cranford later made one of his patented leaps over the line for the TD. The Tigers went for two, but Amedee's pass to TE Billy Truax was broken up. LSU 11 Colorado 7 (8:57 2Q) The White team drove from the 20 to the 45 to run out the clock.

The Buffaloes needed to take the kickoff after kickoff, and using any adjustments made at halftime, get their offense clicking. Starting from the 20, Weidner threw two passes. The first was broken up by Harris, and Hillebrand dropped the second. Then McBride barely got off a punt that traveled only 18y to the CU 43.

From there, LSU moved smartly to another TD. On 2nd down, Gros dragged defenders for 18y to the 22. Three plays later, facing 3rd-and-9, Field rolled right to the 9. Then he kept the ball again over LT into the EZ. Harris booted the extra point. LSU 18 Colorado 7 (10:34 3Q)

The only way Colorado could get back in the game was to get turnovers. And they got one when Claude Crabb snagged Amedee's long pass at the CU 40. But they couldn't capitalize. On 4th and less than a yard, Grandelius gave the signal to go for it. But Woods fumbled, and Sammy Odom recovered for LSU at the CU 49.

Amedee's completions to Campbell for 18 and Wilkins for 8 sparked a Go Team drive that reached the 19. But a holding penalty (15y in those days) forced the Tigers to go to the air. Three straight incompletions led to a beautiful Stovall's punt that went out of bounds on the 5.

LB Roy Winston dumped Mavity for a 3yd loss. Then Weidner found RB Ed Coleman for 7. Stovall made a fine recovery to knock down the 3rd down long pass to bring McBride back for his second punt from the end zone in the game. It was hard to imagine it could be any worse than the first one, which led to a safety, but it was. Gene Sykes blocked the kick and fell on the ball in the EZ.

LSU 25 Colorado 7 (0:26 3Q)

Harris's PAT gave him 99 points for the season, one more than Steve Van Buren scored in 1943 in the only other season when the Tigers went to the Orange Bowl.

Coach Dietzel praised Sykes after the game: "Gene Sykes has been playing great football for us. He weighs only 183 pounds, but he's been the best end we've had since I've been here."

In the last quarter, with the game no longer in doubt, Weidner had no choice but to pass. But he overthrew Mavity, then threw into Wendell Harris's area twice for incompletions. The Tigers gave the ball right back, Woods recovering Gros' fumble at the CU 42.

Weidner took advantage of the second chance to penetrate the LSU 35 for the first time all day. With plenty of time to throw, he sent Hillebrand across the middle for receptions of 13, then 12. After running a draw to slow the rush, Gale threw twice to E John Meadows cutting across the middle to put the ball on the 11. But his next two passes were overthrown. Going for it on 4th down, Weidner went to his best receiver, Hillebrand, but Field broke it up.

LSU Chatter

Dietzel: "I didn't think they could run on us, but they could throw the ball really well. We didn't lay our hands on Weidner all day. He is a real good passer and had fine protection. I don't believe we were nearly as sharp today as we were during the season. We weren't spectac-ular ... but we got the job done. And the boys really enjoyed themselves on the trip. A loss would have spoiled the fun."

On the topic on everyone's mind: "Concerning my moving to Army, I put it out of my mind until the Orange Bowl game was over. I'll now give it my full consideration. ... I have no further comment."

Colorado chatter

Grandelius: "We picked the wrong day to make all our mistakes. LSU is a fine football team. I can't take anything away from them. They did a fine job on that rollout pass and run. Our LBs were just not quick enough to stop them. ... We didn't have bad protection on our punts. The LSU linemen were just getting in there. We hadn't come close to having a punt blocked all season. ... Their three teams didn't wear us down. We just made too many mistakes. We didn't play as good football as we had during the year."

Follow-up

1962 Football Season Charles McClendon Coach # 23

Charles also known as “Cholly Mac” McClendon spent his entire coaching career in the SEC, most notably in 18 seasons as the head coach of the LSU Tigers from 1962-1979. He had been assistant coach from 1953 to 1961. Before that, he tried his luck with the Vanderbilt Commodores as assistant coach in 1952. His record was 137-59-7 in 203 career games as the head coach at LSU and led the Tigers to the 1970 SEC championship with a perfect 5-0 record in the conference.

He was named SEC Coach of the Year in 1969 and 1970 and was 7-6 all-time in bowl games. McLendon had 16 winning seasons and just one losing season while at LSU, and he had nine teams finish a season ranked in the top-20 of the final Associated Press poll.

Cholly was inducted into the College Football Hall of Fame in 1986. McClendon remains the longest tenured head coach in program history, and holds the LSU records for most wins by a head coach, most bowl appearances and most bowl wins. McLendon also served as an assistant coach at Vanderbilt and LSU before assuming the head coaching job with the Tigers. He passed away in 2001 at the age of 78.

LSU in 1962

The LSU Fighting Tigers football team represented the LSU Tigers of Louisiana State University during the 1962 Southeastern Conference football season. This was LSU's sixty-ninth season overall and its thirtieth playing as a member of the Southeastern Conference (SEC).

1962 LSU Fighting Tigers Football Play

Led by coach McClendon, the LSU coach with the most time in service, in his first of eighteen as head coach of LSU, the Tigers had a great season at 9-1-1. Their SEC record was 5-1. This brought the Tigers a third place Conference finish. conftie with Alabama for First place in the SEC and a #7 finish in the national coach's poll. It was a great start of eighteen fine years for Coach McClendon.

After a fine season, the Tigers' January 1963 Cotton Bowl victory over Texas made it a great start in the 1962 season for Coach McClendon. It was a fine follow-up to coach Dietzel's last season at 10-1.

Games of the 1962 season

In the season and home opener on September 22, #5 LSU shut-out Texas A&M at Tiger Stadium, Baton Rouge, LA W (21-0). At home on Sep 29, the Rice Owls tied the #5 ranked LSU Tigers at Tiger Stadium, Baton Rouge, LA T (6-6). At Georgia Tech on Oct 6, LSU edged out the Yellowjackets at Grant Field, Atlanta, GA W 10-7. Then, on Oct 13, #6 ranked LSU defeated Miami (FL) at

Tiger Stadium, Baton Rouge, LA, W (17–3). At Kentucky, on Oct 20 at Stoll Field/McLean Stadium, Lexington, KY, LSU beat the WildCats W (7–0). Then, on Oct 27, #6 LSU shut out Florida at home in Tiger Stadium, Baton Rouge, LA W (23–0)

In the only loss of the season, SEC champion Ole Miss defeated LSU at Tiger Stadium, Baton Rouge, LA L (7–15). Then, on Nov 10, LSU beat TCU at home in Tiger Stadium, Baton Rouge, LA W (5–0) LSU beat Mississippi State on Nov 17, at Mississippi Veterans Memorial Stadium, Jackson, MS W (28–0). In the season finale on Nov 24 at Tulane, in the Battle for the Rag, the Tigers beat the Green Wave at Tulane Stadium, New Orleans, LA W (38–3)

Cotton Bowl. On January 1, 1963, at the Cotton Bowl Stadium in Texas playing in the Cotton Bowl Classic, #7 LSU defeated #4 Texas W (13–0)

From the archives:

For the first time in 39 years, Texas went through its regular-season campaign unbeaten. At 9-0-1, the Longhorns' only blemish was a 14-14 tie with Rice in late October. Again, Texas found itself back in the Cotton Bowl, and for the second year in a row, the Longhorns would face an opponent from the Southeastern Conference. For LSU, it had been 16 years since its last appearance in the Classic, and it wasn't a memorable experience, battling Arkansas to a 0-0 tie.

But this time around, the goose egg ended up on only one side of the scoreboard thanks to a pair of Tiger quarterbacks named Lynn Amedee and Jimmy Field. LSU abandoned its conservative "three yards and a cloud of dust" offensive philosophy for a high flying aerial assault on the Texas defense.

The Tigers had completed only 40 passes during the entire season. This was another day, however, as LSU completed 13 of 21 pass attempts, two shy of the record 15 completions set the previous year by 'Ole Miss. The Tigers' big offensive gun was All America halfback Jerry Stovall, and for Texas, Ray Poage, Tommy Ford, and Jerry Cook were the chief offensive threats. Johnny Treadwell was the Longhorns' defensive leader while LSU relied on its famed "Chinese Bandits."

Neither team could generate a sustained drive in the first quarter of play, but late in the second period, with Amedee and Field alternating at quarterback, the Tigers began to move, driving from their 20 to the Texas five-yard line. LSU had used all of its time outs, and with the clock rolling, the Tigers had no choice on third down but to go for three. Field dashed in with the kicking tee and Amedee booted home a 23- yarder with just eight seconds left. This was the Classic's first field goal since the 1942 game and was only the fourth in its 27-year history.

Texas jumped into the frying pan to begin the second half, fumbling the kickoff at the 37. In two minutes, LSU had increased its lead to 10-0. Facing third and nine from the Texas 22, Field dropped back to pass and looked hopelessly trapped by the Longhorn pass rush. Suddenly, Field saw daylight, cutback behind the Texas pursuit and raced 22 yards for his first touchdown of the year. Amedee recorded

How LSU and Syracuse Met in the 1965 Sugar Bowl

Odd how things come around. Doug Moreau vividly remembers as a sports-minded kid in Baton Rouge hearing on the radio about the segregated seating issue before the 1955 Sugar Bowl, and about the flap over Bobby Grier, the first African-American to play in the Sugar Bowl a year later.

The thought that raced through Moreau's 10-year-old mind was: "That sounds silly."

To add to the circumstance a decade later, the only football Moreau ever kicked before he entered LSU was over a telephone line hanging across his backyard. When an assistant coach asked member of the Tiger freshman team who wanted to kick, though, Moreau raised his hand.

“There just wasn’t any high priority on kickers (then),” Moreau said of the offensive weapon that was little more than an afterthought in those days.

It was LSU’s good fortune that Moreau wanted to kick. He kicked a then-NCAA record 13 field goals in 1964, and combined with his pass-receiving duties, scored 73 of the Bengals’ 115 total in the regular season, fully 63 percent of the LSU total.

Clearly, at crunch time, LSU looked to the junior Moreau – bringing him to this point, in a socially-significant Sugar Bowl: lining up a 28-yard attempt against Syracuse with 3:48 to play, with victory, defeat, or most likely a frustrating tie, depending on his left-footed kicking accuracy.

Orangemen running backs Floyd Little and Jim Nance were the first African-Americans to appear on Sugar Bowl rosters since Grier of Pittsburgh in 1956, and were by far the most nationally known figures in the game, having scored 25 touchdowns between them, 14 more than LSU scored as a team in that era when defenses dominated the sport.

But Moreau turned out to be the central figure of the game – just as he was for LSU’s season as a whole.

Not many would actually see it. If East versus SEC was the perfect vehicle for ending the segregation era, it was not a good way to fill the stadium. A crowd of 60,000, the smallest for a Sugar Bowl since 1939, sat in the stands. The teams’ records and the smallest ticket sale (1,300 by Syracuse), more than any political consideration, kept the crowd down.

But what a game those that came witnessed! It went back-and-forth, and the only kind of scoring it lacked was forfeiture.

There were field goals, a safety, touchdowns coming on a blocked punt and a long pass, and a two-point conversion. The Tigers, 5 ½ point favorites, down 10-2 in this topsy-turvy game at intermission, knew they were in for battle to the wire.

On the first possession of the second half, at the Tiger 43, substitute LSU quarterback Billy Ezell stepped into the huddle and called “I-26-wide-and-go.” The play would send Moreau out as a lone receiver. He would run downfield, fake a cut to the sideline and then head for the end zone. In the first quarter Moreau had cleanly beaten defensive back Will Hunter by 15 yards on the same play, but Ezell overthrew him. This time Ezell pumped once and lofted the ball to Moreau at the 25. Moreau said of the second-and-16 play, “When I broke straight, there was the ball.” The touchdown covered 57 yards.

A two-point conversion pulled LSU even at 10.

That’s where things stood until the game moved into the latter stages of the fourth quarter when starting quarterback Pat Screen eased the Tigers to the 8. Coach Charlie McClendon called on Moreau to try to nail his 14th field goal of the season.

“The kick felt good when it left my shoe,” Moreau said of the field goal, “then, before I looked up, Billy (Ezell, the holder) screamed, ‘It’s good!’”

In a game eerily similar to LSU’s season as an entity, Moreau not only was responsible for the winning play, but scored nine of the Tigers’ 13 points.

Jim Nance gained 70 yards and Little gained 48 in something of a collapse of the Syracuse offense. Charlie McClendon became the first former Sugar Bowl player to come back and coach a team to a Sugar Bowl victory.

It was the city of New Orleans that was the big winner, though. Syracuse was happy with its treatment. Nance exuded without solicitation, “I’m going to tell everyone about the splendid treatment we received down there.”

The game marked the end of an era in football, too. The following year Charlie Gogolak of Princeton broke Moreau’s record with 16 field goals, and from then on the field goal became an indispensable part of virtually every offense.

1965 Football Season Charles McClendon Coach # 23

The LSU Fighting Tigers football team represented the LSU Tigers of Louisiana State University during the 1965 Southeastern Conference football season. This was LSU's seventy-second season overall and its thirty-third season playing as a member of the Southeastern Conference (SEC).

Led by coach McClendon, the LSU coach with the most time in service, in his fourth of eighteen seasons as head coach of LSU, the Tigers had a great season at 8-3. Their SEC record was 3-3. This brought the Tigers a sixth place SEC finish. At the national level, the Tigers were ranked #8 in the AP and #14 in the coach's poll.

Games of the 1965 Season

In the home and season opener for LSU, on September 18, the Tigers beat Texas A&M at home in Tiger Stadium, Baton Rouge, LA W (10-0). At home again on Sep 25, LSU pounded Rice at Tiger Stadium, Baton Rouge, LA W (42-14). At Florida on Oct 2 at Florida Field in Gainesville, FL, the Gators got the win L (7-14). At Miami on Oct 9 in a game played at the Miami Orange Bowl in Miami, FL, LSU prevailed W (34-27) On Oct 16 at home, LSU beat Kentucky at Tiger Stadium, Baton Rouge, LA, W (31-21). Then, on Oct 23 at home, LSU beat South Carolina at Tiger Stadium, Baton Rouge, LA W (21-7)

On Oct 30, Ole Miss shut out LSU at Mississippi Veterans Memorial Stadium, Jackson, L (0-23). At home on Nov 6, Alabama pounded LSU in Tiger Stadium, Baton Rouge, LA L (7-31) . Then, on Nov 13, LSU beat Mississippi State at Tiger Stadium, Baton Rouge, LA W 37-20. In the Battle for the Rag classic game, on Nov 20, LSU shellacked Tulane at Tiger Stadium, Baton Rouge, LA W (62-0)

The 1966 Cotton Bowl

January 1, 1966 vs. No. 2 Arkansas. The Cotton Bowl:

In the Cotton Bowl Classic at Cotton Bowl Stadium in Dallas, TX, LSU defeated #2 Arkansas W (14–7)

For the second time in four years, the Bengal Tigers presented coach Charles McClendon with a perfect Cotton Bowl game. Unranked LSU (7-3-0) sprang one of the Classic's biggest upsets, downing No. 2 Arkansas, 14-7, and ended college football's longest winning streak at 22. The Hogs (10-0-0) last defeat came by the same score, on the same Cotton Bowl turf, to SMU in the ninth game of 1963. That also was the last time the Hogs had been blanked in the final two quarters until the Bengals turned the trick today.

Arkansas had not beaten LSU since 1929, and in the 1947 Classic the two teams battled to a scoreless tie. But, things were different now. The Razorbacks were the heavy favorites, and the unexpected happened. Prone to turnovers and injuries throughout the season, LSU did not yield a fumble or an interception to the Hogs while quarterback Pat Screen handled the mixture of short passing and the inside power game to perfection.

But it didn't start out that way. On its second possession, Arkansas rolled 87 yards on 11 brilliantly executed plays en-route to its only score. Harry Jones dazzled the Tigers with power sweeps and Bobby Burnett pounded the middle. Quarterback Jon Brittenum was in total control, and whipped a 19-yard aerial to Bobby Crockett for the touchdown. The drive consumed just 1:27 and the Razorbacks were on the scoreboard, 7-0.

The Tigers roared back two possessions later for an 80 yard march of their own. Tailbacks Jim Dousay and Joe Labruzzo pounded the middle of the Hogs' defense repeatedly with short but effective gains that led to the Arkansas end zone. The LSU drive consisted of 16 plays, and by the time Labruzzo carried over from the three, a full 8:17 had elapsed. Doug Moreau's kick tied it at 7-7. Three plays after the LSU touchdown, Brittenum was forced to the sideline with a shoulder injury. His replacement, Ronny South, fumbled on the very next play at the Arkansas 34. LSU seized the momentum. Labruzzo again hammered for short yardage, carrying on five consecutive plays, the last one took him over for the score with 18 seconds left in the half and LSU led for the first time.

Brittenum returned to duty for the Hogs in the third quarter and twice moved Arkansas inside LSU territory, only to come up empty each time. LSU couldn't move the ball at all and failed to gain a first down the entire period. However, as the fourth quarter rolled around, momentum had shifted again. LSU began a march that would take them all the way to the Arkansas two before the Hog defense forced the Tigers to go for three. But, the kick sailed wide and the Hogs had escaped.

Twice in the closing minutes, Brittenum took his Hogs on long drives, only to be intercepted at the LSU 20 to kill the first one, and time simply ran out on them at the end with the ball on the Tiger 24. LSU had done it again. Three years before, they surprised mighty Texas, 13-0. Now the victim was Arkansas, 14-7.

1966 Football Season Charles McClendon Coach # 23

The LSU Fighting Tigers football team represented the LSU Tigers of Louisiana State University during the 1966 Southeastern Conference football season. This was LSU's seventy-third season overall and its thirty-fourth season playing as a member of the Southeastern Conference (SEC).

Led by coach McClendon, the LSU coach with the most time in service, in his fifth of eighteen seasons as head coach of LSU, the Tigers had a great season at 5-4-1. Their SEC record was 3-3. This brought the Tigers a sixth place SEC finish. At the national level, the Tigers were ranked #8 in the AP and #14 in the coach's poll.

Games of the 1966 Season

In the season and home opener for LSU on September 17, 1966, the Tigers defeated South Carolina in Tiger Stadium, Baton Rouge, LA W (28-12). On Sep 24 at Rice in a game played at Rice Stadium, Houston, TX, the Owls prevailed L (15-17). On Oct 1, LSU beat Miami at home in Tiger Stadium, Baton Rouge, LA W (10-8). On Oct 8, Texas A&M tied LSU at Tiger Stadium, Baton Rouge, LA T (7-7). At Kentucky on Oct 15, in a game played at Stoll Field/McLean Stadium, Lexington, KY. LSU pitched a shutout W

(30–0). On Oct 22. #8 Florida beat LSU at Tiger Stadium, Baton Rouge, LA L (7–28)

Ole Miss defeated LSU on Oct 29 at Tiger Stadium, Baton Rouge, LA L (0–17). Then #4 Alabama beat LSU on Nov 5 at Legion Field in Birmingham, AL L (0–21). On Nov 12 at home LSU beat Mississippi St at Tiger Stadium, Baton Rouge, LA W (17–7). At Tulane in the Battle for the Rag, on Nov 19, the Tigers beat the Green Wave at Tulane Stadium, New Orleans, LA W (21–7)

LSU was not invited to any postseason bowl game.

1967 Football Season Charles McClendon Coach # 23

The LSU Fighting Tigers football team represented the LSU Tigers of Louisiana State University during the 1967 Southeastern Conference football season. This was LSU's seventy-fourth season overall and its thirty-fifth season playing as a member of the Southeastern Conference (SEC).

Led by coach McClendon, the LSU coach with the most time in service, in his sixth of eighteen seasons as head coach of LSU, the Tigers had a great season at 7-3-1. Their SEC record was 3-2-1. This brought the Tigers a sixth place SEC finish. At the national level, the Tigers were ranked #8 in the AP and #14 in the coach's poll.

For Coach McClendon, this was the second time in three seasons that the team was extended a bid to a New Year's Day bowl game despite three losses. And as they did in the 1966 Cotton Bowl, the Tigers toppled an undefeated team in the 1968 Sugar Bowl, taking out Wyoming 20–13. It was LSU's last appearance in the Sugar Bowl for 17 years.

Games of the 1967 Season

In the season and home opener on September 23, 1967, LSU defeated Rice at Tiger Stadium, Baton Rouge, LA W (20–14). At home again on Sep 30, LSU beat Texas A&M at Tiger Stadium, Baton Rouge, LA W (17–6). At Florida on Oct 7, LSU smothered the Gators at Florida Field, Gainesville, FL W 37–6. Sporting an undefeated, record at the time on Oct 14, LSU was defeated by Miami FL at Tiger Stadium in Baton Rouge, LA L (15–17). The following week, on Oct 21, LSU came right back against Kentucky at Tiger Stadium, Baton Rouge, LA W (30–7). Then, on Oct 29 at #4 Tennessee, the Volunteers edged out LSU at Neyland Stadium in Knoxville, TN L (14–17)

On November 4 Ole Miss tied LSU in the Mississippi Veterans Memorial Stadium, Jackson, MS T (13–13). Then against Alabama on Nov 11, the Crimson Tide nosed out LSU in a tight match at home in Tiger Stadium Baton Rouge, LA L (6–7). On Nov 18, LSU came back with an overwhelming shellacking of Mississippi St at Tiger Stadium, Baton Rouge, LA W 55–0. In the season finale the Battle for the Rag, played on Nov 25 at home, LSU beat Tulane at Tiger Stadium Baton Rouge, LA W (41-27)

1967 Sugar Bowl

LSU kept its positive record in post season bowl games by defeating #6 Wyoming on January 1, 1968 at 12:30 PM, Tulane Stadium in New Orleans, LA winning the Sugar Bowl W (20–13)

LSU 20 (Final: 7-3-1)
#6 Wyoming 13 (Final: 10-1-0)

How LSU and Wyoming Met in the 1968 Sugar Bowl

This was one of those Games of My Life – an unexpected performance by an unexpected player at an unexpected time, and one never equaled again.

Nobody knew much about third-string sophomore tailback Glenn Smith, except high school aficionados in New Orleans who remembered him from prep powerhouse Holy Cross.

Wyoming coach Lloyd Eaton was much more concerned about the cold, damp and soggy Sugar Bowl turf under drizzly skies. Eaton said on New Year’s Eve, “I believe the weather could be an important factor. The team with the best runners and pass receivers, and the heaviest linemen, would have the advantage on a wet field.” Everyone agreed that on all accounts those conditions favored LSU. “We were limited in that we had a sparse club,” said Eaton, whose 47-man club was a six-point underdog. “Charlie McClendon would use 55-60 players routinely. We just didn’t have that kind of depth, and I knew by the fourth quarter our boys would be leg weary.”

Obviously, the best thing Eaton could hope for was to be far enough ahead after three quarters to withstand a fourth-quarter assault.

It very nearly worked out that way. LSU, which hadn’t played particularly well in any of its previous seven Sugar Bowl appearances, showed signs of that malaise again.

Dominating the first half, the seemingly much more animated Cowboys finally got points when Jim Kiick went over on the first play of the second quarter. Jerry DePoyster added to the lead with a 24-yard field goal with 2:58 remaining in the half, then got another one – a Sugar Bowl record 49-yarder – with one second to go.

Eaton's troops not only had a 13-0 lead, but had 11 first downs to LSU's 1. The Cowboys had outrushed the Tigers 130-33, and outgained LSU in passing yardage 85-5.

"We were very worried by the half," said Tiger center Barry Wilson, who had been a high school teammate of Smith. "The field turned up a little sloppy, and it upset our plans to block Wyoming low. Because we weren't able to get solid footing, they merely pushed us off and got to the ball-carrier. They were also able to put a lot of pressure on (quarterback) Nelson (Stokley). At halftime we decided to take advantage of their pursuit by starting to the outside and then running back against the grain."

Also, after DePoyster barely missed a 46-yard field goal, Smith was inserted into the lineup.

Flying out of the backfield, Smith took a pass over his shoulder and slogged his way down the middle to the 26 for a 39-yard gain – LSU's first real sign of life in the game. Smith went in from the 1, and Roy Hurd's PAT cut the margin to 13-7.

With Stokley throwing medium passes and running the option, and Smith constantly picking his holes and cutting back, the Tigers threatened again. "Glenn was great at (running to daylight)," Wilson said. Tommy Morel out-jumped two defenders for an eight-yard touchdown, but Hurd missed the PAT, leaving the score tied with 11:39 to play. Following an interception, Stockley rolled out from the Cowboy 14, spotted a wide-open Morel at the 1 and threw for LSU's go-ahead points.

With 1:37 left, Wyoming made for a wild finish. From his 18, Paul Toscano dropped and threw to a more than adequately covered George Anderson. One of three Tigers converging on the ball reached up and tipped it – right into the tight end's hands. Anderson was suddenly racing, alone, for points. "When I saw Anderson take off with the football," said cornerback Barton Frye, "I started running for my life. I don't know if I can run that fast again." He caught and brought down Anderson 54 yards downfield, at the LSU 18.

“I would have given half a year’s salary for 10 more seconds,” moaned Eaton. “Just 10 more seconds.”

Depth, the very factor Eaton most feared, was the difference. Smith, with little more than a quarter’s playing time, finished with 74 yards rushing and caught one pass for 39 yards to be named the game’s MVP.

Smith had a different perspective on the biggest Sugar Bowl comeback since Tulane fell behind Temple 14-0 in 1935. “If Wyoming had beaten us,” Smith who never did start a game at LSU, said, “I wouldn’t have been able to go home.”

1968 Football Season Charles McClendon Coach # 23

The LSU Fighting Tigers football team represented the LSU Tigers of Louisiana State University during the 1968 Southeastern Conference football season. This was LSU's seventy-fifth season overall and its thirty-sixth season playing as a member of the Southeastern Conference (SEC).

Led by coach McClendon, the LSU coach with the most time in service, in his seventh of eighteen seasons as head coach of LSU, the Tigers had a great season at 8-3. Their SEC record was 4-2. This brought the Tigers a fourth place SEC finish. At the national level, the Tigers were ranked #19 in the AP..

The LSU offense scored 221 points while the defense allowed 171 points. The Tigers competed in the inaugural Peach Bowl and beat Florida State, 31–27.

Games of the 1968 Season

In the season and home opener on September 21, 1968, LSU defeated #13 ranked Texas A&M at Tiger Stadium in Baton Rouge, LA W (13–12). At Rice on Sep 28, LSU beat the Owls at Rice Stadium, Houston, TX, W (21–7). At home on Oct 5, LSU thumped Baylor at Tiger Stadium, Baton Rouge, LA, W 48–16. Then on Oct. 11 at Miami, the Hurricanes pounded the Tigers at the Orange Bowl in Miami, FL, L (30–0). At home on Oct 19, LSU beat Kentucky at Tiger Stadium, Baton Rouge, LA W (13–3). Playing at home again on Oct 26, LSU defeated Texas Christian University, (TCU) at Tiger Stadium, Baton Rouge, LA W (10–7)

Peach Bowl December 30, 1968

In the Peach Bowl vs. Florida State on December 30, 1968, played at Grant Field in Atlanta, GA, LSU edged out the Seminoles W 31–27. This was the first Peach Bowl game ever played.

For LSU it was a sloppy game with a happy ending. The Tigers committed four turnovers on their first four possessions that were converted by Florida State (FSU) into two first half touchdowns. FSU thus has a 13–0 lead at the second quarter.

But the Tigers were not finished. Soon after their game low point, they narrowed the lead when Craig Burns returned a short punt 39 yards for a touchdown. Before the half ended, LSU's Mark Lumpkin kicked a field goal to make it 13–10 at halftime.

The Tigers came to life big time live in the second half, driving 51 yards in eight plays. The drive culminated on a Mike Hillman to Bob Hamlett TD pass to take the lead 17–13. On LSU's next drive, Hillman threw another touchdown pass. This pass went to Bill Stober and just like that, the lead was then 24–13. It looked like LSU was on its way to another bowl victory.

As the fourth quarter began, the Seminoles took the ball like they meant it. They could not be stopped on this 4Q opening drive. Instead, they drove down the field 72 yards culminated in a Bill Cappleman pass to Ron Sellers for a touchdown. This narrowed LSU's lead to less than a TD.

On the next kickoff, the Tigers committed another mistake. They fumbled the ball back to the Seminoles in Tiger territory, giving FSU a great opportunity to catch up. Just a few plays later the Seminoles scored again on another touchdown catch from Sellers. At this point, it did not look good as the Seminoles had a 27-24 lead; there were just six moments to go; LSU had developed fumble-itis, and FSU had momentum on their side.

Despite how it felt in the stadium, the Tigers went to work, going on a nine play, 61 yard drive. During the drive, at one time, LSU converted a play on a third and 19. Maurice LeBlanc came through with the touchdown run. But the 'Noles were not finished. They drove down the field and were in range for a game winner when on 4th down, Barton Frye knocked down a pass intended for Sellers. Instead of a TD and the win, the Seminoles simply ended the game with an incomplete pass and this and sealed the game for the Tigers. It was their 4th straight bowl win.

1969 Football Season Charles McClendon Coach # 23

The LSU Fighting Tigers football team represented the LSU Tigers of Louisiana State University during the 1969 Southeastern Conference football season. This was LSU's seventy-sixth season overall and its thirty-seventh season playing as a member of the Southeastern Conference (SEC).

Led by coach McClendon, the LSU coach with the most time in service, in his eighth of eighteen seasons as head coach of LSU, the Tigers had a great season at 9-1. Their SEC record was 4-1. This brought the Tigers a 2nd place SEC finish. At the national level, the Tigers were ranked #7 in the Coach's poll and #10 in the AP.

Despite the great year, circumstances did not favor McClendon's Tigers in 1969. Despite a terrific 9-1 record, LSU was not invited to a major bowl game. They were shut out of the Cotton Bowl and Sugar Bowl, and they did not accept playing in a second tier game such as the Bluebonnet, Gator and Peach bowls. So, they played no bowl game for the 1969 season.

LSU was looking to appear in the Cotton Bowl, because the winner of the Texas-Arkansas game would be ranked no lower than No. 3 in the Associated Press poll, and quite possibly No. 1. However, when Notre Dame voted to participate in bowl games for the first time since 1924, the Cotton snapped up the Irish. The Sugar Bowl, peeved by a perceived snub from a school just 80 miles away, instead chose Ole Miss, which, despite beating LSU 26-23, had only a 7-3 record.

As the post-season turned out, Texas ascended to No. 1 after Ohio State lost 24-12 at Michigan. The Longhorns kept their top ranking by defeating archrivals Texas A&M 49-12 and Arkansas 15-14, then knocking off Notre Dame 21-17 in the Cotton Bowl. LSU's 20-15 victory over Alabama was its last home win over the Crimson Tide until 2000. But it was a good win, nonetheless.

Games of the 1969 Season

In the home and season opener on September 20, 1969, LSU clobbered Texas A&M at Tiger Stadium Baton Rouge, LA W (35-6). At Rice on Sep 27, in Rice Stadium Houston, TX, LSU smothered the Owls in a major shutout W (42-0). On Oct 4, LSU shellacked Baylor at Tiger Stadium in Baton Rouge, LA, W (63-8). At Miami on Oct 10 at the Miami Orange Bowl Stadium in Miami, FL, LSU shutout the Hurricanes W (20-0). On Oct 18, LSU

continued its schedule dominance with a smashing of Kentucky at Stoll Field/McLean Stadium in Lexington, KY W (37–10). On Oct 25, LSU nosed out a tough Auburn squad at home in Tiger Stadium Baton Rouge, LA W (21–20)

All good things must come to an end. The LSU win streak ended with a tough loss against Ole Miss at Mississippi Veterans Memorial Stadium in Jackson, MS L (23–26). The Tigers pulled out a close win at Alabama at home on Nov 8 in Tiger Stadium, Baton Rouge, LA W (20–15). After two tough games, LSU was ready for a rout and on Nov 15, the Tigers decimated Mississippi State at Tiger Stadium Baton Rouge, LA W (61–6). In the season finale, on Nov 22, LSU shutout Tulane at Tiger Stadium Baton Rouge, LA in the annual Battle for the Rag, W (27–0)

Despite a great season, no post-season bowl game for LSU.

Great LSU Players Ron Estay DT, DE 1969-1971

Ron Estay was a first-team All-American in 1971 and earned All-SEC honors in 1970-71, as well as Academic All-SEC honors in 1970. He anchored an LSU defense that led the nation in rushing yards allowed in 1969 (38.9 ypg) and 1970 (52.2). During his years, the Tigers went a combined 27-7 from 1969-71, winning the 1970 SEC championship.

He was a native of Larose, also the hometown of LSU coach Ed Orgeron. Estay went on to play 11 seasons in the Canadian Football League, playing on six Grey Cup winning teams.

Great LSU Players Tommy Casanova S 1969-1971

It only makes sense that Tommy Casanova would play for the LSU Tigers. He was born in New Orleans, and went to High School at the Catholic Notre Dame High School in Crowley, Louisiana, where he still resides.

Regarded as one of, if not the best, player to ever pull on the white LSU jersey, Casanova was a three-time member of the College Football All-America team from 1969-71, and is a member of the Walter Camp Football Foundation All-Century team. He is the only three-time All-American in LSU history.

Similar to a fictitious LSU legend named Gavin Gray from the movie, Everyone's All-American, Casanova could do it all. He played running back, punt returner, kick returner, and defensive back.

In the September 13, 1971 issue of Sports Illustrated, the magazine featured Casanova on the front cover, with the headline: "Tommy Casanova of LSU, Best Player in the Nation."

Casanova loved (pun intended) playing in the big games on television. He played a major part in televised victories over #14 Auburn in 1969, a 14-9 victory at #19 Alabama in 1970, #8 LSU's 61-17 victory over #16 Ole Miss in 1970, and #14 LSU's 28-8 victory over #7 Notre Dame in 1971.

His #37 jersey was retired from LSU football on October 10, 2009.

The NFL came calling in the spring of 1972 as the Cincinnati Bengals made him a second round pick. He played safety for the Bengals for five seasons and in that short time was a Pro Bowl selection for four consecutive years starting in 1974. He would finish his brief, but productive, career 17 interceptions.

Proving to be more than just a football player, Casanova attended medical school while playing in Cincinnati. In 1977 he retired from the NFL to pursue his degree full time. He graduated from the University of Cincinnati College of Medicine in 1980, and then began a three-year residency in ophthalmology in New Orleans. He returned to his hometown of Crowley to become an ophthalmologist.

The story of Casanova's incredible post football career turned to politics as he threw his hat into the ring for the Louisiana State Senate. He would go on to upset veteran state Senator Armand Brinkhaus of Sunset and was a member of the State Senate from 1996-2000.

After a single term, Casanova declined to seek reelection and returned to his ophthalmology practice in Crowley.

1970 Football Season Charles McClendon Coach # 23

The LSU Fighting Tigers football team represented the LSU Tigers of Louisiana State University during the 1970 Southeastern Conference football season. This was LSU's seventy-seventh season overall and its thirty-eighth season playing as a member of the Southeastern Conference (SEC).

Led by coach McClendon, the LSU coach with the most time in service, in his ninth of eighteen seasons as head coach of LSU, the Tigers had a great season at 9-3. Their SEC record was 5-0. This brought the Tigers a 1st place SEC finish and the SEC Championship. At the national level, the Tigers were ranked #6 in the Coach's poll and #7 in the AP.

For the first time in their 77-year history, the Tigers played the Fighting Irish of Notre Dame. Unfortunately, Notre Dame prevailed in a close match. Following this 3-0 loss to a # 2 ranked Notre Dame squad at South Bend, LSU was extended a bid to face Big Eight Conference champion Nebraska in the Orange Bowl. ND for its part was undefeated at the time and only after losing to USC in the second-last game did the Irish settle for a 2nd place national finish in the AP poll.

Despite being offered the Orange Bowl, with one loss, the invitation was conditional. It was contingent on the Tigers defeating both Tulane at New Orleans and Ole Miss at Baton Rouge in the final two weeks of the season. LSU pulled it off and made it to the Orange Bowl.

Still upset about being shut out of the major bowl games in 1969 despite a 9-1 record, LSU responded to the challenge. The Tigers overcame a stubborn Tulane squad, which earned a Liberty Bowl invitation, and then dismantled Ole Miss 61-17 in front of a large television audience and nearly 70,000 fans in Tiger Stadium. In that game, Tommy Casanova tied an NCAA record with two punt return touchdowns in a single game. Casanova and linebacker Mike Anderson were recognized as consensus All-Americans. It was a great season with the SEC Championship in the bag.

Top LSU Players Bert Jones QB 1971-1972

Before Joe Burrow came to LSU, there were some LSU fans have not been pleased with the quarterback play for the Tigers over the past couple of years, but back in the early 1970s, the Tigers had one of the best signal callers in the land under center.

Jones starred at LSU in the 70s, putting up some eye-popping numbers during his time in purple and gold. He completed 53 percent of his passes for 3,225 yards and 28 touchdowns during his college career. At the time, that was the record for most yards and touchdowns of any quarterback to wear an LSU uniform.

Bert Jones A Top LSU QB

During his senior season, Jones led the Tigers to a 9-2-1 record and became the first quarterback in LSU history to be named an All-American.

This outstanding signal caller went on to finish fourth in the Heisman Trophy race that season and was selected second overall in the 1973 NFL Draft by the Baltimore Colts.

In the season finale at Tulane on Nov 28 at Tulane Stadium in New Orleans, LA (Battle for the Rag), W (26-14). Then, on Dec 5, LSU whipped Ole Miss at home in Tiger Stadium, Baton Rouge, LA W (61-17)

Orange Bowl v Nebraska January 1, 1971:

LSU had a great bowl win record but that was not enough to get them the win over Nebraska on January , 1971 in a match vs. #3 Nebraska* $5 LSU fell short of a victory at Orange Bowl Stadium in Miami, FL in the Orange Bowl Game L (12-17).

Nebraska's Defense Steals Louisiana State's Thunder

Nebraska's Joe Orduna finds an opening and scores against LSU at the 1971 Orange Bowl.

By Wally Provost / World-Herald Sports Editor

MIAMI —... This game did not include LSU's finest hour LSU netted only 51 yards on the ground while finishing second in total offense, 278 to 293.

In 11 games during the regular season, LSU had yielded only two touchdowns on the ground. Nebraska crossed the goal line twice — on a three-yard plunge by Joe Orduna and a one-yard shot by Tagge. Perhaps the most memorable picture of the game will be that of Tagge, perched atop a heap of bodies at the middle of the line, stretching out his long arms to guarantee penetration of the "plane" of the goal with the ball.

Nebraska's first points came on a 26-yard field goal in the opening quarter by Paul Rogers, who also converted after both touchdowns. LSU tallied on field goals of 36 and 25 yards by Mark Lumpkin, and on a 31-yard aerial play, Buddy Lee to sprint king Wayne Coffee. All-American John Sage of LSU was the game's leading tackler with 11 solos and three assists. But All-America linebacker Jerry Murtaugh came out ahead of All-America counterpart Mike Anderson with totals of 9-1 to the latter's 8-1.

The Cornhuskers trailed by 10-12 going into the final period after LSU delivered its touchdown pass with time having run out in the third period.

N.U. defender Jim Anderson slipped and fell on that play, but Coffee might have made it to the end zone regardless. He had sprinted the 100 in :09.4 and holds SEC records for both the 220 (:20.8) and 440 (:45.6).

Working from its 33 following Jim Carstens' fielding of a difficult kickoff, Nebraska twice made third-down hurdles — with Orduna carrying on one and Tagge pitching to Jeff Kinney on the other. At this point Nebraska had a first down on the LSU five.

Kinney hit left tackle for about three behind a cracking good block by Danny Schneiss. Tagge lunged into the center of the line but was about a foot short of the goal. Tagge's next effort got the job done with 8:50 remaining in the game.

Louisiana State then proceeded to make life precarious for heart patients among the some 16,000 N.U. followers by driving from its 16 to the 39 with growing momentum.

However, three straight passes by Lee were incomplete, thanks to a heavy pass rush and sharp coverage in the secondary. The third miss found Harper stunning Lee with a thunderous tackle.

When Wayne Dickinson punted on fourth down, LSU rooters yelled with joy as Harper crashed into the kicker. Harper had been blocked into Dickinson by Jim Benglis, though, and the officials ruled no violation.

The pressured punt was good for only four yards, going out on the Tiger 43. Now the Nebraska rooters were celebrating with just 6:29 to play.

Nebraska drove to just outside the LSU 13, but Orduna, fumbled on his next carry. LSU recovered on its own 13.

Now the LSU quarterback was Bert Jones, the youngster credited with the "strongest arm" in the school's modern football history.

On second down, Jones passed to 6-foot-3 end Gerald Keigley for a first-and-10 on its 26. On the following play, Ed Periard and Johnny Adkins barreled through to knock down Jones for a seven-yard loss.

Next play, it was Adkins, a 220-pound junior from Lynchburg, Va., smearing Jones for a loss of 12. Jones is a tough customer. He got up from that shellacking to hit tall, clever Andy Hamilton with a 31-yard pass.

The same combination advanced the ball to the LSU 44 on next down. With 2:07 remaining and the Tigers nearing midfield, their fans were delirious with delight.

Chris Dantin, subbing for the better known Art Cantrelle, benched with an ankle sprain in the first half, dashed to the 47. One yard was needed on third down. Jones kept for two.

On the next play, Harper grabbed the ball and ran five yards to the LSU 43.

Now Nebraska was out to kill time, but LSU called time out after Tagge lost about 12 inches with a cautious lunge and again after Kinney made two yards. No more time-outs for the desperate Tigers. It was pure pandemonium in the Orange Bowl when Nebraska fumbled on third down and end Buddy Millican recovered on the LSU 40 with 52 seconds to play.

Next a Jones pass to the dangerous Hamilton was intercepted by Bob Terrio, junior linebacker from Fullerton, Calif., on the Nebraska 38.

Tagge worked two protective keepers as time ran out. Fans still were chanting the final seconds when Kinney began jumping and holding both hands high to indicate "No. 1" for Nebraska.

The victory was Nebraska's 11th against no losses and the Southern Cal tie in a long but richly rewarding season that produced the Big Eight title among other honors. LSU, which saw its bowl victory string cut at four, closes with a 9-3 record.

Sun Bowl: December 18 vs. Iowa State*No. 11

Game Day: December 18, 1971

It was like an ambush as #10 LSU pounded #17 Iowa State in the second half to win 33-15 in the first ever Sun Bowl sellout.

The only scoring in the first half was a pair of LSU field goals and one by ISU. Led by Jimmy Rogers, Jr. Most Valuable Lineman Matt Blair, the Iowa State defense stood firm against the Tigers, including a first-half goal-line stand.

In the second quarter, LSU All-American quarterback Bert Jones hit Andy Hamilton with a 77-yard pass to put the ball on the Iowa State four-yard line. However, the Tigers could not convert and the Cyclones took over on downs to end the half.

LSU entered the second half with a new enthusiasm led by C.M. Hendricks MVP Jones who completed two touchdown passes. The first was a 37-yard strike his cousin, Andy Hamilton. The second was a 21-yard toss to Gerald Keigley. Kicker Jay Michaelson nailed the first extra point attempt, but missed the second to bring the score to 19-3.

Iowa State countered with a Dean Carlson 30-yard touchdown pass to Larry Marquardt late in the third quarter. The fourth quarter opened with another touchdown, a one yard toss to Keith Krepfle from Carlson. The score was 19-15, but LSU was ready to extend the lead.

Jones threw his third touchdown pass of the game to Michaelson midway through the fourth. The LSU quarterback further added to Iowa States misery rushing for a touchdown of his own with 3:00 remaining in the game. The final was 33-15.

The Tigers were led by Jones, two-time All-American cornerback Tom Casanova and Lombardi Award finalist Ron Estay. Jones completed 12 of 18 passes for 227 yards, threw three touchdowns and rushed for one. Hamilton caught six passes for 165 yards and one score. The 1971 LSU defense allowed the fewest yards in the nation.

The Cyclones were led by head coach Johnny Majors, who would later bring two other teams to the Sun Bowl Pittsburgh and Tennessee. George Amundson was the first Cyclone to rush for 1000 yards in a season, but the LSU defense held him to only 56 yards.

1972 Football Season Charles McClendon Coach # 23

The LSU Fighting Tigers football team represented the LSU Tigers of Louisiana State University during the 1972 Southeastern Conference football season. This was LSU's seventy-ninth season overall and its fortieth season playing as a member of the Southeastern Conference (SEC).

Led by coach McClendon, the LSU coach with the most time in service, in his eleventh of eighteen seasons as head coach of LSU, the Tigers had a great season at 9-2-1. Their SEC record was 4-1-1.

This brought the Tigers a 3rd place SEC finish. At the national level, the Tigers were ranked #10 in the Coach's poll and #11 in the AP.

Games of the 1972 Season

In the season and home opener on September 16 , LSU beat Pacific (CA) at Tiger Stadium, Baton Rouge, LA W (31–13). On Sept 23, LSU whipped Texas A&M at Tiger Stadium, Baton Rouge, LA W (42–17). At home on Sep 30, LSU beat Wisconsin at Tiger Stadium, Baton Rouge, LA W (27–7). At Rice on Oct 7 at Rice Stadium in Houston, LSU beat the Owls W (12–6). On Oct 14, #8 LSU overpowered # 9 Auburn at Tiger Stadium, Baton Rouge, LA W (35–7) At home on Oct 21, LSU beat Kentucky at Tiger Stadium, Baton Rouge, LA W (10–0).

At home again on Nov 4, LSU beat Ole Miss at Tiger Stadium Baton Rouge, LA W (17–16), At #2 Alabama, on Nov 11, the Crimson Tide beat LSU at Legion Field, Birmingham, AL L (21–35). Then, on Nov 18, LSU beat Mississippi State at Tiger Stadium Baton Rouge, LA W (28–14). At Florida on Nov 25, the Gators played the Tigers to a tie game at Florida Field in Gainesville, FL T (3–3). In the Battle for the Rag on Dec 2, at Tulane Stadium in New Orleans, LA LSU defeated the Green Wave W (9–3

Bluebonnet Bowl December 30, 1972

In the Bluebonnet Bowl on December 30, 1972. #11 Tennessee beat #10 LSU in the Astrodome, Houston, TX (Astro-Bluebonnet Bowl) L (17–24).

From the Archives of the NY Times:

HOUSTON, Dec. 30 (AP) — Condredge Holloway, a QB who passed up a $90,000 pro baseball contract to play football, scored two touchdowns and passed for another in the first half to lead 11th-ranked Tennessee to a 24-17 victory over 10th-ranked LSU in the 14th annual Astor-Blue Bonnet Bowl.

Holloway scored touchdowns on runs of 15 and 10 yards and threw a 6-yard touchdown pass to Jimmy Young in the first half as the Volunteers took a 24-3 half - time lead.

Rusty Jackson, one of the top punters in the nation, booted a 29-yard field goal for LSU's only score in the first half. Ricky Townsend, a soccer style barefoot kicker, booted a 33-yard field goal for Tennessee in the second quarter.

However, Tennessee's defense had to secure the game in the second half, the Tigers stopped Tennessee's advance in the third quarter and scored touchdowns on a 2-yard run by Bert Jones and a 1-yard plunge by Brad Davis.

The L.S.U. offense had been dormant in the first half, but they found some life in the second half. They were apparently headed for the tying touchdown late in the fourth quarter. Jones directed the Tigers to the Volunteers' 22- yard line with a minute 55 seconds left in the game. But bad luck prevailed as a defensive back, Conrad Graham, who led Tennessee with seven interceptions, batted down a fourth-down pass and Tennessee ran out the clock.

Holloway, a confident sophomore from Huntsville, Ala., completed seven straight passes at one stretch. He was named the outstanding offensive player of the game. Johnson, a defensive end who personally stopped another L.S.U. drive with consecutive quarterback dumps of 0 and 8 yards, was named the game's outstanding lineman.

It was the third straight Bowl victory for the Tennessee Coach, Bill Battle. LSU's coach Charles McClendon saw his team lose their second bowl game in as many seasons.

Top LSU Players Warren Capone LB 1971-1973

He is another of the long line of Baton Rouge natives who starred at LSU. Capone played in the Sun, Bluebonnet and Orange Bowls during his years as a starting linebacker. He was First Team All-SEC by AP in 1972 and by both AP and UPI in 1973. He played for Birmingham in the World Football League and the Dallas Cowboys in the Super Bowl. Warren Capone is also the past president of the National "L" Club.

<<< Warren Capone

Capone has been honored by the Football Writers Association of America (1972-73), and the Kodak/American Football Coaches Association (1973).

After being a star player in high school, Capone accepted a football scholarship from Louisiana State University. At LSU he was a three-year starter and led the team in his last 2 seasons. He was a great player and is one of only eight players in LSU football history to be named to the College Football All-America Team twice. He was also a two-time All-SEC selection in 1972 and 1973.

In 1988, he was inducted into the Louisiana State University Athletic Hall of Fame. He was also named to the LSU All-Century team and. Warren Capone is one of the best linebackers in LSU football history.[

Penn State at the Orange Bowl, 1974

by Deb Kiner | dkiner@pennlive.com

"Penn State Twists Tigers' Tail, 16-9," read the headline in The Patriot on Jan. 2, 1974 - the day after the Penn State Nittany Lions bested LSU in the Orange Bowl Classic.

Ronnie Christ wrote, "The win gave Penn State its first 12-game winner in school history and continued Joe Paterno's unbroken record of never losing in the Orange Bowl.

This one didn't come easy. A cat-quick and clawing LSU defense forced Penn State out of its normal patterns. State came into this game averaging better than 300 yards rushing per game. They came out of it with just 31.

"The turn of events was attributable to three things - the LSU defense, a heavy afternoon rain which made the Orange Bowl poly turf slick, and John Cappelletti being forced to play with his right ankle taped both inside and outside of his shoe to protect a sprain he suffered in practice here.

"LSU got the jump on the Lions, who started out as if they had left their defense on the Miami beaches.

"But after allowing LSU to score the first time it touched the football, the Lions defenders bounced back to shut out the Tigers the rest of the way."

The Nittany Lions left for Florida on the evening of Dec. 25, 1973. The Patriot photographers were there.

Penn State, according to Christ, brought the largest contingent of players ever to go to any bowl game with 95, including freshmen.

Administrators also attended in record numbers. Penn State used two charter planes. The players were provided with cars (five to a car) and told to enjoy themselves outside of the two-hour practices and team meetings in the days leading up to the bowl game, according to Christ.

Junior defensive back Jim Bradley, an accomplished swimmer and diver, received eight stitches soon after the Lions arrived when he hit his head on the bottom of the pool at the Ivanhoe, Penn State's headquarters.

Bradley told Christ on Dec. 28, 1973, that he jumped off the high dive and didn't remember anything after that. He was expected, however, to be cleared to play in the bowl game.

Here's how the game went down: The Tigers' Steve Rogers gave LSU an early lead on his early touchdown run, but Penn State came right back and responded with a field goal by Chris Bahr by the end of the first quarter to make it 7-3.

Early in the second quarter, Chuck Herd caught a 72 yard (one handed grab) pass from Tom Shuman for a touchdown to give the Nittany Lions a lead they did not ever relinquish as Penn State added on with a Cappelletti run to have a 16–7 halftime lead.

The only scoring in the second half came on a safety as the Tigers could not muster up points despite out-gaining the Nittany Lions by over 90 yards.

Games of the 1977 Season

In the season opener on September 17, 1977, at Indiana's Memorial stadium in Bloomington, IN, the Hoosiers got the best of LSU in their first meeting, L (21–24). At home, the Rive Owls came in unsuspecting of the licking they were about to get.. They were shellacked on Sep 24 by LSU. Rice had no chance in this game that was all Tigers and the lost big at the home stadium—Tiger Stadium in Baton Rouge, LA W (77–0). Accustomed to winning after the beating by Indiana, on Oct 1 LSU continued reparations by pounding #9 Florida at home in Tiger Stadium, Baton Rouge, LA

W (36–14). They then cooled down a little but not enough for Vanderbilt as LSU whipped the Commodores on Oct 8 at Vanderbilt's Dudley Field in Nashville, TN, W (28–15)

On October 15, LSU forgot about the Indiana stinging and they lost big to #12 Kentucky at Tiger Stadium Baton Rouge, LA L (13–33). They got their chutzpah back again after the Kentucky loss on Oct 22 as they creamed Oregon at Tiger Stadium in Baton Rouge, LA W (56–17). Then, on Oct 29, LSU barely squeaked by Ole Miss at the Mississippi Veterans Memorial Stadium in Jackson, MS W (28–21). By the time Alabama came by LSU was not knocking the tar out of its opponents and the # 2 Crimson Tide gave the Tigers a drubbing at home in Tiger Stadium, Baton Rouge, LA, L (3–24)

On Nov 12, LSU got some wind back enough to beat Mississippi State at Tiger Stadium, Baton Rouge, LA W (27–24). At Tulane in the Battle of the Rag, the Tigers squeaked out another victory over the Green Wave at the Louisiana Superdome in New Orleans, LA W 20–17. The next week they played a team new to the schedule, on Nov 26, the Wyoming Cowboys took it on the chin by the Tigers at Tiger Stadium, Baton Rouge, LA W (66–7)

The Sun Bowl December 31, 1977

After years of dominating bowl games, LSU had lost its charm against its various bowl opponents. This year was the same on December 31, as Stanford overpowered the Tigers in the Sun Bowl in El Paso, TX, L (14–24).

Stanford overcame a 14-10 deficit at halftime to pull out a come-from-behind victory over LSU, 24-10 at the 44th Annual Sun Bowl.

LSU dominated the ground game, rushing for 307 yards, while Stanford proved to be a force in the air, picking up 269 yards passing.

Tiger tailback Charles Alexander, a two-time All-America selection, set the Sun Bowl rushing record racking up 197 yards on 31 carries to earn the C.M. Hendricks Most Valuable Player Award.

LSU scored on its second possession to set the tone of the game.

Stanford fired back with a touchdown and a field goal for a brief lead before LSU reignited its offense.

With one minute to play before intermission, Alexander plowed into the endzone. Kicker Mike Conway's successful extra point conversion put the Tigers back on top 14-10.

A crucial turnover by LSU in the fourth quarter surrendered any hopes of a victory. The Tigers were driving on the Stanford 15-yard line when quarterback Steve Ensminger threw an interception on a third-and-twelve.

Stanford would later score on a James Lofton reception from Guy Benjamin. Lofton finished with two touchdown catches, while Benjamin fired three scoring strikes in the game.

Stanford linebacker Gordon Ceresino led the Cardinals with a game-high 18 tackles, 14 of which unassisted, and was named Jimmy Rogers, Jr. Most Valuable Lineman.

Lofton and his coach Bill Walsh would later be inducted into the Pro Football Hall of Fame. LSU's coach Charles McClendon would later become a member of the College Football Hall of Fame.

1978 Football Season Charles McClendon Coach # 23

The LSU Fighting Tigers football team represented the LSU Tigers of Louisiana State University during the 1978 Southeastern Conference football season. This was LSU's eighty-fifth season overall and its forty-sixth season playing as a member of the Southeastern Conference (SEC).

Led by coach McClendon, the LSU coach with the most time in service, in his seventeenth of eighteen seasons as head coach of LSU, the Tigers had a nice season at 8-4. Their SEC record was 3-

3. This brought the Tigers a 4th place SEC finish. At the national level, the Tigers were unranked in the Coach's poll and in the AP.

Games of the 1978 Season

In the season and home opener on September 16, 1978, LSU defeated Indiana at Tiger Stadium, Baton Rouge, LA, W (24–17). At home on Sep 23, LSU edged out Wake Forest at Tiger Stadium, Baton Rouge, LA W (13–11). At Rice on Sep 30, LSU ripped the Owls at Rice Stadium, Houston, TX W (37–7). At Florida on Oct at Florida Field, Gainesville, FL, LSU beat the Gators W (34–21). On Oct 14, the Georgia Bulldogs beat the LSU Tigers at Tiger Stadium, Baton Rouge, LA L (17–24). At Kentucky, on Oct 21 at Commonwealth Stadium, Lexington, KY, LSU shut out the Wildcats W (21–0).

On Nov 4, LSU pounded the Ole Miss Rebels at Tiger Stadium, Baton Rouge, LA W (30–8). On Nov 11. #3 Alabama defeated LSU at Legion Field in Birmingham, AL L (10–31). At Mississippi State on Nov 18 at the Mississippi Veterans Memorial Stadium in Jackson, MS, the Bulldogs beat the Tigers L (14–16) On Nov 25, LSU beat Tulane at Tiger Stadium, Baton Rouge, LA in the Battle for the Rag, W (40–21). In the season finale at home, LSU beat Wyoming on Dec 2 at Tiger Stadium, Baton Rouge, LA W (24–17)

Liberty Bowl December 31 vs. Missouri

1979 Football Season Charles McClendon Coach # 23

The LSU Fighting Tigers football team represented the LSU Tigers of Louisiana State University during the 1979 Southeastern Conference football season. This was LSU's eighty-sixth season overall and its forty-seventh season playing as a member of the Southeastern Conference (SEC).

Led by coach McClendon, the LSU coach with the most time in service, in his seventeenth of eighteen seasons as head coach of LSU, the Tigers had a nice season at 7-5. Their SEC record was 4-2. This brought the Tigers a 4th place SEC finish. At the national level, the Tigers were unranked in the Coach's poll and in the AP.

Bo Rein, who led NC State to the 1979 Atlantic Coast Conference championship, was hired six days after the regular season finale, but McClendon and his staff coached the Tangerine Bowl vs. Wake Forest. Rein perished in a bizarre plane crash January 10, 1980, only 42 days after his hiring.

Games of the 1979 Season

In the season and home opener on September 22, 1979. LSU pounded the Rice Owls at Tiger Stadium, Baton Rouge, LA W (47-3). On Sep 29 at home v #1 USC, The Trojans defeated the #20 Tigers at Tiger Stadium in Baton Rouge, LA L (12-17). LSU beat the Florida Gators on Oct 6 at Tiger Stadium, Baton Rouge, LA W (20-3) At Georgia on Oct 13, the Bulldogs edged out the Tigers at Sanford Stadium in Athens, GA L (14-21). Then, on Oct 20, Kentucky entered Tiger Stadium in Baton Rouge, LA to beat the Tigers but they left disappointed after LSU edged them out W (23-19). In another home game v a tough team, on Oct 27, #8 Florida State beat LSU in Tiger Stadium, Baton Rouge, LA L (19-24)

On Nov 3 LSU defeated Ole Miss at Mississippi Veterans Memorial Stadium, Jackson, MS W (28-24). Then, on Nov 10 #1 Alabama squeaked by LSU at Tiger Stadium, Baton Rouge, LA L (0-3). Then, on Nov 17, LSU got the best of Mississippi State at Tiger Stadium, Baton Rouge, LA W (21-3). At #18 Tulane on Nov 24 in the Battle of the Rag, played at the Louisiana Superdome in New Orleans, LA, the Green Wave beat the Tigers L (13-24).

Tangerine Bowl December 22, 1979

On December 22, the Tangerine Bowl matched two fierce competitors, Wake Forest, & Louisiana State. Like most bowl games, this Tangerine Bowl match was played in Florida at Orlando Stadium in Orlando, FL. The Tigers of LSU defeated Wake Forest in a tough match W (34-10).

This bowl game paired the LSU Tigers of the Southeastern Conference v the Wake Forest Demon Deacons of the Atlantic Coast Conference. The Tigers came in with a conference record of 4–2 and the Demon Deacons had a conference record of 3–2. The game was the first bowl game featuring the Tigers and the Demon Deacons, and was their third overall meeting. LSU led the series 2–0 heading into the game. The teams' first meeting was in 1960, when the Tigers defeated the Demon Deacons 16–0. LSU prevailed and the teams did not play each other again until who knows when.

Top LSU Players Al Richardson LB 1979-1982

Albert Richardson was the son of a coach . That helped in him becoming an instinctive linebacker. He who gobbled up ball carriers like no one else in LSU school history. An All-SEC and All-American performer in his final season, Richardson set several LSU records, several of which still stand to this day. He had 21 tackles in a game against South Carolina in 82 and still holds the school's career tackles record. Richardson left school with the single-season tackles record as well. His Career stats include 452 tackles, 5 interceptions

When it comes to LSU records, Al Richardson owns just about every record there is to own for a linebacker playing at LSU.

As noted, he recorded an eye-popping 452 tackles during his career at LSU, making him the all-time leader in school history. He also holds the record for the most tackles in a game when he recorded 21 tackles in a contest during his senior season

LSU may not be well known as Linebacker U but they sure had quite a few greats play the position.

1980 Bo Rein Killed in Plane Crash

The day Bo Rein died: Ron Higgins Thank you Ron.

I normally would not use this many page to introduce a new coach, especially a new coach who never coached at the school I was writing about. This is the exception. Higgins wrote this on September 16, 2015 at 5:13 am. This is a sad story.

Bo Rein was LSU's head football coach for 42 days before he died in a plane crash returning from a recruiting trip on Jan. 10, 1980. Thirty-five years ago, Greg Williams was a 30-something -year-old assistant coach who couldn't believe he was working for a college football powerhouse like LSU.

I was 23-year-old reporter, eight months removed from my May 1979 graduation from LSU, happy to have my first full-time job with Tiger Rag Magazine.

We got thrown together in the worst possible circumstances in January 1980 when new LSU football coach Bo Rein was killed in a plane crash while returning from a recruiting trip to Shreveport.

Williams was the last person to see Rein alive, putting him on the private plane late on a Thursday night for a one-hour flight to Baton Rouge.

I was the first and only reporter to talk to Williams, finding him the next morning in an almost-empty LSU football office, trying to make sense of how his boss and good friend ended up crashing halfway across the country in the Atlantic Ocean.

Since that day, as we both progressed through our careers, we'd maybe spoken once or twice when he an assistant at Georgia. But we never re-lived that terrible tragedy until today by phone, four hours before ESPN's SEC Network's 8 p.m. CT airtime of "The Bo You Don't Know," a 30-minute SEC Storied documentary of Rein and his 42 days as the Tigers' coach after he was hired Nov. 29, 1979 to replace Charles McClendon.

Williams, after more than "50 years of two-a-day practices," he said, finally hung up his coaching whistle a few years ago. At age 68, he's retired and living in Raleigh, N.C. where he played at North Carolina State and where he was an assistant coach twice, the first time under Rein.

Heading to LSU

Hired from TCU by Rein in 1979 as secondary coach, Williams was just finishing his first season at his alma mater when Rein stopped by his office and said, "Let's go get some ice cream." and said,

"We went next door to the campus Union building," Williams said. "We're eating ice cream and he said, 'How would you like to go to LSU.' Hell, I almost dropped my ice cream.

"Then he said, 'If you want to go, you can go. You'll probably be the defensive coordinator.' I didn't even know what other coaches on our staff Bo was bringing with him to LSU until we all got a plane headed to Baton Rouge."

Once Rein and his staff arrived, they hit the recruiting trail hard. Williams recruited north Louisiana and said he received an overwhelming reception from high schools happy to see an LSU coach recruiting in person rather than by phone.

"At Woodlawn in Shreveport, the principal was so happy to see us that he called an assembly to introduce LSU's new head coach to the entire school," Williams said.

Williams targeted and planned a recruiting trip to Shreveport for he and Rein on Jan. 10, 1980.

Rein wanted he and Williams to fly up to Shreveport and back. Williams convinced Rein to drive together to Shreveport because the south Louisiana January fog would delay their departure and put them behind schedule.

Since Rein had to visit running back prospect Paul Ott Carruth early the next morning in Mississippi, the plan was for Rein to fly home at the end of the recruiting day in Shreveport while Williams would continue to recruit his assigned area.

"It really didn't hit me until several months later that I could have been on the plane if I would have agreed to Bo's plans," Williams said.

The fateful day

Rein and Williams started their 15-hour day leaving Baton Rouge at 6:30 a.m. The only time they stopped moving was to eat. Their last stop was to visit Bobby Agnor, a recruit from Woodlawn who was already in the Tigers' fold.

Then Williams drove Rein to the Shreveport airport to await a private plane coming from Houston flown by an experienced pilot named Lewis Bencotter.

Rein hopped on the phone to talk to an East Coast recruit that Williams dialed up. While Rein was chatting, Bencotter walked in. "A time or two before, the weather had been foggy, so I asked the pilot then about his plane," Williams said. He told me "If the commercial planes are flying, I can fly, because I've got all the instruments they do.

"Bo got off the phone, shook my hand and ran to the plane." Williams checked in a Shreveport airport hotel and immediately fell asleep.

Meanwhile, the Cessna Conquest 441 carrying Rein and Bencotter wandered off course as a line of storms appeared between Shreveport and Baton Rouge. The plane turned east and was eventually tracked out over the Atlantic Ocean by Captain Daniel Zoerb, an Air Force fighter pilot who could only see the red glow of the Cessna's cockpit but nothing else.

Zoerb made three passes at the plane about 500 feet away, giving all the standard intercept signals to get the plane to turn back. There was no response.

Finally, about 100 miles east of Cape Charles, Va. at 1:34 a.m. ET, Zoerb watched one of the plane's engines quit. The plane rotated and went into a 5,000-foot-per-minute nosedive before it crashed into the Atlantic.

"That was the first time I ever escorted a plane to a crash," said Zoerb, who made one pass over the crash site and saw nothing but an oil slick.

The Federal Bureau of Accidents speculated that something happened to the cabin's pressurization system, causing Benschotter and Rein to pass out and die from lack of oxygen.

A bad dream

A couple of hours before sunrise, Williams was awakened by a phone call.

"It was the Shreveport police telling me to call Darrell Moody (another LSU assistant) at the football office," Williams recalled. "I didn't think it was 4 in the morning. I thought it was more like 1, so I called down there.

"Moody answers and the first thing he says to me is, 'Who was on the plane?' I said, 'The pilot and Bo. Darrell, what are you talking about?' He said, 'Well, the plane crashed in the Atlantic Ocean.'

"I'm in Shreveport, Louisiana saying, 'The Atlantic Ocean? They were headed back to Baton Rouge. What the hell?' Then he told me Bo was dead.

"I hung up and I didn't know what to do. I knew my Dad lives on the East Coast. He gets up early and I knew he would be listening to the radio and watching TV. So I called him, woke him, and told him I wasn't on the plane.

"Then I called my wife, took a shower, got something to eat, drove back to Baton Rouge and went straight to the office. It was almost empty because the staff had flown back to Raleigh.

"So I went to my office and sat down. That's when you walked in."

The cub reporter

Williams said he was there about five minutes when I knocked gently on his door.

I didn't even know what had happened to Rein when I walked in the football office. I was there looking for one of the assistant coaches for a story I was working on. I had gotten straight out of bed, showered, dressed and drove to the campus without turning on the radio.

But when I was immediately greeted by some of the football office secretaries who were in tears, I quickly found out what happened.

I immediately turned the corner and headed to Williams' office. I didn't expect him to be there and I didn't expect him to talk.

But he was there. He had talked to me a couple of times before, so he waved me in.

This was my first time dealing with such a tragedy as a reporter. They don't teach you these things in journalism school.

All I could say was, "Coach, can you tell me what happened?"

I didn't know if he would talk. As it turned out, I thought later, maybe he just wanted to talk to someone about it all from start to finish to make sure it was real.

"It was something you can't believe," Williams recalled again today.

"He just disappeared. It was crazy.

"Bo and I were good friends and golfing buddies. For about the next year, it was like I still didn't believe it happened.

"I guess it hit me the following spring when I had to appear in court in Raleigh at a hearing to declare Bo and the pilot legally dead. There were three different lawyers and I had to recount my story several times.

"Bo's wife Suzanne passed out. His daughters were crying. I'm pretty sure the wife of the pilot and his family was there. It was very tough. It finally hit me it wasn't a dream. That day took my breath away.

"I left that hearing and went to a N.C. State practice. I saw (head coach) Monte Kiffin and (defensive coordinator) Pete Carroll. They asked me what my plans were. I said, 'I'm going to the Players' Retreat (a bar) and have a couple of martinis.' That's exactly what I did and I went home."

What if?

By the time Williams' coaching career ended, he had served in five different capacities at 10 schools.

He has an answer when asked what would have happened if Rein had never gotten on that plane and lived to coach LSU.

"With the players that were already there and the players we were recruiting, there's no doubt at all we would have won and won big," Williams said. "No doubt about that at all."

Our latest conversation had almost ended when Williams recalled one more thing from the night Rein flew into the darkness and never returned.

"That night before dinner, Bo called his house in Raleigh and talked to his mother and father who were watching his two daughters because his wife was away visiting her parents in Portland, Oregon," Williams said. "After dinner, he called his wife and he talked to his wife. Three hours later, he got on the plane and died.

"Now, how many times does a football coach on a recruiting trip talk to his Mom, his Dad, his daughters and his wife all in one night?

"It never happens. But Bo talked to everybody he loved before he died.

"Think about that."

I have Greg. . .for 35 years.

Bo Rein would have been a great LSU coach. Ya gotta know that!

1980 Jerry Stovall, a former LSU All-American and nine-year National Football League veteran with the St. Louis Cardinals, was approved as Rein's successor approximately 36 hours after the plane crash. LSU made a great recovery after a tragic circumstance.

Jerry Stovall LSU Coach 1980-1983

1980 Football Season Jerry Stovall Coach # 25

The LSU Fighting Tigers football team represented the LSU Tigers of Louisiana State University during the 1980 Southeastern Conference football season. This was LSU's eighty-seventh season overall and its forty-eighth season playing as a member of the Southeastern Conference (SEC).

Led by coach Jerry Stovall, the LSU coach in his first of four seasons as head coach of LSU, the Tigers had a nice season at 7-4. Their SEC record was 4-2. This brought the Tigers a 4th place tie in the SEC. At the national level, the Tigers were unranked in the Coach's poll and in the AP. LSU was not invited to a bowl game in 1980

Coach Charles McClendon stepped down after the season. Before Jerry Stovall was found as the new coach, LSU had made another pick. Bo Rein, a coach who led NC State to the 1979 Atlantic Coast Conference championship, was hired six days after McClendon's the regular season finale, but McClendon and his staff came back to coach the Tangerine Bowl vs. Wake Forest. Rein had perished in a bizarre plane crash January 10, 1980, only 42 days after his hiring. Stovall was hired after a 36-hour hurry-up search for Bo Rein's "replacement."

Games of the 1980 Season

In the season and home opener on September 6, 1980, Pres-season ranked #13 Florida State shut out LSU at Tiger Stadium, Baton Rouge, LA L (0–16). At home LSU shut-out Kansas State on Sept 13 at home in Tiger Stadium, Baton Rouge, LA W (21–0) On Sep 20, LSU beat Colorado at Tiger Stadium, Baton Rouge, LA W (23–20). Then, on Sep 27 at Rice Stadium in Houston, TX, the Owl defeated the Tigers L (7–17). On Oct 4, LSU defeated Florida at Florida Field in Gainesville, FL W (24–7). On Oct 11, LSU's Tigers beat a tough Auburn Tigers squad at Tiger Stadium in Baton Rouge, LA in the Tiger Bowl W (21–17). On Oct 18, LSU beat Kentucky at Commonwealth Stadium, Lexington, KY W (17–10)

On Nov 1, LSU overpowered Ole Miss at Tiger Stadium in Baton Rouge, LA (Magnolia Bowl) W (38–16). #6 ranked Alabama got the best of LSU again on Nov 8 at Bryant–Denny Stadium in Tuscaloosa, AL L (7–28). Mississippi State stomped LSU on Nov 19 at the Mississippi Veterans Memorial Stadium in Jackson, MS L 31–55. On Nov 22 LSU beat Tulane at home in Tiger Stadium, Baton Rouge, LA in the Battle for the Rag W (24–7)

1981 Football Season Jerry Stovall Coach # 25

The LSU Fighting Tigers football team represented the LSU Tigers of Louisiana State University during the 1981 Southeastern Conference football season. This was LSU's eighty-eighth season overall and its forty-ninth season playing as a member of the Southeastern Conference (SEC).

Led by coach Jerry Stovall, the LSU coach in his first of four seasons as head coach of LSU, the Tigers had a very poor season at 3-7-1. Their SEC record was 1-4-1. This brought the Tigers an 8th place finish in the SEC. At the national level, the Tigers were unranked in the Coach's poll and in the AP. LSU was not invited to a bowl game in 1981

Games of the 1981 Season

The games charted below reflect exactly what a miserable season Jerry Stovall's LSU Tigers experienced in 1981. Thankfully, LSU fans did not have to put up with many of these in their 126 years.

In the season and home opener played on September 5, 1981, LSU faced Alabama. The Tigers might as well have played a tough Alabama team every week as their record indicated they could have. In this game which was typical of the season, LSU lost to #4 Alabama L (7-24) at home in Tiger Stadium, Baton Rouge, LA.

The next-tough as Alabama team the Tigers faced was good ole Notre Dame on Sep 12 at # 4 Notre Dame in Notre Dame Stadium, South Bend. The Tigers lost this one L (9-27) before 59,075. On Sep 19, in one of their three precious wins, LSU edged out Oregon State at Tiger Stadium, Baton Rouge, LA W 27-24. Then on Sep 26, LSU got another W against Rice at home in Tiger Stadium, Baton Rouge, W 28-14. The losses began again on Oct 3 vs. Florida at Tiger Stadium, Baton Rouge, LA L 10-24. The next loss was on Oct 10 at Auburn in Jordan-Hare Stadium, Auburn, AL (Tiger Bowl) L (7-19). Then, on Oct 17, LSU got its last win of the season against Kentucky at home in Tiger Stadium, Baton Rouge, LA W (24-10). The losing continued on Oct 24 vs #20 Florida State at Tiger Stadium, Baton Rouge, LA L 14-38.

Ole Miss played LSU to a tie game on Oct 31 at Mississippi Veterans Memorial Stadium, Jackson, MS (Magnolia Bowl) T (27-27). On Nov 14, Mississippi State beat LSU at home in Tiger Stadium, Baton Rouge, LA L (9-17) On Nov 28 at Tulane in the Louisiana Superdome in New Orleans, LA playing the Battle for the Rag game, LSU got its clock cleaned by the Green Wave L (7-48)

1982 Football Season Jerry Stovall Coach # 25

The LSU Fighting Tigers football team represented the LSU Tigers of Louisiana State University during the 1982 Southeastern Conference football season. This was LSU's eighty-ninth season overall and its fiftieth season playing as a member of the Southeastern Conference (SEC).

Led by coach Jerry Stovall, the LSU coach in his third of four seasons as head coach of LSU, the Tigers had a fine season at 8-3-1. Their SEC record was 4-1-1. This brought the Tigers a 2nd place finish in the SEC. At the national level, the Tigers were ranked #11 in the Coach's poll and in the AP. LSU was not invited to a bowl game in 1982

Games of the 1982 Season

In the home and season opener on September 18, 1982, LSU pounded Oregon State at Tiger Stadium, Baton Rouge, LA W (45–7). Then, at home on Sep 25 v Rice at Tiger Stadium, Baton Rouge, LA, the Tigers destroyed the Owls, W (52–13). At #4 Florida, on Oct 2, LSU beat the Gators at Florida Field, Gainesville, FL W (24–13) On Oct 9, Tennessee played LSU to a tie game at Tiger Stadium, Baton Rouge, LA T (24–24). Then, on Oct 15 at Kentucky, LSU dominated and won a decisive victory over the Wildcats at Commonwealth Stadium, Lexington, KY W 34–10. At home on Oct 23, LSU beat South Carolina at Tiger Stadium, Baton Rouge, LA W (14–6)

In a major shellacking, LSU beat Ole Miss at Tiger Stadium, Baton Rouge, LA (Magnolia Bowl) W (45–8). On Nov 6, LSU broke their 11-game losing streak v rival Alabama, defeating the #11 Crimson Tide at Legion Field in Birmingham, AL W (20–10). On Nov 13 Mississippi State defeated LSU at Scott Field, Starkville, MS L (24–27). On Nov 20 LSU beat #7 Florida State at Tiger Stadium, Baton Rouge, LA W (55–21), In the season finale on November 27, Tulane edged out LSU at Tiger Stadium Baton Rouge, LA in the Battle for the Rag, L (28–31).

Orange Bowl January 1, 1983

In the Orange Bowl Game played on January 1, 1983, vs. #3 Nebraska, the Cornhuskers prevailed against the #13 LSU Tigers in Miami, FL (Orange Bowl) L 20–21

Miami, Fla. (Jan. 1, 1983)—Stung by their own miscues and the ferocious play of the Louisiana State Tigers, the Nebraska Cornhuskers battled from behind for an impressive, 21-20, victory in the 1983 Orange Bowl game.

Nebraska struck early, then suffered an amazing string of uncharacteristic turnovers, before returning to form with a stirring second-half performance.

Civil unrest in the Miami area cut the crowd to 54,407—there were 14,306 no-shows, the smallest crowd since the 1947 Rice-Tennessee OB game—but those who were on hand experienced unrest only regarding the outcome. It was an exciting show—including a magnificent OB halftime extravaganza featuring the London Philharmonic Orchestra—from start to finish, with the Huskers coming on strong in the late stages of the contest.

Nebraska, which wound up No. 3 in the nation following the Orange Bowl, came into the game with a slight chance to become No. 1. Only No. 1-ranked Penn State managed to slip by the Huskers and the Nittany Lions met Georgia in the Sugar Bowl. Unbeaten SMU was in the Cotton Bowl, but no miracles came to pass. Penn State won, SMU won and Nebraska won—and that's the way the polls wound up.

Tough as LSU was, the Cornhuskers came into the game as one of the nation's finest teams, and the Huskers proved it. After leading 7-0 in the first quarter, Nebraska spent the rest of the first half trying to live down errors. Four turnovers led to a 14-7 LSU lead at the half and the Tigers made it 17-7 midway through the third quarter.

Then Nebraska regrouped with a vengeance. Turner Gill hit Mike Rozier with a 11-yard TD pass to pull the Huskers up 17-14. The Huskers got a break in short order when LSU's Clay Parker experienced heavy pressure on a punt and decided to run. He missed the first down and the Cornhuskers got the ball at the Tiger 48. It took only eight plays to go the distance and Turner Gill got the final yard on a sneak for a 21-17 lead with 11:14 left in the game.

LSU came back to boot a 49-yard field goal with 5:05 left, but the Black Shirts kept the Tigers in check the rest of the way to hang up victory No. 12.

Perhaps the key play of the game came on Nebraska's 80-yard drive following LSU's field goal which made it 17-7. On fourth and one at the Tiger 35, Coach Osborne called for a Turner Gill pass and the All-Big Eight quarterback hit split end Todd Brown with an 18-yard strike. The quick result was a touchdown which put the Huskers back in the game and turned the tide. Nebraska clearly dominated the game despite the closeness of the score. The Huskers out-yarded LSU, 403-211, with 219 on the ground and 184 through the air.

Gill was named Most Valuable Back in the game with 13 pass completions in 22 attempts for 184 yards and one TD. He also ran for 37 yards and one TD. Center Dave Remington was voted Most Valuable Lineman, completing his two-year sweep of regional and national honors.

Mike Rozier was the top rusher in the game with 118 yards on 26 carries, while Wingback Irving Fryar was the Huskers' top receiver with five catches for 81 yards.

Nebraska's defense also sparkled, particularly in the second half, and set a school bowl record by holding LSU runners to a mere 38 yards rushing. That broke the old bowl mark of 45 yards set in 1965 against Arkansas in the Cotton Bowl. The Black Shirts also kept heavy pressure on Tiger QB Alan Risher. While Risher passed for 173 yards, he did it under the gun and managed to hit only 14 of 30 passes and had two intercepted. He was the victim of four sacks.

Orange Bowl Notes . . . Nebraska is now 5-4-0 in Orange Bowl play, with wins over Auburn, Notre Dame, Alabama and LSU twice. Losses have been to Alabama, Duke, Clemson and Oklahoma . . . 1984 Football Season Bill Arnsparger Coach # 26

William Stephen Arnsparger was born on December 16, 1926 and deceased on July 17, 2015 coached football at the college and pro level, He was from Paris, Kentucky, born and raised there. He served in the United States Marine Corps during World War II, and graduated from Miami University (Ohio) in 1950. Afterwards, he was hired as an assistant coach with the Miami football program, beginning a long career in the football profession.

<<< Bill Arnsparger is best known for serving as a defensive coordinator in the National Football League (NFL) for Miami Dolphins teams that won consecutive Super Bowls (1972 and 1973) and reached another (1982), all under head coach Don Shula. Arnsparger's defenses were an important part of the Dolphins' success, and earned two nicknames over his tenure – the "No-Name-Defense" in the 1970s and the "Killer B's" in the 1980s.

He was not finished as later on he served as the defensive coordinator for another Super Bowl runner-up, the 1994 San Diego Chargers.

Before the NFL, Arnsparger served as a defensive assistant for several college football teams. He was also the head coach of the New York Giants (1974–1976) and the Louisiana State University (LSU) Tigers (1983–1986), and served as the athletic director at the University of Florida (1986–1992). LSU enjoyed the few years with Bill Arnsparger

The LSU Fighting Tigers football team represented the LSU Tigers of Louisiana State University during the 1984 Southeastern Conference football season. This was LSU's ninety-first season overall and its fifty-second season playing as a member of the Southeastern Conference (SEC).

Led by coach Bill Arnsparger, the LSU coach in his first of three seasons as head coach of LSU, the Tigers had a fine season at 8-3-1. Their SEC record was 4-1-1. This brought the Tigers a second place finish in the SEC. At the national level, the Tigers were ranked in the Coach's poll at 16 and in the AP at 15. LSU was invited to the Sugar Bowl Game in 1984

During the season, Florida was placed on a postseason ban for violations, and despite finishing first, the SEC punished the program with an immediate postseason ban in addition to the two year ban imposed for the 1985 and 1986 seasons by the NCAA. The SEC also awarded LSU, as the highest placed eligible team, the automatic bid to the Sugar Bowl reserved for the conference champion. Under modern rules, a team ineligible for postseason is also ineligible for postseason awards.

How Nebraska and LSU Met in the 1985 Sugar Bowl

When it finally reached game time, the 51st Sugar Bowl – a second guesser’s delight – boiled down to the superior Huskies asserting themselves late, and a turn in the fortunes of the opposing quarterbacks.

By halftime, the white-shirted Cornhuskers, favored by a touchdown, resembled a groggy giant trying to catch its breath, having been stung by a squadron of swarming bees.

After 30 minutes of play under the Superdome gondola, the Tigers had eaten up 291 yards against the No. 1 defense in the land. And the Cornhuskers had to scrounge for a modest 141 yards of their own, 31 coming on one play.

LSU's problem was, at that point, it had only a three-point lead (10-7) that could have been 10 points or more.

The difference in the final outcome was Nebraska steaming for 184 yards and two touchdowns in the fourth quarter. That, and a switch in the Husker defense limited the Bayou Bengals to 113 yards in the second half. "We felt lucky to be behind by only three at halftime," said quarterback Craig Sundberg, the MVP after passing for 143 yards and three touchdowns despite being ill with the flu. His counterpart, Jeff Wickersham, threw for 212 yards (17-25-1) in the first half, but his second half totals were 3-of-12 for nine yards and three interceptions, stifling a charged up Tiger offense that had the vaunted Husker defense scratching its helmets for nearly three full quarters.

The real difference, though, was the inability of the Tigers to apply the vise once they had Nebraska in a headlock. Garry James caught a 26-yard touchdown that was nullified by a holding penalty. That series ended with a missed field goal. Later, LSU coach Bill Arnsparger elected to take another field goal off the board after a roughing-the-kicker penalty, for a first down at the Nebraska six yard line and come away with no points.

Still, when the Tigers went 73 yards on 10 plays, and scatback Dalton Hilliard went in from the two, it was 10-0 with 13:11 to go in the second quarter. LSU fans had to be wondering what had happened to the feared Nebraska offense.

They soon found out.

The 'Huskers, methodically and quickly, went 70 yards on six plays, scoring when Sundberg hit tailback Doug Dubose with a 31-yard, against-the-grain screen pass. "Craig faked a pass to the left and I snuck out there alone," Dubose said. "LSU's defense pursues real well, and as soon as I cut back across the grain, I knew I was heading for the end zone."

Just 2:40 after LSU took its surprising 10-0 lead, the score was cut to 10-7.

That's when Arnsparger took Lewis' field goal off – and then lost a shot at a touchdown and a possible 17-7 lead. Lewis then missed a 19-yard chip-shot.

It was an omen of things to come for LSU.

Nebraska's Tom Osborne changed defenses from a four-man front to a three-man rush with eight back defenders. "We dropped (DB Chad Daffer) into the middle zone and that helped," the coach explained.

Daffer picked off two Tiger passes on LSU's first two second-half possessions, both leading to touchdowns, putting the Bengals behind for the first time.

Osborne said, "LSU had a tendency to run short crosses and then a deep cross, 15 to 17 yards downfield. We picked it up (the defensive scheme) from the Miami Dolphins a few years ago, and I think Bill (Arnsparger, who was then the Dolphins defensive coordinator) is responsible for that."

Momentum and fortune were shifting to Nebraska. And the Tigers were helpless to curtail the currents of the game.

DuBose, who gained 108 yards on 20 carries, accounted for 50 of the 80 total yards in the 'Huskers' clinching drive, which was sealed when Sundberg hit Todd Frain with a 24-yard touchdown pass with 10:54 left in the last quarter.

It was all Nebraska needed, though the 'Huskers would add one more score for good measure.

There were those, however, who wanted it recorded that Nebraska was not beating the SEC's best team.

Liberty Bowl December 27, 1985

LSU was invited to play in the Liberty Bowl on December 27, 1985. At 7:00 p.m. vs. Baylor. The game was played at Liberty Bowl Memorial Stadium in Memphis, TN (Liberty Bowl). LSU lost another bowl game. L (7–21) before 40,186.

Liberty Bowl : LSU Tries to Limit Baylor's Options

Dec. 27, 1985 12 AM; Associated Press

MEMPHIS, Tenn. Louisiana State University was ranked third nationally in scoring defense, so the pundits were concerned about the option offense Baylor was expected to use in the Liberty Bowl game.

“Baylor is the best offensive team we’ll face since Florida,” said Mike Archer, defensive coordinator for 12th-ranked LSU. “I’d rate Baylor right there with Alabama.”

LSU (9-1-1) lost to Florida, 20-0, and tied Alabama, 14-14. Those results sent the Tigers to the Liberty Bowl instead of the Sugar Bowl in New Orleans.

Baylor (8-3) relied on the veer offense, and LSU defenders, who held opponents this year to 10.3 points and 107.1 yards rushing per game, say it’s difficult to deal with.

The Bears of the Southwest Conference averaged 389 yards a game and 5.4 yards a play.

“If I had a choice of playing against an offense, an option offense would be the last on my list,” said LSU junior nose guard Henry Thomas.

“It’s hard to find the ball,” he said. “The quarterback sticks it in there to a back and you are certain that back has it. You just kill him.

“Then you look up and the other back is 20 yards downfield with the ball. That’s when you get pretty upset.”

LSU Coach Bill Arnsparger, a former defensive coordinator with the Miami Dolphins, said stopping the veer requires basic defense.

“Against any option, many of your defensive people aren’t free to take their responsibilities right away. They have to shed their blocks first,” said Arnsparger, who is in his second year at LSU.

“It goes back to fundamental defense, control the block, locate the ball and make the tackle.”

Baylor uses a two-quarterback system, sending 6-foot, 195-pound senior Tom Muecke in for two sets of downs and replacing him with 6-4, 195-pound junior Cody Carlson for two series.

Bears’ Coach Grant Teaff, who has been at Baylor for 14 seasons, started using that unusual arrangement in 1982 when team officials were unable to decide which quarterback was better.

The LSU offense was led by 6-2, 195-pound senior quarterback Jeff Wickersham, the third-leading career passer in the SEC with 6,921 yards.

The Tigers of course have two outstanding senior running backs--5-8, 195-pound Dalton Hilliard and 5-10, 205-pound Garry James.

‘Against any option, many of your defensive people aren’t free to take their responsibilities right away. They have to shed their blocks first.’--BILL, ARNSPARGER LSU coach

Despite all the preparation and the worry. Arnsparger could not turn a victory in this game and LSU lost another bowl game—this time to the Baylor Bears L (7-21).

Top LSU Players Wendell Davis WR 1985-1987

Prior to Wendell Davis beginning his career at LSU, State-Times writer George Morris introduced the gaping hole in the Tiger's offense that Davis needed to fill after the graduation of former LSU standout Eric Martin: four years, 152 catches, 2,542 yards, 14 touchdowns and one Southeastern Conference record.

WENDELL DAVIS FOOTBALL

Morris described the outgoing Martin's cleated shoes as not just big, but large enough to be sold as condominiums.

When Davis left following his senior season in 1987 he rewrote LSU's receiving record books to the tune of 183 catches, 2708 yards and 19 touchdowns. His cleated shoes weren't just big, but large enough to be sold as mansions.

"I had no idea he would be this good when I first saw him," wide-receiver coach Jerry Sullivan said in an Associated Press Article headlined, 'No defenses can hold him,' written midway through the 1987 season. "I saw the great cutting ability he had, but the rest of it he's developed through hard work."

After 15 seasons without an SEC Title, the 1986 Tigers ended the drought with an SEC Championship by relying on a relatively unproven wide receiver who had caught only 31 passes in his first two seasons and a rangy redshirt freshman quarterback.

To the shock of the entire country, Davis and quarterback Tommy Hodson emerged as arguably the best receiver-quarterback duo in LSU history while revolutionizing SEC football during their two seasons together.

"Things were beginning to turn around at LSU," Davis said, "It was a time that I think all the players really saw that we had a lot of talent and if we just brought it together we could win games for LSU."

Davis and Hodson went on to set numerous school records in 1986 while unexpectedly replacing a graduated starting backfield that had amassed 16,000 yards in the four previous seasons.

During the magical 1986 season, Davis broke numerous single-season records: 80 catches, 1244 receptions, 11 touchdown receptions and 14 catches in one game against Ole Miss.

"It wasn't until the end of the year when I noticed the records," Davis said. "It was one of those things where it wasn't a personal goal of mine. It just happened. I really had a great connection going and the offense fell into place for what I did. My goal was just to win the SEC, and that is what we did."

Following Davis's spectacular junior season performance, the All-American's statistics began to decline because of the increased attention and double-teams. However, that did not stop him from being named 1987 SEC Most Valuable Player of the Year after totaling 72 receptions, 993 yards and seven touchdowns.

"After my junior year, teams kind of game planned against me a little bit," Davis said. "I know we did a lot better job of spreading the ball around my senior year. We had some very good athletes and guys that could make plays at any given time. It was hard to stop us offensively."

Despite all of the numerical accomplishments and the culture changing seasons, Davis remains humble and values the time with his teammates the most.

"What really sticks in my mind was the tradition for us where we started holding hands in the huddle," Davis recounts. "That is something that I will never forget. It didn't matter if we were down two touchdowns or up one touchdown. We were coming together. If we were down, we were coming back to win the game. It was a great feeling to have to see all the guys have their hands together, come together as a team and march the ball down the field."

The Tigers went 28-6-2 in Davis' last three seasons with appearances in the Liberty, Sugar and Gator Bowls. Davis fondly remembers the transition from his first game in Tiger Stadium.

"I have all kinds of memories walking through the tunnels of Tiger Stadium," Davis said. "I was scared out of my mind. I'm not going to lie. It was something that was bigger than me. I wasn't sure how to handle it, but it was unbelievable. I was scared, excited and all of those things rolled up into one. Once you felt the love of the fans in that atmosphere, it was just electrifying. Every game after that walking into Tiger Stadium, it was not fear. It was more excitement.

I loved putting on a show for our fans."

Davis was selected 27th overall in the first round of the 1988 NFL Draft by the Chicago Bears. He went to play for six seasons, seeing action in 81 games with 207 catches for 3,000 yards and 14 touchdowns before injuries cut short his career.

After a wonderful career at LSU and a successful professional career, Davis will use his LSU Hall of Fame induction on Sept. 9 to reflect on the trials and tribulations of his football days.

"I know I wouldn't be receiving this honor if it wasn't for my teammates and the sacrifices that they made as well," Davis said. "I am very honored and very humbled of the fact that I am joining some of the great athletes, coaches and athletic directors in LSU history."

1986 Football Season Bill Arnsparger Coach # 26

The LSU Fighting Tigers football team represented the LSU Tigers of Louisiana State University during the 1986 Southeastern Conference football season. This was LSU's ninety-third season overall and its fifty-fourth season playing as a member of the Southeastern Conference (SEC).

Led by coach Bill Arnsparger, the LSU coach in his third and last of three seasons as head coach of LSU, the Tigers had a fine season at 9-3-1. Their SEC record was 5-1 giving them the SEC championship with a first place finish in the SEC. At the national level, the Tigers were ranked in the Coach's poll at 11 and in the AP at 10. LSU was invited to the Sugar Bowl in 1986. Their bad bowl game luck continued.

Sugar Bowl January 1, 1987

In the Sugar Bowl on January 1, 1987, at 3:00 p.m. vs. # 6 Nebraska, #5 LSU was beaten by the Cornhuskers at the Louisiana Superdome New Orleans, LA (Sugar Bowl) L (15–30) before 76,234

53rd Annual Sugar Bowl Classic ~ January 1, 1987

How Nebraska and LSU Met in the 1987 Sugar Bowl

After the game, Tom Osborne glanced at the Superdome scoreboard and put his team's effort in perspective: "We weren't playing for the national championship, the Big Eight championship was out the window. The only thing we had left was the Sugar Bowl."

The sixth-ranked Cornhuskers made the most of their season finale, running roughshod over the fifth-ranked Tigers, 30-15. If the Tigers ever had a real chance at victory, it dissipated with one late and lost opportunity, coupled with an amazing 100 yards of first-half penalties and Nebraska's brutal dominance of both lines.

On the game's first play from scrimmage, Wendell Davis, in full stride, caught a pass from Tommy Hodson for a 43-yard Tiger gain to the Nebraska 23. Six plays later, Harvey Williams scored from the 1 to give LSU a 7-0 lead.

That – with 2:54 gone in the first quarter – was the LSU high point. Despite limiting Nebraska to 36 first period yards, the Tigers self-destructed in attempting to build on the lead.

One possession after the opening touchdown, LSU advanced into Cornhusker territory. Then the Tigers were beset with penalties. A personal foul and a holding call made it first-and-35, and punter Matt DeFrank eventually had to kick away.

The next time around, a sack of Hodson and an illegal receiver-downfield penalty killed another drive.

“We had the ball inside their 30 twice and didn’t score,” linebacker Ron Sancho said.

Tiger offensive coordinator Ed Zaunbrecher assessed, “If we stayed in a normal situation on first and second downs, we had a chance to do the things we wanted to do. Obviously, it’s very hard to overcome the things that happened out there today.”

From the second quarter, when Nebraska began to take control, until the final three-and-a-half minutes of the game, LSU made only two first downs and 32 plays that produced a total of 38 yards.

The mistakes frustrated the Tigers but didn’t make a dent on the scoreboard until early in the second period. In punt formation, DeFrank, under a heavy rush from linebacker Dante Wiley, fumbled at the LSU 25. Nebraska got its first point minutes later on a 42-yard field goal.

LSU may have glimpsed at its fate on the next 'Husker series. Steve Taylor, who sat out the previous offensive possession, quarterbacked Nebraska 78 yards in nine plays. Taylor's score from the 1 gave the Cornhuskers a 10-7 halftime margin.

Nebraska began pulling away with a third-quarter touchdown, but one dramatic play made Tiger pulses race. Facing fourth-and-15 at the LSU 35, with a 10-point lead and a minute to go in the period, Osborne decided to go for a 52-yard field goal.

Nose guard Henry Thomas roared in, blocked the kick and put LSU in business at the Nebraska 17.

But Hodson was sacked twice for losses of 15 and nine yards. For the third time, the Bengals had penetrated the Huskers' 30 and were turned away pointless.

The Sugar Bowl essentially ended there.

"It's just like I said," Nebraska offensive tackle Tom Welter said, "We were going to pound 'em, and they were going to crack."

The defeat stung the Tigers because LSU was clearly an improved team and Nebraska not quite as good as it was two years before when the squads played, a more competitive game in the Superdome.

"The thing I'll always wonder," Tiger center Nacho Albergamo reflected, "is that you don't know if they were really that good or if the penalties made us that bad."

On the following day, in the Fiesta Bowl, Penn State recorded the lowest offensive output (162 yards) and the highest defensive yield (445 yards) of any of the 10 teams that played on New Year's Day or Jan. 2.

To put it in perspective, LSU had 191 total yards and Nebraska had 352 total yards. But the little output Penn State generated against Miami was enough to win the national championship, 14-10.

In New Orleans, though, the day belonged to the Nebraska Cornhuskers.

Defensive end Broderick Thomas of the Cornhuskers broke into a wide grin when asked if the impressive Sugar Bowl showing was a stepping stone to a possible national championship in 1987.

“Tell the world,” Thomas declared, “that Nebraska’s 1987 hell-raising tour has begun.”

Recap excerpted from the book “Sugar Bowl Classic: A History” by Marty Mulé, who covered the game and the organization for decades for the New Orleans Times-Picayune.

Top LSU Players Tommy Hodson, QB 1986-89

A Mathews native, Hodson had an illustrious career as a four-year starting quarterback for LSU (1986-89) and compiled a 31-14-1 record. He is LSU’s all-time leading passer with 9,115 yards, and also leads the school in career touchdown passes (69), attempts (1,163) and completions (967). At the time, those numbers were the best in SEC history.

Hodson posted all of those numbers prior to the spread offense taking over the SEC. He was a four-time All-SEC quarterback, and LSU pushed him for the Heisman Trophy in his junior and senior seasons. Hodson became a household name in 1986 as a redshirt freshman quarterback for LSU, leading the Tigers a 35-17 upset of No. 7 Texas A&M and eventually the SEC title.

Hodson also played a major role in the “Earthquake Game,” lofting an 11-yard TD pass to Eddie Fuller on fourth down in the final minute to give LSU a 7-6 win over No. 4 Auburn. Hodson was also a standout quarterback for Central Lafourche High School, guiding the Trojans to a 13-1 record and passing for 4,361 yards and 36 TDs as a senior. As a basketball player, he averaged 27.4 points a game his senior season.

Hodson was selected in the third round of the 1990 NFL draft by New England Patriots and played seven seasons for four teams, finishing his career in 1995-96 as a backup with the Saints. Born 1-28-67 in Mathews, La.

1987 Football Season Mike Archer Coach # 27

<<< Mike Archer

A longtime Division I assistant coach who spent four years as the head coach at LSU from 1987-1990. His Tigers finished 10-1-1 in Archer’s first season in 1987, his best record as a head coach. It was LSU’s first 10-win season in more than 25 years, and the Tigers finished No. 5 in the final Associated Press poll after a victory in the Gator Bowl. LSU’s record dropped to 8-4 in 1988 but the Tigers still won the SEC with a 6-1 record in the conference. LSU ended the season with a loss in the Hall of Fame Bowl and finished No. 19 in the final AP poll.

Archer’s teams posted back-to-back losing seasons in 1989-1990. Archer was forced to resign as head coach, ending his tenure at LSU with a combined record of 27-18-1. He also served as an assistant coach in the SEC with Kentucky from 1993-1995 and again from 2003-2006. His coaching history follows:

LSU in 1987

The LSU Fighting Tigers football team represented the LSU Tigers of Louisiana State University during the 1987 Southeastern Conference football season. This was LSU's ninety-fourth season overall and its fifty-fifth season playing as a member of the Southeastern Conference (SEC).

Led by coach Mike Archer, the LSU head coach in his first of four seasons as head coach of LSU, the Tigers had a fine season at 10-1-1. Their SEC record was 5-1 giving them a second place finish in the SEC. At the national level, the Tigers were ranked in the Coach's poll at 5 and in the AP at 5. LSU was invited to the Gator Bowl in 1987. Their bad bowl game luck changed for this game.

Games of the 1987 Season

In the season opener on September 5, 1987. at #15 Texas A&M, #6 LSU prevailed at Kyle Field College Station, TX W (17–3) before 71,292. On Sep 12 LSU pounded Cal State–Fullerton in the home opener at Tiger Stadium Baton Rouge, LA W(56–12) before 73,452. Then, on Sep 19, LSU shellacked the Rice Owls at home in Tiger Stadium Baton Rouge, LA W (57–6). On Sep 26, #7 Ohio State tied LSU at home in Tiger Stadium Baton Rouge, LA T (13–13) before 79,263. On Oct 3, LSU beat #19 Florida at Tiger Stadium Baton Rouge, LA W (13–10) before 79,313. Then, on Oct 10 at #16 Georgia, LSU edged out the Bulldogs at Sanford Stadium in Athens, GA W (26–23) before 82,122.

Gator Bowl December 31, 1:30 p.m.

On December 31, 1987, 1:30 p.m., in the Gator Bowl Game, LSU at #7 beat #8 South Carolina's Gamecocks in Gator Bowl Stadium in Jacksonville, FL in the famous Gator Bowl Game W (30–13) before 82,119.

Typically a bowl game loser, not this time. Seventh-ranked Louisiana State (LSU) struck early and never looked back in posting a 30-13 victory over ninth-ranked South Carolina before a Mazda Gator Bowl crowd of 82,119 on New Year's Eve afternoon in Jacksonville.

The Gamecocks' "50" defense designed by defensive coordinator Joe Lee Dunn was unsuccessful in stopping LSU's quarterback-wide receiver combination of Tom Hodson and Wendell Davis. Hodson completed 20 of 32 attempts for 224 yards and three touchdowns, two of which came in the first six minutes of play.

Davis, the Gator Bowl Most Valuable Player for the Bengal Tigers, had nine receptions for 132 yards and three touchdowns.

Offensively for the Gamecocks, the "Run and Shoot" led by quarterback Todd Ellis, was ineffective against LSU's defense. Ellis was still able to pass for over 300 yards on 28-of-47 attempts. However, he was intercepted four times. LSU was enabled to return the interceptions for 132 yards total.

South Carolina running back Harold Green was named the Gator Bowl Most Valuable Player for the Gamecocks as he rushed 15 times for 72 yards and South Carolina's only touchdown.

Freshman placekicker Collin Mackie was good on field goals from 44 and 39 yards, both of which came in the first half. LSU was glad to put a "W" in its bowl game record.

1988 Football Season Mike Archer Coach # 27

The LSU Fighting Tigers football team represented the LSU Tigers of Louisiana State University during the 1988 Southeastern Conference football season. This was LSU's ninety-fifth season overall and its fifty-sixth season playing as a member of the Southeastern Conference (SEC).

On January 2, 1989 at 12:00 p.m., #16 LSU played #17 Syracuse at Tampa Stadium, Tampa, FL in the Hall of Fame Bowl and the Orangemen triumphed L (10–23) before 51,112

Syracuse 23, Louisiana State 10
Jan. 2, 1989
Tampa, Fla.

For the second straight season the Orange reached double figures in wins, this time after defeating Southeastern Conference co-champion LSU 23-10 at the third Hall of Fame Bowl in Tampa, Florida.

The Orange took the opening kickoff and went 80 yards, capped by Robert Drummond's 2-yard touchdown. Drummond ended his SU career in style, winning MVP honors with 122 yards rushing and two touchdowns on 23 carries. David Holmes was the defensive star for the Orange, intercepting two passes, breaking up two more, and coming up with six solo tackles. Daryl Johnston added 74 yards rushing, and Todd Philcox completed 16-of-23 passes for 130 yards and a touchdown. Rob Moore had six catches for 56 yards.

SU's defense, led by Terry Wooden and Rob Burnett, allowed just 76 yards rushing to the Tigers. Dan Bucey had a game-high 10 tackles.

Top LSU Players Kevin Mawae C 1989-1993

LSU Sports Information

In Kevin Mawae's four seasons at LSU, the Tigers won only 17 games. Despite this adversity, Mawae established himself as one of the greatest offensive linemen in Southeastern Conference history. Since then, he has redefined his center position in the NFL, served as an active participant in the community and become a proud parent of two. His ability, character and commitment have led him back to LSU as a Hall of Fame inductee.

Mawae will be inducted into the LSU Athletic Hall of Fame at ceremonies to be held September 25 at the Pete Maravich Assembly Center. Also being inducted on that night will be Tiger football All-American Joseph “Nacho” Albergamo, Lady Tiger basketball All-American Marie Ferdinand-Harris, All-American baseball player

Eddy Furniss and legendary head football coach Charles McClendon.

The LSU Athletic Hall of Fame Gala is sponsored by Desselle-Maggard Corporation.

As an all-state lineman at Leesville High School, Mawae was sold on LSU even before he officially arrived on campus. He saw the Tigers open the 1988 season with a convincing 27-0 blanking of No. 10 Texas A&M in Tiger Stadium. Four weeks later, he was a member of the 79,431 faithful who saw Eddie Fuller, a former Leesville teammate, shake the earth on a game-winning touchdown catch versus fourth-ranked Auburn.

“Eddie was from Leesville, and he was a senior when I was a freshman there,” Mawae said. “To go there and see one of my former teammates win the game that day, I was sold. I knew that night after the Auburn game I was going to LSU.”

After being recruited by assistant coach Joe Wessel, Mawae made it official on January 11 in front of his parents and head coach. As an eight-year-old he envisioned this dream.

“I remember it like it was yesterday,” Mawae said. “My whole dream in life was to play in the NFL. Signing a scholarship to go to LSU was one step closer to that dream. I remember signing my letter and getting my first LSU hat.”

Mawae came to LSU when the Tigers were riding one of their most successful three-year stretches in school history. LSU had claimed SEC championships in 1986 and 1988, and the Tigers had reached 10 wins for only the third time in program history in 1987. Mawae hoped to perpetuate that success.

However, as a true freshman one year later, LSU suffered its worst season under head coach Mike Archer as the Tigers posted a 4-7 record. In 1990, Mawae saw the field for the first time and ended up starting seven games at left offensive tackle. He earned Freshman All-SEC recognition, but he endured another losing season in Archer's final year.

Under Curley Hallman's new regime, LSU managed only 12 wins in Mawae's final three years. There were no bowl games and no SEC title rings.

“It was really frustrating,” Mawae said. “The deal was to keep your head up and go out and play and practice hard every week like you were playing a championship. So much about being a leader is what you do as opposed to what you say. When you do say something, you say it at the right time.”

His leadership did not go unnoticed. In a time where the program received little publicity, Mawae made the most out of little opportunity.

As a sophomore in 1991, he started all 11 games and was a consensus first team All-SEC selection while playing four different positions. In 1992, he received second team All-SEC honors at left tackle. By his senior season, Mawae moved to his natural position of center.

Mawae made starts at center, guard, tackle and tight end, and he earned starting nods in the final 39 games of his LSU career. His versatility, athleticism and leadership as one of the league's premier linemen led him to third-team All-America honors after the 1993 season.

“I was undersized to play offensive line,” he said. “I matched up well with the speed and athleticism with some of the guys in the league. A lot of it was just determination and heart. I was fortunate that the coaches had the confidence in me that I could do all of them.”

Mawae achieved his NFL dream in the spring of 1994 when he became the second round draft choice (36th overall pick) of the Seattle Seahawks. During his first two NFL seasons, he made 37 starts at guard. By the beginning of his third year, he moved back to center and has since redefined the position over the last 14 years.

In 1998, Mawae was traded to the New York Jets, a move that propelled his career to new heights. From 1997-2005, he became a true ironman as a starter in 177 straight games while being named to six consecutive NFL Pro Bowls.

He played in seven postseason games with the Jets, earned respect from his peers and firmly established himself as one of the all-time great centers in pro football history.

Mawae's leadership and credibility were visible to everyone around him. In 2003, he was selected to the NFL's Diversity Committee. He has been serving on the NFL Players Association Executive Committee since 2002.

“If you play hard and work hard, you become a natural leader,” Mawae said. “Once you have proven yourself on the field, you give yourself a platform to be able to speak up in the locker room. Over the course of my 14 years in the NFL, I feel like I have earned the respect from the players around the league.”

Mawae will tell you his accomplishments on the field pale in comparison to what he has achieved as a family man and an active participant in the community. He credits his parents for having the biggest influence on him.

His father, retired Sgt. 1st Class David Mawae, served 23 years in the U.S. Army, including two tours in Vietnam.

“My biggest influence was my mom and dad,” Mawae said. “I came from a great family, and we moved around the country and lived in Germany and Louisiana. They are the ones who encouraged me to play sports.”

Mawae recalled the summer of 1992 as a special one. That is when he proposed to his wife, Tracy Dale Hicks, at LSU Fan Day in front of 140 teammates, 10 coaches and 3,000 fans over the public address system.

“My teammates thought I was going to announce that I was going to come out after my junior year,” Mawae said. “But I got down on my knee and my wife and family were there, and I asked if she would marry me in front of all those people. She said yes. It is a memory where LSU was a part of it. That was our life at the time.”

Both Kevin and Tracy have been happily married ever since, and the couple has one son, Kirkland, 10, and one daughter, Abigail, 7. Together the Mawae's have been inspiring and active participants at every place they have lived.

“You don't ever need to forget where you came from,” Mawae said. “So much about being a professional athlete is giving back to the community and making yourself available whenever it is possible.”

Mawae served as spokesman for The David Center for Autism Research and co-founded several other projects in the New York area. In the aftermath of Hurricane Katrina, he organized a food and supplies drive to benefit Feed the Children.

He adopted the “Kevin Mawae First and Goal Challenge,” a program designed to raise money and make frequent visits to Winthrop University Hospital's Child Life Program. Along with his countless hours of service to needy children, Mawae donated his services at Ground Zero in New York following the September 11 attacks.

“A lot of the things that we've aligned ourselves with, my wife and I, are things that we felt dear to or things that we've had close friends involved with,” Mawae said. “That's what carried us. We've been involved in hospital projects because I have children.”

Mawae and his family have aligned with more causes since being traded to Tennessee on March 14, 2006.

Mawae believed he would be inducted into the Pro Football Hall of Fame before being enshrined in the LSU Hall of Fame because of the Tigers' lack of success. Last year, that was proven wrong when he received a congratulatory letter in his locker in Tennessee.

Mawae had been nominated by Kevin Winston, Jets' Vice President of Player Development. Winston wrote, “I can state without reservation that in the eight years I have been in the NFL, Kevin Mawae is the most well rounded player and professional I have had the pleasure to work with in the NFL.”

“That was a humbling experience that someone did that for me,” Mawae said. It was a vindication for the five bad years of football that we had at LSU. It spoke volumes of what somebody thought about me for what I've done in the game of football and also for LSU in the years that I have left.”

A first ballot call to Canton should be in the near future as Mawae continues his excellence on and off the field. Those around him have always been positively affected by the way Mawae handles himself, even during his adverse days at LSU.

“When you come from five losing seasons, people tend to not pay attention while you were in school.”
People did ... and deservedly so.

This one was against Tulane at home in Tiger Stadium, Baton Rouge, LA in the Battle for the Rag, W (24–12) before 59,919. In the season finale at Arkansas at Razorback Stadium, Fayetteville, the Razorbacks dominated LSU L (6–30) before 32,721.

1993 Football Season Curley Hallman Coach # 28

The LSU Fighting Tigers football team represented the LSU Tigers of Louisiana State University during the 1993 Southeastern Conference football season. This was LSU's one hundredth season overall and its sixty-first season playing as a member of the Southeastern Conference (SEC).

Led by coach Curley Hallman the LSU head coach in his third of four seasons as head coach of LSU, the Tigers had a poor season at 5-6. Their SEC record was 3-5 giving them a fifth place in the Western Division of the SEC. At the national level, the Tigers were unranked in the coach's poll and unranked in the AP. LSU was not invited to a post-season bowl in 1993.

LSU was hit this season with its worst loss in program history, 58-3 to Florida at home October 9. Following a loss at Kentucky, the Tigers went on a three-game winning streak, including a 17-13 shocker over defending national champion Alabama at Tuscaloosa, ending the Crimson Tide's 31-game unbeaten streak.

(the NCAA later shortened the streak to 23 when it forced Alabama to forfeit all of its 1993 victories (and a tie vs. Tennessee) due to violations involving All-America defensive back Antonio Langham).

With a bowl berth on the line in the season finale, Arkansas came to Baton Rouge and gouged the Tigers for 412 yards rushing in a 42-24 triumph, leaving LSU with its fifth consecutive losing campaign.

Games of the 1993 Season

In the season opener on September 4, 1993 at #5 Texas A&M at Kyle Field in College Station, TX, the Aggies shutout LSU by a score of L (0–24) before 61,307. Then, on Sep 11, LSU edged out Mississippi State at Scott Field, Starkville, MS W (18–16) before . On Sep 18, Auburn beat LSU at home in Tiger Stadium Baton Rouge, LA (Tiger Bowl) L (10–34) before 71,936. #13 Tennessee got its pound of flesh on Sep 25 in Neyland Stadium Knoxville, TN L (20–42) before a huge crowd of 95,931. On Oct 2, LSU beat Utah State at home in Tiger Stadium, Baton Rouge, LA W (38–17) before 57,316. On Oct 9, #5 Florida pummeled the LSU Tigers at home in Tiger Stadium, Baton Rouge, LA L (3–58) before 60,060. At Kentucky. On Oct 16 in Commonwealth Stadium, Lexington, KY, the Wildcats prevailed v LSU L (17–35) before 54,750

On Oct 30, LSU edged out Ole Miss at home in Tiger Stadium, Baton Rouge, LA (Magnolia Bowl) W (19–17) before 61,470. On Nov 6 at #5 Alabama in a yeoman effort against a team that had not lost in ages. At Bryant–Denny Stadium in Tuscaloosa, AL, LSU edged out a win against their long-time nemesis the Crimson Tide-- W (17–13) before 70,123, Then on Nov 20 in the annual Battle for the Rag, LSU beat Tulane at home in Tiger Stadium, Baton Rouge, LA W (24–10) before 58,190. Then, on Nov 27 at home, Arkansas over-powered the LSU Tigers at Tiger stadium in Baton Rouge, LA L (24–42) before 54,239

1994 Football Season Curley Hallman Coach # 28

The LSU Fighting Tigers football team represented the LSU Tigers of Louisiana State University during the 1994 Southeastern Conference football season. This was LSU's one hundred-first season overall and its sixty-second season playing football as a member of the Southeastern Conference (SEC). For the last several years, LSU played in the western conference.

Led by coach Curley Hallman the LSU head coach in his fourth and last season as head coach of LSU, the Tigers had a poor season at 4-7. Their SEC record was 3-5 giving them a fifth place in the Western Division of the SEC. At the national level, the Tigers were unranked in the coaches' poll and unranked in the AP. LSU was not invited to a post-season bowl in 1994.

As noted, it was Curley Hallman's final season as head coach, as he was fired with two games remaining in the season, although he continued as coach for those contests.

Hallman's demise began in the season's third game. LSU led (23-9) an Auburn squad which went 11-0 in 1993 and had already won its first two games of 1994 under Terry Bowden. Going into the final period, LSU had the lead but lost 30-26 when Auburn returned three interceptions for touchdowns in the fourth quarter. Auburn won despite not scoring an offensive touchdown; its other touchdown came on a fumble return. The coach got the blame.

Hallman's last home game as LSU coach came against his former employer, Southern Mississippi. Hallman had been named LSU's coach in November 1990 after leading the Golden Eagles of Mississippi to 26 victories over three seasons, mostly on the strength of future Super Bowl winning QB Brett Favre.

Southern Miss' had a 20-18 victory over LSU which came in front of the smallest home crowd at Tiger Stadium since 1974. The paid attendance was 51,710, but most LSU officials placed the actual crowd in the neighborhood of 40,000. Three days after the loss to Southern Miss, LSU announced Hallman's firing. The Tigers closed the season with victories over Tulane and Arkansas, but Hallman still left Baton Rouge with the poorest record (16-28, .364) of any coach in school history. There was little weeping as LSU wanted a winning coach.

Top LSU Players Eddie Kennison WR 1993-1995

Without a doubt, Eddie Kennison was one of the most talented multi-purpose players in America. He was known for his punt and kickoff return exploits and he proved himself as a top-rate receiver in 1995.

In his seasons with LSU, he caught at least one pass in each of the last 31 regular season games in which he played. He was a bonafide multiple threat as a punt returner, kickoff returner and receiver. Kennison was one of the best-known names in the Southeastern Conference.

He was a two-time recipient of the AT&T Long Distance Award in 1994, as his 100-yard punt return for a touchdown against Mississippi State caught national attention. He was labeled the top return specialist in the nation by The Sporting News 1995, Preseason Magazine.

He was named to The Sporting News' 1995 Preseason All-SEC Team as a return specialist. There's more. As a member of LSU's track and field team, his 4x100 relay team was second in the nation at the national championships in spring of 1995. He was fast as a fire. Kennison is a four-time All-American in track & field. He is also a member of the Knoxville News-Sentinel Freshman All-SEC Team in 1993 as he had no redshirt season.

Games of the 1994 Season

In the season and home opener on September 3, #15 Texas A&M beat LSU at Tiger Stadium, Baton Rouge, LA L (13–18) before 75,504. On Sep 10, LSU beat Mississippi State at Tiger Stadium, Baton Rouge, LA W (44–24) 63,029. Note how attendance was falling as the team failed to win.

On Sep 17, in a critical game for Coach Hallman, at #. 11 Auburn, at Jordan–Hare Stadium, Auburn, AL (Tiger Bowl), LSU gave up a three score lead to lose L (26–30) before 84,754. On Oct 1. South Carolina nosed out LSU at Tiger Stadium Baton Rouge, LA L (17–18) before 63,281. At #5 Florida on Oct 8, in a game played at Ben Hill Griffin Stadium in Gainesville, FL, the Gators pounded LSU L (18–42) before 85,385. Then, on Oct 15, LSU edged out Kentucky at Tiger Stadium, Baton Rouge, LA W (17–13) before 61,764. On Oct 29, Ole Miss beat LSU at Vaught–Hemingway Stadium, Oxford, MS L (21–34) before 40,157.

On Nov 5, #6 Alabama had no trouble with LSU beating the Tigers L (17–35) at Tiger Stadium, Baton Rouge, LA before 75,453. At Home on Nov 12, Southern Miss edged out LSU at Tiger Stadium, Baton Rouge, LA L (18–20) before 51,710 (paid) 40,000 (est. actual). On Nov 19 in the Battle for the Rag, LSU gained the victory at Tulane, playing in the Louisiana Superdome in New Orleans, W (49–25) before 32,067. On Nov 26 in the season finale, at Arkansas' War Memorial Stadium in Little Rock, AR, LSU beat the Razorbacks W (30–12) before 45,633

More on La Fleur

David LaFluer might not have had the best NFL playing career, but when you consistently appear on the NFL's "Biggest Busts" list, at least you know you did something right at the collegiate level.

LaFluer was an absolute stud during his college days at LSU in the mid 90s. In fact, he was named a first-team All-American during his senior season with the Tigers.

LaFluer went on to be a first round draft pick of the Dallas Cowboys in the 1997 NFL Draft, but he never lived up to the hype coming out of college.

Still, if we're going to create an LSU All-Time Dream Team, there is no way that we cannot include David LaFluer on that squad.

Yes, he was a first-team All-America selection. He was one of the finest all-around tight ends in the country by his senior season, possessing size, strength and speed. LaFleur also played a major role as a team leader in his senior season.

He was a leader and was a consensus All-SEC choice in 1994 and 1996. An early-season knee injury in 1995 slowed his development but he came back. He was named to the Coaches and AP All-SEC teams in his sophomore and senior seasons.

He received honorable mention as a UPI All-American in 1994 as a sophomore and third-team All-America by AP in 1996 as a senior. He was a backup to Harold Bishop in 1993, LaFleur came into his own as a sophomore and he was ready in 1995 to be the recipient of the Toby Caston Memorial Award, given to the junior with the outstanding performance during spring drills. He had a setback when he suffered a severe break of his ankle in a scrimmage just prior to the 1992 season, so he redshirted as a true freshman.

1995 Football Season Gerry DiNardo Coach # 29

Gerry DiNardo was a Division I head coach for 13 seasons between 1991 and 2004, including four seasons as the head coach of the Vanderbilt Commodores and five seasons as the head coach of the LSU Tigers. After working as an assistant from 1975-1990 DiNardo was hired at Vanderbilt prior to the 1991 season. In four seasons in Nashville, his Commodores teams combined to go 19-25 overall and just 9-22 in the SEC.

After four straight losing seasons with Vanderbilt, DiNardo left to take over an LSU program that had strung together six straight losing seasons before his arrival in 1995 season. DiNardo posted three straight winning seasons from 1995-1997, going a perfect 3-0 in bowl games and twice finishing in the top-15 of the final Associated Press rankings. His 1998 squad opened the season ranked No. 9 in the AP Preseason Top 25, but things took a turn for the worse in Baton Rouge and DiNardo's Tigers finished the season just 4-7. They were an even-worse 2-8 to start the 1999 season, including an 0-7 mark against the SEC. He was fired with one game remaining in the season, ending his stay at LSU with a 32-24-1 combined record in five seasons.

LSU in 1995

The LSU Fighting Tigers football team represented the LSU Tigers of Louisiana State University during the 1995 Southeastern Conference football season. This was LSU's one hundred-second season overall and its sixty-third season playing football as a member of the Southeastern Conference (SEC). In 1992, LSU joined the Western Division of the Southeastern Conference.

Led by coach Gerry DiNardo, the LSU head coach in his first of five seasons as head coach of LSU, the Tigers had a poor season at 7-4-1. Their SEC record was 4-3-1 giving them a fourth place in the Western Division of the SEC. At the national level, the Tigers were ranked #25 in the coaches' poll and unranked in the AP. LSU was again in the chips with a positive record and the team was invited to a post-season bowl in 1995.

LSU concluded its season with a 45–26 win over Michigan State in the 1995 Independence Bowl. The 45 points scored by LSU in their bowl win over the Spartans was the second-most points (behind Drew Brees and Purdue's 52 points in 1999) allowed by a Nick Saban coached team until the 2019 LSU Tigers put up 46 against Saban's Alabama squad (which was also the most points surrendered by any Alabama team at home in regulation). As we know, Saban became the LSU coach in 2000.

Games of the 1995 Season

In the season opener on September 2, 1995, at #3 Texas A&M in a game played at Kyle Field College Station, TX, the Aggies beat LSU L (17–33) before 70,057. On Sep 9, LSU beat Mississippi State at Scott Field in Starkville, MS W (34–16) before 36,110. Then, on Sep 16, LSU beat #5 Auburn at Tiger Stadium Baton Rouge, LA (Tiger Bowl) W 12–6 80,559. This was the home opener for LSU and the attendance was already on the upswing with the new coach and the prospects of a winning season. .

On Sep 23, LSU pounded Rice at Tiger Stadium Baton Rouge, LA W (52–7) before 73,342. On Sep 30 South Carolina played LSU to a tie game T (20-20) at the Williams-Brice Stadium in Columbia, SC. Before 67,902. On Oct 7, #3 Florida handily defeated LSU at Tiger Stadium Baton Rouge, LA L (10–28) before 80,583. On Oct 14, at Kentucky at Commonwealth Stadium, Lexington, KY, the Wildcats beat the Tigers L (16–24) before 51,500. At home on Oct 21, LSU shellacked North Texas at Tiger Stadium Baton Rouge, LA W (49-7) before 66,870

At #16 Alabama on Nov 4, at Bryant–Denny Stadium Tuscaloosa, AL, the Crimson Tide prevailed v LSU L (3–10) before 70,123. On Nov 11, LSU pounded Ole Miss at Tiger Stadium Baton Rouge, LA (Magnolia Bowl) W (38–9) before 78,246. Then, on Nov 18, LSU shut-out #14 Arkansas at Tiger Stadium, Baton Rouge, LA W (28–0) before 66,548. There was no Tulane game this year.

Independence Bowl December 29, 1995

In the Independence Bowl on December 29, 1995 29 at 4:30 PM , the LSU Tigers pounded the Michigan State Spartans into the ground. The Spartans coach was Nick Saban and no team had ever scored so much against a Saban coached squad. The game was held in Independence Stadium Shreveport, LA (Independence Bowl) W 45–26 before 48,835

INDEPENDENCE BOWL

By Michael Sandler, Washington Post

December 29, 1995

This year game featured Louisiana State vs. Michigan State. It was played at Independence Stadium, Shreveport, La. It was on TV at 5:30 p.m. and the broadcast was carried by ESPN.

Coming into the game, the LSU Tigers were 6-4-1; Michigan State Spartans 6-4-1. Coaches: LSU 1st yr. head coach Gerry DiNardo; Michigan State's coach in his first year there was Nick Saban. The payout per team was $750,000 per team.

Of note: the teams never have met. LOUISIANA STATE Tigers played their first winning season since 1988. Freshman TBs Kevin Faulk and Kendall Cleveland combined for 1,414 yards rushing and 16 TDs. Freshman QB Herb Tyler replaced injured starter Jamie Howard (elbow/shoulder) and completed 45 of 69 passes for 589 yards and five TDs in four games, three starts. Tigers ranked sixth in the nation in pass efficiency defense and scoring defense. LB Allen Stansberry and SS Talvi Crawford each made more than 100 tackles. P Chad Kessler was fourth in nation at 44.1 yards per punt.

MICHIGAN STATE Spartans won four of their last six regular season games. Special teams scored three touchdowns in final two regular season victories. Derrick Mason (4.3 yards per return) needs 47 yards to become Big Ten's all-time leader in kickoff return yards. Mason also is Spartans' leading receiver with 47 catches for 713 yards. Junior LB Reggie Garnett, the team's leading tackler (104), made his 34th consecutive start dating from second game of his freshman season.

Top LSU Players Chuck Wiley DT, DE 1995-97

1997 First-Team All-SEC (AP, Coaches, Football News)

1996 First-Team All-SEC (AP)

1995 Second-Team All-SEC (AP)

Wiley was an All-SEC selection in three seasons, including a consensus first-team pick as a senior in 1997 (AP, Coaches, Football News). He ranks second on LSU's all-time career tackles for loss list with 43. He finished his career fifth on LSU's all-time sack list with 19.

In one game during the 1997 season, Wiley recorded four sacks in a single contest, which still stands as the program's single game record.

His 19 career sacks currently ranks fourth all time on LSU's career sack list.

Chuck Wiley was a member of the SEC Academic Honor Roll as a junior, and a third-round pick (62nd overall) of the Carolina Panthers in 1997. He played five seasons in the National Football League with the Panthers (1999), Atlanta Falcons (2000-01) and Minnesota Vikings (2002-04).

Top LSU Players Kevin Faulk, RB 1995-1998

Keven Faulk as selected by the New England Patriots as the 46th overall pick in the second round of the 1999 NFL Draft. He was one of three LSU players taken in the 1999 draft, along with Anthony McFarland, and Todd McClure. Faulk was the first LSU running back/tailback drafted since 1991 when Harvey Williams was taken by Kansas City.

Faulk was very well known at LSU because he was very, very good as a player. He made All-American and he was a three-time All-SEC selection. He finished his career as LSU's all-time leading rusher while breaking a plethora of other LSU and SEC marks. When he graduated, he held 17 LSU and SEC records.

Kevin Faulk rushed for 4,557 yards and 46 touchdowns in his career. He finished fourth in NCAA history and first in SEC history with 6,833 all-purpose yards. He held the SEC record that was previously held by Georgia legend Hershel Walker. He had 53 total touchdowns.

He chose not to enter the NFL Draft after his junior season to stay on for his senior year. He earned his degree in kinesiology in just three and a half years. Kevin rushed for more than 100 yards in 22 games during his career and the Tigers were 18-4 in those games. He was a difference maker for sure.

He rushed for more than 200 yards four times, including a school record 246 vs. Houston in 1996. He was the leading rusher in the SEC in each of his junior and senior seasons and became only the sixth player in SEC history to lead the league in rushing twice during a career. He was a First-Team All-American as an all-purpose player his sophomore season of 1996, The SEC Freshman Offensive Player of the Year in 1995 and the Independence Bowl Offensive MVP that year. On top of all that, he played in the 1999 Senior Bowl.

Top LSU Players Alan Faneca 1995-1997

The pundits say that Alan Faneca should be no stranger to NFL fans as this feared offensive guard put together one of the most established careers of any offensive lineman in NFL history. It's scary to think that Faneca was just as dominant during his college days at LSU.

Faneca was the top freshman in the SEC conference in 1995 and then went on to be an All-American in his sophomore and junior seasons. He was a finalist for the Outland Trophy in 1997, where it was reported that he only allowed one sack throughout the entire season.

Faneca was certainly one of LSU's all-time great offensive linemen from 1995-97, Faneca was a second-team All-American pick in 1996 and a first-teamer in 1997 when he was a finalist for the Outland Trophy as the nation's top lineman.

A guard who overcame epilepsy, he started his final 36 college games and allowed only one sack as a junior before declaring for the NFL draft. He was chosen in the first round with the 26th overall pick by the Pittsburgh Steelers and went on to play 10 years with them, two with the New York Jets and one with the Arizona Cardinals.

Faneca was voted to nine consecutive Pro Bowls (2001-09) and was a six-time Associated Press All-Pro first-team pick (2001-02, 2004-07). He started 201 of 206 games he appeared in and started all 16 games in his final nine seasons in the league. He played on the Steelers team that won Super Bowl XL and helped spring Willie Parker for a 75-yard TD run, the longest run in Super Bowl history, on the second play of the second half to give Pittsburgh a 14-3 lead over the Seattle Seahawks.

He was named to the Pro Football Hall of Fame's All-2000s team and was chosen to the Steelers' 75th anniversary all-time team in 2007. Alan Faneca does extensive charitable work with the Epilepsy Foundation of America. Born 12-7-1976 in New Orleans.

"He was one of the guys who was a great student of the game and his technique," DiNardo said. "He broke the game down more coach-like than player-like. It was really important to him. Alan bought into the 'a 6-inch step is better than an 8-inch step' and a 3-inch step isn't good enough."

"He was a quiet guy, not a vocal leader. Everyone looked at him and really respected how hard he worked, how attentive to detail he was."

Said LSU line mate Ben Bordelon, with whom Faneca played two seasons: "You could tell from the first day of practice he was going to be something special. In walk-through you could tell from his strength, footwork. . . he was athletic and a hard worker. He always led by example. He would teach the upperclassmen how to do it."

With Faneca up front and Kevin Faulk in the backfield, LSU became known for its physical style running game. He was a second team All-America pick as a sophomore and a consensus All-American as a junior. He was one of three finalists for the Outland Trophy in 1997.

After the 1997 season he and Faulk, who became LSU's all-time rushing leader, had to decide whether or not move on to the NFL. Most fans and even the LSU coaching staff expected Faneca to stay and Faulk to leave, but the reverse happened.

Faneca made his tearful farewell at a press conference after learning from the NFL Advisory Committee he would undoubtedly become a first-round pick.

“It tore me up to leave friends and take that big of step and leave the comfort zone of LSU,” Faneca recalled

“I equate it to the decision to retire. It was a lot of little things—my recruiting class and core buddies had already moved on. It felt like the right thing to do.”

The Steelers made Faneca the 26th player picked in the draft and he paid immediate dividends when injuries hit the Steelers' offensive line in 1998. He received the franchise's Joe Greene Award for the top rookie and by 2001 was named to his first of nine consecutive Pro Bowls. He was an All-Pro in 2001-02 and 2004-07.

Top LSU Players Anthony. McFarland DT 1995-98

- 1998 First-Team All-SEC (SEC Coaches, AP, Football News)
- 1996 Second-Team All-SEC (SEC Coaches, AP)
- 1996 Peach Bowl SEC Defensive MVP
- 1995 Knoxville News-Sentinel Freshman All-SEC Team
- 1995 SEC Freshman Co-Defensive Player of the Year

Always looked on as one of the nation's most outstanding and colorful linemen, Anthony McFarland earned first team All-America honors from the Associated Press and The Football News in 1998. He was a four-year starter for LSU and defensive co-captain his senior year. Anthony finished at No. 6 in LSU history in quarterback sacks with 17 and was first-team All-SEC his senior season besides being second-team All-SEC as a sophomore and the Defensive MVP in the 1996 Peach Bowl

He was also the SEC Freshman Co-Defensive Player of the Year in 1995. McFarland became a fan favorite because of his two-way play during his freshman season. Though he missed the 1996 season opener with broken foot, he went on to have an exceptional season. McFarland moved to the top of the depth chart during 1995 fall drills and never relinquished that role.

He was a versatile athlete as witnessed by his playing fullback in short yardage situations in 1995. He surprised everybody by catching a TD pass vs. Florida. He was so good that he did not have a redshirt season. To cap off a great career, McFarland played in 1999 Senior Bowl. Many think that his nickname "Booger" is his real name.

McFarland was a big boy, but he knew how to use that weight to push around opposing offensive lineman. He was a dominant pass rusher and run stopper who went on to be named an All-American in 1998.

1996 Football Season Gerry DiNardo Coach # 29

The LSU Fighting Tigers football team represented the LSU Tigers of Louisiana State University during the 1996 Southeastern Conference football season. This was LSU's one hundred-third season overall and its sixty-fourth season playing football as a member of the Southeastern Conference (SEC). In 1992, LSU joined the Western Division of the Southeastern Conference.

Led by coach Gerry DiNardo, the LSU head coach in his second of five seasons as head coach of LSU, the Tigers had a fine season at 10-2. Their SEC record was 6-2 giving them a tie for the championship with Alabama in the Western Division of the SEC. At the national level, the Tigers were ranked #13 in the coaches' poll and #12 in the AP. LSU was again in the chips with a positive record and the team was invited to a post-season bowl (Peach Bowl) in 1996.

Coach DiNardo on Duty

As noted, LSU finished with a 10–2 overall record (6–2 in SEC play) after defeating the Clemson Tigers, 10–7, in the Peach Bowl. It was Coach Di Nardo’s second season as head coach and the Tigers built upon the previous year’s success with their first ten-win season and bowl win since 1987. The years of bad coaching had ended.

The Tigers tied for the SEC West title with Alabama, but had lost to the Tide 26–0 in Baton Rouge in a game that was notable for being Shaun Alexander’s breakout performance.

Games of the 1996 Season

In the home and season opener, on September 7, LSU nosed out Houston in Tiger Stadium, Baton Rouge, LA W (35–34) before 80,303. On Sep 21, at #14 Auburn, #21 LSU defeated the “Tigers” at Jordan–Hare Stadium, Auburn, AL (Tiger Bowl) W (19–15) 85,214. On Sep 28 LSU crushed New Mexico State at home in Tiger Stadium, Baton Rouge, LA W (63–7) before 77,676. Then, on Oct 5, LSU clobbered Vanderbilt at Tiger Stadium Baton Rouge, LA W(35–0) before 80,142. At #1 Florida on Oct 12, at the Ben Hill Griffin Stadium in Gainesville, FL. the Gators walloped the Tigers L (13–56) before 85,567. Then, on Oct 19 LSU drubbed Kentucky at Tiger Stadium in Baton Rouge, LA W (41–14) before 79,660

At home on Oct 26, LSU beat Mississippi State at Tiger Stadium Baton Rouge, LA W (28–20) before 79,594. On Nov 9, #10 Alabama shut out the LSU Tigers at home in Tiger Stadium, Baton Rouge, LA. It was a College GameDay. The score was L (0–26) before 80,290. Then, on Nov 16, LSU beat Ole Miss at Vaught–Hemingway Stadium, Oxford, MS in the Magnolia Bowl, W (39–7) before 44,436. At home on Nov 23 in the Battle of the Rag, LSU defeated Tulane at Tiger Stadium, Baton Rouge, LA (35–17) before 78,966. In the season finale at Arkansas, on Nov 29 at the War Memorial Stadium in Little Rock, AR in the Battle for the Golden Boot, LSU beat the Razorbacks W (17–7) before 22,329.

Quarterback Herb Tyler, the unsung hero of the Tiger offense, led a balanced attack against a stubborn Clemson squad to send LSU to a 10-7 victory in the Peach Bowl at the Georgia Dome.

The win gave the Tigers their second straight bowl victory and provided them with their first 10-win season in nearly a decade and only the fifth in school history.

Clemson jumped in front early after LSU turned the ball over deep in Clemson territory. Clemson quarterback Nealon Greene took the ball in from five yards out for a 7-0 lead in the first quarter. As the defenses shined in this Peach Bowl, it would be Clemson's only points of the night.

Kevin Faulk evened the game at 7-7 with a 3-yard scamper that capped an efficient 80-yard drive. Wade Richey added a 22-yard field goal just before intermission to give the Tigers a 10-7 lead.

It was a see-saw defensive battle in which neither team got into an offensive rhythm in the second half. The teams exchanged punts before Clemson mounted a late attack. Aaron Adams blocked a 52-yard Clemson field goal attempt and almost scored with under two minutes remaining to seal the victory for LSU.

Herb Tyler was named MVP of the game after completing 14-of-21 passes for 163 yards while rushing for an additional 38. LSU has learned to believe that a good coach makes a world of difference.

1997 Football Season Gerry DiNardo Coach # 29

The LSU Fighting Tigers football team represented the LSU Tigers of Louisiana State University during the 1997 Southeastern Conference football season. This was LSU's one hundred-fourth season overall and its sixty-fifth season playing football as a member of the Southeastern Conference (SEC). In 1992, LSU joined the Western Division of the Southeastern Conference.

Led by coach Gerry DiNardo, the LSU head coach in his third of five seasons as head coach of LSU, the Tigers had a fine season at 9-3. Their SEC record was 6-2 giving them a tie for first in the Western Division of the SEC. At the national level, the Tigers were ranked #13 in the coaches' poll and #13 in the AP. LSU was again in the post season with a positive record and the team was invited to the Independence Bowl in 1997. LSU was victorious—three in a row.

The Tigers had big expectations after completing their first 10-win season since 1987. The season was not as good as the prior year but it was nonetheless a fine season. It was highlighted by a stunning 28–21 home upset of the top ranked Florida Gators. This ended Florida's 25-game winning streak in SEC play. Additionally, the team completed a great Independence Bowl victory over the Notre Dame Fighting Irish, who had defeated the Tigers in Baton Rouge during the regular season.

LSU also shut out Alabama 27–0 at Tuscaloosa. This more or less paid back the favor for a 26–0 loss the previous season in Baton Rouge. Despite the highs, LSU also experienced two embarrassing home losses. The first was to Ole Miss one week after the Tigers' conquest of then-No. 1 Florida. The second was to Notre Dame, which came to Baton Rouge at 4–5, needing three consecutive victories just to qualify for a bowl. In a stunning 24–6 triumph, the Irish rushed for 232 yards and played their first penalty-free and turnover-free game in program history.

LSU was also quite fortunate to escape with a 7–6 victory at Vanderbilt, DiNardo's last coaching stop. The Commodores scored a late touchdown and were lined up to go for a two-point conversion and a potential 8–7 win, but two delay of game penalties convinced Vanderbilt coach Woody Widenhofer to instead play for overtime.

LSU's Arnold Miller preserved the win by blocking the kick. The Tigers tied for the SEC West title for the second straight year, but Auburn had won a dramatic game in Baton Rouge earlier in the season and therefore represented the West in the SEC Championship.

Games of the 1997 Season

In the home and season opener, on September 6, 1997, at 7:00 p.m., LSU beat up UTEP at Tiger Stadium in Baton Rouge, LA W (55–3) before 80,015. On Sep 13, LSU defeated Mississippi State at Scott Field in Starkville, MS W (24–9) before 40,030. Then on Sep 20, #12 Auburn edged out #10 LSU at home in Tiger Stadium, Baton Rouge, LA (Tiger Bowl) L 28–31 before 80,538. At home on Sep 27, LSU overpowered Akron at Tiger Stadium in Baton Rouge, LA W (56-0) before 79,772. At Vanderbilt on Oct 4, LSU nosed out the Commodores at Vanderbilt Stadium, Nashville, TN W (7–6) before 37,045. On Oct 11, #14 LSU toppled #1 ranked Florida, destroying a run for the title by the Gators. Game was played at home in Tiger Stadium, Baton Rouge, LA. It was a College GameDay celebration on ESPN W (28–21) before 80,677

On Oct 18, #8 Ole Miss beat LSU at home in Tiger Stadium, Baton Rouge, LA (Magnolia Bowl) L (21–36) before 80,442. At Kentucky on Nov 1 in a game played at Commonwealth Stadium in Lexington, KY, the Tigers obliterated the Wildcats W (63–28) before 58,450. At Alabama on Nov 8, LSU shut out the Crimson Tide at Bryant–Denny Stadium, Tuscaloosa, AL W (27–0) before 70,123. On Nov 15, Notre Dame beat LSU at home in Tiger Stadium, Baton Rouge, LA L (6–24) before 80,566. On Nov 28, LSU beat the Arkansas Razorbacks at home in Tiger Stadium, Baton Rouge, LA in the new Battle for the Golden Boot. W (31–21) before 79,619.

Independence Bowl December 28, 1997 7:00 PM

On December 28, 1997 in the Independence Stadium in Shreveport, LA, at 7:00 p.m., LSU dominated Notre Dame in achieving an Independence Bowl Game victory over the Fighting Irish W (27–9) before 50,459.

After Notre Dame's flawless performance a month earlier in Notre Dame's 24-6 victory over the LSU Tigers, the two teams had a rematch at the Independence Bowl in Shreveport. This time, led by running back Rondell Mealey's 222 yards rushing, the Tigers avenge the loss under head coach and Notre Dame alumnus Gerry DiNardo. LSU W (2709). News was made also at ND as this was Irish head coach Bob Davie's initial Irish campaign. It ended in a dismal 7-6, thanks to the LSU Tigers.

1998 Football Season Gerry DiNardo Coach # 29

The LSU Fighting Tigers football team represented the LSU Tigers of Louisiana State University during the 1998 Southeastern Conference football season. This was LSU's one hundred-fifth season overall and its sixty-sixth season playing football as a member of the Southeastern Conference (SEC). In 1992, LSU joined the Western Division of the Southeastern Conference.

Led by coach Gerry DiNardo, the LSU head coach in his fourth of five seasons as head coach of LSU, the Tigers had a poor season at 4-7. Their SEC record was 2-6 giving them a fifth place finish in the Western Division of the SEC. At the national level, the Tigers were unranked in the coaches' poll and unranked in the AP. LSU was not invited to a post-season game.

Games of the 1998 Season

In the home and season opener on September 12, 1998 at 7:00 p.m., LSU blasted Arkansas State at Tiger Stadium, Baton Rouge, LA W (42–6) before 80,051. At Auburn on Sep 19, at the Jordan–Hare Stadium, Auburn, AL in the Tiger Bowl, LSU's Tigers defeated Auburn's Tigers W (31–19) before 85,214. On Sep 26, LSU pounded Idaho at Tiger Stadium Baton Rouge, LA W (53–20) before 80,466. On Oct 3, #12 Georgia nosed out LSU at Tiger Stadium in Baton Rouge, LA L (27–28) before 80,792. Then, on Oct 10 at #6 Florida in a game played at Ben Hill Griffin stadium in Gainesville, FL, the Gators prevailed L (10–22) before 85,407. At home on Oct 17, Kentucky squeaked by LSU at home in Tiger Stadium, Baton Rouge, LA L (36–39) before 80,524.

On Oct 24, LSU beat lambasted Mississippi State at home in Tiger Stadium, Baton Rouge, LA W (41–6) before 80,040. Then, on Oct Ole Miss beat LSU at Vaught–Hemingway Stadium in Oxford, MS (Magnolia Bowl) L (31–37) before 50,577. At home on Nov 7, Alabama beat LSU at Tiger Stadium, Baton Rouge, LA L (16–22) before 80,522. On Nov 21, #10 Notre Dame beat LSU in a close match at Notre Dame Notre Dame Stadium, Notre Dame, IN L (36–39) before 80,012. In the season finale on Nov 27, #13 Arkansas pounded LSU at the War Memorial Stadium in Little Rock, AR in the Battle for the Golden Boot. L (14–41) before 55,831

LSU Great Players DE Jarvis Green 1998-2001

Second Team All-SEC (Coaches)

SEC Player of the Week vs. Arkansas (Nov. 23, 2001)

1998 Freshman All-American (The Football News)

1998 Freshman All-SEC (Knoxville News Sentinel)

One of the most dominating defensive linemen in school history, Green earned a spot on the Coaches' All-SEC team in his senior year. He was named SEC Player of the Week on Dec. 3 following a 7-tackle, 1 sack performance vs. Auburn.

The SEC Player of the Week honor was the first of his career. He recorded his 10th sack of career vs. Auburn, moving him to sole possession of 4th place in LSU history. He had 3 solo tackles, one for a loss vs. Arkansas. His best game in his senior years was vs. Alabama with 7 tackles and 2 sacks .

Jarvis Green scored sacks in 2001. He started all 13 games for the Tigers, and during his productive career, he had 40 starts. As a senior, had 52 tackles, 7 for losses, to go along with a team-best 25 QB pressures. He also had 7 tackles vs. Ole Miss.

Green was drafted in the fourth round of the 2002 NFL Draft by the New England Patriots.

LSU Great Players WR Josh Reed 1998-2001

Thanks to D. Dever from Flickr.com for this great picture of Josh Reed at Training Camp.

LSU's Josh Reed gave Tiger fans something fun to look forward to on those hot, humid, Baton Rouge nights in Tiger Stadium.

Reed started his football career in Louisiana where he was a two-time Class 3A All-State pick and was selected for the Atlanta Journal-Constitution Super Southern 100. Tons of scholarship offers came, but he decided to stay at home and go to LSU.

Majoring in kinesiology, he became one of the most decorated players in Louisiana State history. After spending his freshman year as a running back, he moved to wide receiver and rewrote the SEC record books.

Reed holds the SEC record for receiving yardage in a game (293 vs. Alabama in 2001) and season (1,740 in 2001). He also held the career receiving yardage record with 3,001 yards until 2002. His 3,000 yards receiving made him the first SEC player ever to break the 3,000-yard barrier. Reed also holds the SEC season record for receiving yardage per game (145.0 in 2001) and is second in the career receiving yardage per game (96.8).

To cap off an SEC championship season in 2001, Reed was awarded the Fred Biletnikoff Award as the nation's best receiver.

Reed was an All-America pick by a host of outlets including the Associated Press, CNNSI.com, and The Sporting News, and was named to the SEC's 75th Anniversary football team in 2007.

The LSU legend was drafted by the Buffalo Bills in the second round (36th overall) of the 2002 NFL Draft. In 2003, he replaced Peerless Price as the Bills' starting wide receiver and caught 58 passes and two touchdowns. He finished his career in Buffalo with 311 catches for 3,575 yards and 10 touchdowns. After becoming a free agent after the 2009 season, Reed was signed by San Diego, but was released before the 2010 season.

Josh Reed should be on anybody's All-Time SEC Fantasy Football Team.

1999 Hal Hunter Interim – One Game

The LSU Fighting Tigers football team represented the LSU Tigers of Louisiana State University during the 1999 Southeastern Conference football season. This was LSU's one hundred-sixth season overall and its sixty-seventh season playing football as a member of the Southeastern Conference (SEC). In 1992, LSU joined the Western Division of the Southeastern Conference.

Led by coach Gerry DiNardo, the LSU head coach in his fifth and last of five seasons as head coach of LSU, the Tigers had a poor season at 3-8. Their SEC record was 1-7 giving them a sixth place finish in the Western Division of the SEC. At the national level, the Tigers were unranked in the coaches' poll and unranked in the AP. LSU was not invited to a post-season game.

LSU fired coach DiNardo before the final game of the season against conference opponent Arkansas after eight consecutive losses. It was not improving. They named Assistant Coach Hal Hunter as interim head coach for the final game. DiNardo was given the opportunity to coach the game vs. Arkansas, but chose not to do so.

This was in stark contrast to his predecessor at LSU, Curley Hallman, who coached the Tigers in their final two games of 1994 after being fired five years to the day prior to DiNardo's dismissal).

In Coach Hunter's only game as the team's head coach, unranked LSU (2-8, 0-7) dominated #17 Arkansas (7-3, 4-3) in their lone victory over a conference opponent that season. The coach matters. Former Michigan State University head football coach Nick Saban accepted LSU's offer and took over the team in December 1999. Things would get better again.

Games of the 1999 Season

In the season and home opener on September 4, 199, at 7:00 p.m. LSU barely beat San Jose State at Tiger Stadium in Baton Rouge, LA, W (29–21) before 76,753. On Sep 11. LSU swamped North Texas at Tiger Stadium, Baton Rouge, LA W (52–0) before 79,845. The Auburn game was the beginning of eight losses in a row, unprecedented. On Sep 18, Auburn pounded LSU at Tiger Stadium,

Baton Rouge, LA (Tiger Bowl) L (7–41) before 80,562. On Oct 2, #10 Georgia nosed out LSU by one point at Sanford Stadium, Athens, GA L (22–23) before 86,117. On Oct 9, #8 Florida beat LSU at Tiger Stadium Baton Rouge, LA L (10–31) before 80,255. Then, on Oct 16, Kentucky powered by LSU at Commonwealth Stadium, Lexington, KY L (5–31) before 67,370

On Oct 23, #12 Mississippi State beat LSU in a close match at Scott Field Starkville, MS L (16–17) before 41,274. On Oct 30, # 25 Ole Miss defeated LSU at home in Tiger Stadium Baton Rouge, LA (Magnolia Bowl) L (23–42) before 80,084. On Nov 6, #12 Alabama beat LSU at Bryant–Denny Stadium in Tuscaloosa, AL L (17–23) before 83,818. At home on Nov 13, Houston defeated LSU at home in Tiger Stadium Baton Rouge, LA L (7–20) before 76,671. Then, in the season finale at home, after the coaching change for the last game, LSU won a game after losing eight in a row. They manhandled Arkansas at Tiger Stadium Baton Rouge, LA on the Battle for the Golden Boot W (35–10) before 77,610

Top LSU Players Bradie James LB 1999-2002

Former West Monroe High School star Bradie James led seven former student-athletes who have been elected for induction into the LSU Athletic Hall of Fame, Director of Athletics Scott Woodward announced on Tuesday.

When it comes to the most dominant season for a linebacker, that would have to belong to Bradie James, who recorded 154 tackles during his senior campaign. In his four-year career at LSU, James recorded more than 400 tackles and was named All-American in his senior season.

The 2019 induction class was chosen by the LSU Athletic Hall of Fame Election Board, and it includes NCAA track and field champion Walter Davis; All-American softball infielder Ashlee Ducote; All-American women’s golfer Meredith Duncan; Olympic wrestling gold medalist Kevin Jackson; NCAA gymnastics champion Susan Jackson; All-American linebacker James; and All-American baseball infielder Jason Williams.

The induction ceremony was held on Friday, Oct. 11, at the Capitol Park Museum in downtown Baton Rouge.

“There is no greater honor for a former student-athlete at LSU than to be selected to this venerable hall of fame,” Woodward said. “It’s a very difficult hall of fame in which to be inducted. Those in the hall represent the very best of LSU Athletics as students, as athletes and as all-around contributors to this university and its great history. We are so proud to welcome this new class.”

James was a 2002 first-team All-American at linebacker, and he was named a 2002 National Scholar-Athlete by the National Football Foundation. He was a semifinalist for the Butkus Award and for the Lombardi Award, and he was a two-time first-team All-SEC selection.

James, who set the LSU record for most tackles in a season (154) in 2002, played in the NFL for 10 years with the Dallas Cowboys and Houston Texans. He established Foundation 56, a charitable organization which raises funds for the fight against breast cancer. Davis, who competed at LSU from 2000-02, was a nine-time All-American as a long jumper, triple jumper and sprinter. He won six NCAA individual titles, and he led the Tigers to the 2002 NCAA men’s outdoor team title, scoring 30 of LSU’s 64 total points.

Top LSU Players Rohan Davey 1999-2001

It was not too long ago that the combination of Rohan Davey to Josh Reed was a great receiver QB connection. Now it is considered to be the most lethal quarterback-to-receiver connection in LSU history.

Davey, a lot of LSU aficionado's all-time favorite LSU quarterback, was a real stat machine in 2001, and he had one of the greatest performances in LSU history against Alabama that season.

Davey threw for 528 passing yards with two touchdowns against the Crimson Tide, and that was just a sample of what Davey did that season.

Davey's 3,351 total yards in 2001 is the highest total yards in a single season in school history.

Imagine what Davey could have done in his career if he started ahead of Josh Booty.

Davey's best performance during the regular season of his senior year in 2001, was at Alabama, when he passed for 528 yards. He became the first LSU quarterback to throw for more than 500 yards in a game. By passing for 528 yards against Alabama, Davey also became #3 in SEC history for most passing yards in a game (beating Peyton Manning's 523 passing yards against Kentucky in 1997).

Davey's major victories included unranked LSU's 41–38 victory over #24 Arkansas and #22 LSU's 27–14 victory over #25 Auburn. Against Arkansas, Davey threw for 359 yards and 3 touchdowns. Against Auburn, Davey threw for 245 yards and 1 touchdown. In the SEC Championship game against #2 Tennessee, Davey had 84 yards passing before having to sit the rest of the game out due to injury.

Davey capped off his senior season by passing for 444 yards and 3 touchdowns in the Sugar Bowl against #7 Illinois, leading the Tigers to a 47–34 victory. At that time, the only other LSU quarterback who had ever thrown for more than 400 yards in a game was Tommy Hodson in 1989. For his performance, Davey was named Sugar Bowl MVP. For this performance, Davey was enshrined in LSU's hall of fame. As a result of his performance during the 2001 season, Davey was voted to the second team of the All-SEC Team.

As a pro, he got two Super Bowl Rings as a backup to Tom Brady.

Nick Saban

Biography of an American football coach.

This bio was written by Adam Augustyn, Managing Editor, Reference Content at Encyclopedia Britannica.

It is current as of 2019

Nick Saban, byname of Nicholas Lou Saban, Jr., (born October 31, 1951, Fairmont, West Virginia, U.S.), American collegiate and professional gridiron football coach who led his teams to six National Collegiate Athletic Association (NCAA) top-division football national championships and is considered one of the greatest college football coaches of all time.

Saban played defensive back at Kent State University. Upon his graduation in 1973, he had intended to pursue a career in automotive sales until the Kent State head coach, Don James, hired him as a graduate assistant. Saban worked his way up the coaching ladder through various collegiate and professional assistant roles before landing his first head-coaching job with the University of Toledo. He spent just one season there before moving on in 1991 to become the defensive coordinator of the Cleveland Browns of the National Football League (NFL) under head coach Bill Belichick.

Saban returned to the college game in 1995 as the head coach at Michigan State University, where he rebuilt the team over the course of five seasons. Following the 1999–2000 season, when Michigan State finished with a 9–2 record, he resigned and became the head coach at Louisiana State University (LSU). Saban had even more success during his five years at LSU, with five appearances in bowl games. Following a 13–1 campaign during the 2003–04 season, LSU defeated the University of Oklahoma in the BCS national championship (in the Sugar Bowl) to give Saban his first college national title.

After spending one more year at LSU, he returned to the professional ranks as the head coach of the NFL's Miami Dolphins. The team had two mediocre seasons, however, marked by numerous personality clashes between Saban and his players, and he left to take over the University of Alabama in 2007.

Saban quickly rebuilt Alabama into a powerhouse with his sharp recruiting and defensive-strategy acumen. In his third season he led the Crimson Tide to a perfect 14–0 record, ending with a victory over the University of Texas in the national championship game. He followed that with consecutive national titles in the 2011–12 and 2012–13 seasons. Alabama was the top seed in the inaugural College Football Playoff (CFP) after the 2014–15 regular season, but the team was upset in the Sugar Bowl semifinal by the Ohio State University. In 2015–16 Saban coached Alabama to a 14–1 record, capping off another successful season with an overwhelming 38–0 victory over his former school Michigan State in the CFP semifinal and a win over Clemson University in the national championship game.

Although his five total top-division college football championships still trailed the six national titles won by his Alabama predecessor Paul (“Bear”) Bryant, Saban’s success came after college football was established as a big business with millions of dollars spent at schools, making the sport more competitive (and with higher stakes) than ever before, leading some observers to start referring to Saban as the best college coach ever.

In 2016 he guided Alabama to an undefeated regular season in which the dominant Crimson Tide topped the Associated Press college football poll from the first week of the season until the CFP championship game. There, Alabama lost a thrilling title-game rematch to Clemson.

Despite having suffered a regular-season loss and not appearing in the SEC championship game, Alabama was controversially selected to be one of the four CFP semifinalists following the 2017 season. The team again proved that it was the premier program of the early 21st century by easily defeating Clemson in the national semifinals and then beating the University of Georgia in the first CFP championship game to be decided in overtime.

Saban’s coaching in the title game was especially bold, as he benched his season-long starting quarterback at halftime in favor of true freshman Tua Tagovailoa, who rallied Alabama from a 13–0 deficit to its overtime victory.

Alabama returned to the CFP final following another undefeated regular season in 2018, but the Crimson Tide lost to Clemson by 28 points, the team’s worst loss of the Saban era. In 2019 Alabama lost two regular-season games and was left out of the CFP field for the first time in that event’s six-year existence.

LSU in Year 2000

The LSU Fighting Tigers football team represented the LSU Tigers of Louisiana State University during the 2000 Southeastern Conference football season. This was LSU's one hundred-seventh season overall and its sixty-eighth season playing football as a member of the Southeastern Conference (SEC). In 1992, LSU joined the Western Division of the Southeastern Conference.

Coach Saban at work for LSU

Led by coach Nick Saban, the LSU head coach in his first of five seasons as head coach of LSU, the Tigers had a comeback season at 8-4. Their SEC record was 5-3 giving them a second place finish in the Western Division of the SEC. At the national level, the Tigers were ranked #22 in the AP. LSU was invited to play in the Peach Bowl, defeating Georgia Tech.

The coach makes a big difference in football. Using most of the team that Gerry Dinardo had a tough time squeezing a victory from, Nick Saban turned the faltering LSU program around in his first season. It nears repeating. Saban led the team to a turnaround from a 3–8 record in 1999 to an 8–4 record and a victory in the Peach Bowl.

Games of the 2000 Season

About the Home Field

Since it was built, Tiger Stadium has kept up with the times. In this chronology, when we hit the year 2000, LSU released another big expansion and it had another planned for 2005. The 11,600 seat addition in 2000 allowed the Tigers to pack a ton more screaming fans into Tiger Stadium. Throughout the 2005 season, the Tigers continued to expand the Stadium with the west side expansion. This $60 million expansion added 3,255 club seats, a new press box and upper deck on the west side of the stadium. Completed by the 2006 season, this expansion increased the seating capacity of Tiger Stadium to 92,400. I wonder if I'll be invited one day to somebody's 50-yr line seats for a Tigers' game. OK, it's a dream.

In the year 2000 season and home opener on September 2 at 7:00 p.m., LSU walloped Western Carolina at Tiger Stadium Baton Rouge, LA W (58–0) before 87,188. On Sep 9, LSU beat Houston at Tiger Stadium, Baton Rouge, LA W (28–13) before 82,469. Then, on Sep 16, at No. 24 Auburn in Jordan–Hare Stadium, Auburn, AL (Tiger Bowl), LSU and Nick Saban got their first defeat of the season, L (17–34) before 85,612. On Sep 23, UAB defeated LSU at Tiger Stadium in Baton Rouge, LA L (10–13) before 85,339. Then, on Sep 30, LSU beat #11 Tennessee in OT at Tiger Stadium Baton Rouge, LA W (38–31) OT before 91,682.

On Oct 7 at #12 Florida at Ben Hill Griffin Stadium Gainesville, FL, the Gators clobbered LSU L (9–41) before 85,365. On Oct 14, LSU shutout Kentucky at Tiger Stadium Baton Rouge, LA W (34–0) before 85,664. On Oct 21, LSU got by #13 Mississippi State at Tiger Stadium Baton Rouge, LA, W 45–38 OT before 90,584. On Nov 4, LSU squeaked a win out of Alabama at Tiger Stadium, Baton Rouge, LA W (30–28) before 91,778.

On Nov 11 LSU beat Ole Miss at Vaught–Hemingway Stadium, Oxford, MS (Magnolia Bowl) W (20–9) before 52,476. On Nov 24 in the regular season finale at Arkansas' War Memorial Stadium in Little Rock, AR in the Battle for the Golden Boot, the Razorbacks beat LSU L (3–14) before 43,982.

The Peach Bowl December 29, 2000

On December 29, 2000 at 4:00 p.m. at the Georgia Dome in Atlanta, GA (Peach Bowl), Nick Saban and LSU's Tigers defeated the #15 Georgia Tech Yellowjackets W (28–14) before 73,614

2000 Peach Bowl

Georgia Dome (73,614)

Rohan Davey came off the bench to lead the Tigers to a 28-14 come-from-behind win over Georgia Tech in the Peach Bowl. Trailing 14-3 at halftime, Davey started the second half and led the Tigers to a touchdown on the first possession of the half.

In all, Davey, the game's Most Outstanding Offensive Player, threw three second half touchdown passes and he finished the contest with 17 completions in 25 attempts for 174 yards. Davey hit wideout Josh Reed on a 9-yard scoring pass early in the fourth quarter to give the Tigers the lead for good at 17-14.

Reed's remarkable catch in the back of the endzone was followed up with a two-point conversion. Reed finished the game with nine receptions for 96 yards, while fullback Tommy Banks capped his senior season with two touchdown receptions and a career-best seven catches for 71 yards.

LSU's defense was also on its game, forcing Georgia Tech into six turnovers, including four fumbles. The Yellow Jackets entered the contest with only 12 turnovers all season.

Linebacker Bradie James led the defensive unit and was named the Peach Bowl's Most Outstanding Defensive Player, just eight days after his father passed away.

Placekicker John Corbello got the scoring started in the game with a 32-yard field goal. He later added a career-long 49-yard field goal in the fourth quarter.

The victory was the third in three chances for the Tigers in the Peach Bowl, having also won the bowl in 1968 and 1996. The game was played before a Peach Bowl record crowd of 73,614 fans.

Lavalais was the anchor for LSU's defense, one that ranks among the best in the nation in nearly every category. Chad was a finalist for both the Nagurski and Outland Awards and was named to just about every First-Team All-America squad.

He was named the National Defensive Player of the Year by the Sporting News He had put together as fine a senior season for any interior defensive lineman in LSU history by starting all 14 games for the Tigers, posting 61 tackles, 16 of which went for 85 yards in losses. He added 7 sacks for 52-yards in losses, 23 quarterback hurries and 6 pass breakups.

Additionally, Lavalais led a Tiger defense that allowed only one team to score more than 20 points (Arkansas, 24) and only two teams to rush for over 100 yards in a game (Arkansas, 201; Louisiana Tech, 121) in 2003.

It is said that he played with a non-stop motor and had the quickest first step around. He spent most of every game in opposing backfields. His stats reflect his greatness. For example, he had at least 1 tackle for a loss in 9 of LSU's 14 games as a senior. He had 3 tackles for losses in wins over Western Illinois (minus 17-yards) and Auburn (minus 24-yards) and in the loss to Florida (minus 19-yards).

Chad had 2 sacks vs. Florida; 6 tackles, 5 quarterback hurries and an interception in a road win over Alabama. Plus, he recorded season-best of 8 tackles, three for losses, and a sack, in 31-7 win over Auburn. He helped the Tigers rank first in the nation in scoring defense (11.0) and total defense (252.0) and third in rushing defense (67.0) ...

For his long career, he had 32.5 tackles for losses and 11 sacks ... After sitting for awhile, he finally saw first action for LSU in 2000 after originally signing with the Tigers in 1998 and then again in 1999. He finally enrolled and came to school in August of 2000 and proved to be worth the wait. While waiting to gain eligibility, he spent a year as a prison guard at a correctional facility near his hometown of Marksville. LSU benefitted from his desire to go to school for sure.

- 2001 Second Team All-SEC (AP)
- 2000 All-SEC, First Team (SEC Coaches)
- 2000 All-SEC, Second Team (AP)

Royal played as a big, athletic tight end that LSU used to stretch the defense. He caught 18 passes for 224 yards and 1 TD as a senior and closed out his career with 2 catches for 15 yards, including a 7-yard TD reception, in 47-34 victory over Illinois in the Sugar Bowl.

He caught 5 passes for 72 yards vs. Utah State; scored TD vs. Tulane, snapped a streak of 2 games without a reception with a 23-yard catch vs. Ole Miss. Royal ranks third in school history among tight ends in receptions (59) and yards (707) and is second in career TDs (7). He holds LSU tight end record for TDs in a season with 5 in 2000. He was named to the Playboy All-America Pre-Season Team and was drafted in the fifth round of the 2002 NFL Draft by the Washington Redskins

Top LSU Players Steph Peterman GTE 2000-03

Stephen Peterman attended Saint Stanislaus College in Bay St. Louis, Mississippi, where he was an All-state and a two-time All-district selection at tight end. As a senior, he posted 14 receptions for 150 yards and one touchdown. He also lettered in basketball.

He accepted a football scholarship from Louisiana State University. As a freshman, he was converted into a defensive end, appearing in 5 games and making 8 tackles (3 for loss) as a backup.

As a sophomore, he was converted into a left guard, starting 12 games and allowing only one sack. As a junior, he again allowed one sack. As a senior, he was moved to right guard and allowed one sack.

He started 35 out of his 48 career games (25 starts at left guard) and was a part of the 2003 national championship team.

Peterman was selected by the Dallas Cowboys in the third round (83rd overall) of the 2004 NFL Draft. As a rookie, he broke a finger at the start of training camp, before tearing the ACL and MCL of his right knee in the last game of the pre-season (while playing special teams), which placed him on the injured reserve list on September 3.

2001 Football Season Nick Saban Coach # 30

The LSU Fighting Tigers football team represented the LSU Tigers of Louisiana State University during the 2001 Southeastern Conference football season. This was LSU's one hundred-eighth season overall and its sixty-ninth season playing football as a member of the Southeastern Conference (SEC). In 1992, LSU joined the Western Division of the Southeastern Conference.

Led by coach Nick Saban, the LSU head coach in his second of five seasons as head coach of LSU, the Tigers had a comeback season at 10-3. Their SEC record was 5-3 giving them a first place finish in the Western Division of the SEC. They won the SEC Championship game v Tennessee. At the national level, the Tigers were ranked #8 in the coaches' poll and #7 in the AP. LSU was invited to play in the Sugar Bowl, defeating Illinois.

Summary: LSU went 10–3 and won the SEC West and represented the division in the 2001 SEC Championship Game for the first time. After a 31–20 upset of favored Tennessee, LSU played in the 2002 Sugar Bowl in New Orleans, Louisiana, and defeated yet another higher ranked opponent, Illinois, 47–34. The coach matters.

Games of the 2001 Season

In the season and home opener on September 1, 2001 at 7:00 p.m. In Tiger Stadium Baton Rouge, LA in the Battle for the Rag, LSU pounded the Green Wave W 48–17 before 91,782. At home on Sep 8, LSU beat Utah State at Tiger Stadium, Baton Rouge, LA W (31–14) before 87,756. On Sep 29, at #7 Tennessee in Neyland Stadium, Knoxville, the Volunteers beat the Tigers L (18–26) before 108,472. On Oct 6, #2Florida pounded LSU at home in Tiger Stadium Baton Rouge, LAL (15–44) before 92,010. Then, on Oct 13 at Kentucky in Commonwealth Stadium Lexington, KY, LSU beat the Wildcats W (29–25) before 52,471.

On Oct 20, LSU shut out Mississippi State at Davis Wade Stadium in Starkville, MS W (42–0) before 45,514. Ole Miss beat LSU L (24–35) on Oct 27 at home in Tiger Stadium Baton Rouge, LA (Magnolia Bowl) before 91,941. On Nov 3 at Alabama's Bryant–Denny Stadium in Tuscaloosa, LSU's Tigers beat the Crimson Tide W (35–21) before 83,818. Then, on Nov 10, LSU beat Middle

Tennessee at home in Tiger Stadium, Baton Rouge, LA W (30–14) before 88,249. At home on Nov 23. LSU beat Arkansas in a close match at Tiger Stadium Baton Rouge, LA in the Battle for the Golden Boot, W (41–38) before 89,560. On Dec 1 in the Tiger Bowl, #22 LSU beat #25 Auburn at home in Tiger Stadium in Baton Rouge, LA. Before 92,141

SEC Championship & Sugar Bowl

On Dec 8, #21 LSU beat #2 ranked Tennessee at the Georgia Dome Atlanta, GA in the SEC Championship Game W (31–20) before 74,843.

You already know some of this from reading the seasons games above, the Tigers opened the season ranked 14th but dropped out of the rankings thanks to a 4-3 start that included a 26-18 loss in Knoxville, a 29-point home whipping against Florida and an 11-point loss at home to Ole Miss. But LSU caught fire after winning at Alabama and beat Arkansas and Auburn to clinch the SEC West. And they were just in their second season under one in a million coach Nick Saban.

Tennessee spotted LSU a 7-0 lead before scoring 17 straight points in the second quarter on Casey Clausen touchdown passes to Kelly Washington and Troy Fleming. It could have been more, but the Vols could only get a field goal out of LSU failing on fourth-and-1 at its own 23. More importantly, the Vols had knocked LSU quarterback Rohan Davey and tailback LA Brandon Toe field out of the game.

The Vols felt that they were just 30 minutes away from Pasadena. But, their second half instead became a nightmare.

The Vols had no answer for LSU backup Matt Mauck, a 22-year-old redshirt freshman and former minor league baseball player, and the quarterback draw. Earlier in the game, he converted a third-and-4 and scored a touchdown on third-and-goal at 3 with his legs. The Tigers got a field goal just before halftime, and the backup Mauck drove them 28 and 33 yards in the third quarter to set up two long field goals.

After a Stephens fumble near midfield, Mauck's 13-yard touchdown run and two-point conversion pass to Josh Reed gave the Tigers a 24-17 lead with 14:20 to go in the fourth quarter.

The Vols had first-and-goal at the 4 on the ensuing drive and threw three straight incomplete passes and settled for a short field goal, but after an LSU three-and-out Donte Stallworth fumbled on a completion inside the LSU 35 on the first play of Tennessee's next series.

Hauck hit Michael Clayton to convert a third down, Tennessee was flagged for pass interference and LSU completed the six-minute drive with Domanick Davis scoring on fourth-and-goal from the 1 with 2:26 left.

The game wrap-up saw the Tigers needing just 285 yards to win. Mauck completed just five passes for 67 yards. Davis collected had 78 yards in Toefield's absence.

Sugar Bowl

On January 1, 2002 at 7:30 p.m., #12 LSU beat #7 Illinois at the Louisiana Superdome in New Orleans, LA in the Sugar Bowl W (47–34) before 77,684.

2002 – How LSU and Illinois Met in the Sugar Bowl

This Sugar Bowl was one for the books – the record books.

In a game being played more for poll position and the old-time bowl goal of pure fun than anything else, LSU was rollicking in the first 30 minutes, by halftime sending press box statisticians flipping furiously through the records.

By then the one faint doubt of the outcome was whether Kurt Kittner would once again manage to bring his team a come-from-behind victory, which he had done five times during the regular-season.

In that opening half the Illini simply could not slow down the Tigers. After a couple of self-inflicted miscues (both by tight ends – a flag on Robert Royal that killed one drive and a drop by Joe Domingeaux that could have gone the distance), LSU scored touchdowns on five of its next six possessions. That span included the biggest scoring spurt in Sugar Bowl history, with 27 Tiger points in the second quarter.

It came down to this: Tiger receivers were running helter-skelter across the Superdome rug almost unimpeded, through an Illini secondary that featured three All-Big Ten athletes.

“There came a point in the second quarter when Coach had to tell me to settle down,” Davey said. “I was trying to hit a home run on every play. It was just pitch-and-catch.”

After Domanick Davis (pictured at left), on his way to an unprecedented four Sugar Bowl touchdowns, scrambled in from the 2 in the opening period; he added two more in the second quarter – reaching the end zone on a quick-hitter from 25 yards out and then scoring from the 16. Both times Illinois was trying to shoot the gaps with its cornerbacks and both times Davis ran into the vacant spaces untouched.

In the air, even when Davey was missing his mark, Illinois was unable to cover the Tiger wideouts, which showed in the first-half stat sheets: 33 Davey passes and 19 completions, covering 246 yards. As it turned out, Davey's two touchdowns came when LSU was at point-blank range, and both came on third down with Illinois playing zone defense. First, from the 5-yard line after Josh Reed found his way to the back of the end zone where Davey speared him. Then, from the 7, Royal did the same thing for the final points of the half.

The LSU defense was no less spectacular. Illinois simply couldn't hold out the Tiger rush, coming at Kittner with hands high to disrupt his low passing trajectory. It was a successful strategy, making a basket case of Kittner, who was trying to throw over a picket fence of outstretched limbs and digits. He had more first-half passes batted down at the line of scrimmage than completed ones. At one point he was 1-for-13 for a grand total of one yard.

One play told the story of Illinois' frustration: Illini go-to receiver Brandon Lloyd's only catch of the first half resulted in an LSU touchdown, when corner Randall Gay stripped him after a four-yard gain, picked up the fumble and returned it 19 yards to the Illini 5. Moments later the score was jacked to 27-0 when Davey hit the embarrassingly open Reed.

Kittner finished the first half 5-of-17 passing for 80 yards and a touchdown. But 75 of those yards came on a three-play scoring drive, leaving Illinois' best quarterback in history 2-for-14 for five yards the rest of the half.

“The best way I can describe their defense is ferocious,” said Lloyd, who eventually finished with two touchdown receptions and passed for another score. “They kept coming 100 miles per hour and never relented.” At intermission the Tigers had a commanding edge in total offense, 344-134, and led 34-7.

The Sugar Bowl was over, but Illinois showed its mettle by making it respectable in the second half. Kittner completed 7-of-10 passes for 142 yards and three touchdowns in the third quarter, and he ended the night 14-of-35 for 262 yards for four touchdowns and one interception.

“We found some offense in the second half, but it was too little, too late by then,” Lloyd said. LSU linebacker Trev Faulk said, “We did everything we could to stop them in the first half. It would only be a matter of time before Kittner got going in the game.”

When the smoke cleared, no fewer than a dozen records were set in the highest-scoring Sugar Bowl in history, including 595 yards of total offense, 444 passing yards by Davey, and 239 receiving yards by Reed on yet another record 14 reception.

“I was in a zone,” Davey gushed later. “There was no pressure on me. I was going to make the most of my opportunity. I was going to go out there and have fun.”

Recap excerpted from the book “Sugar Bowl Classic: A History” by Marty Mulé, who covered the game and the organization for decades for the New Orleans Times-Picayune.

Top LSU Players Matt Mauck QB 2000-2003

No LSU quarterback has ever had a bigger impact in the first game of their career than Matt Mauck.

The game I'm obviously referring to is the 2001 SEC Championship game against Tennessee, when Rohan Davey was injured and Mauck replaced him.

Mauck stepped in against the No. 2 team in the nation and had 43 rushing yards, with two of those coming as touchdowns. The Tigers would ultimately win the game, and Mauck would go on to have a very successful career.

His best season, of course, came in 2003, when he posted the third-best total yards in a season in LSU history with 2,922 total yards. Mauck would also go on to lead the Tigers to their second national championship.

Top LSU Players Ben Wilkerson C 2001-2004

Benjamin Lorenza Wilkerson was born November 22, 1982. He is a former American college and professional football player who was a center in the National Football League for four seasons after college during the early 2000s. He played his college football for Louisiana State University (LSU), earned All-American honors, and was recognized as the top college football center. He signed with the NFL's Cincinnati Bengals as an undrafted free agent, and he then played for the NFL's Atlanta Falcons and the Florida Tuskers of the United Football League (UFL).

Wilkerson helped pave the way for one of the best backfields in the nation in the mid-2000s. He was named an All-American in the 2004 season and was voted as a Co-Dave Remington Trophy winner that season as well.

Of course, some think Kevin Mawae of LSU was a better center but that is not for us to determine. Both are LSU greats. Wilkerson went on to have an incredible NFL career.

Top LSU Players Michael Clayton WR 2001-2003

Michael Clayton played in 40 games with 31 starts. He caught 182 passes for 2,582 yards and 21 TDs for the Tigers. For years, he held the LSU record for career TD receptions with 21. He finished second in school history in receptions with 182, just one shy of tying Wendell Davis' record of 183

Clayton ranked fourth in career receiving yards with 2,582 and seventh in career 100-yard games. He is the only player in LSU history to have at least 700 yards receiving in three straight seasons. He has the distinction of having caught at least one pass in all 40 games of his career.

Spears was a Consensus First-Team All-America selection in 2004. He earned First-Team All-America honors from the Walter Camp Foundation, the American Football Coaches Association, the Associated Press and Collegefootballnews.com .

Marcus has had one of the most domination seasons for a defensive lineman in the history of the LSU football program. During this time, he was named SEC Defensive Lineman of the Week, and ranked second in the SEC with 9 sacks to go with 17 tackles for losses.

His 9 sacks rank as the 4th-highest total in school history. The 17 tackles for losses also ranks as the 4th-highest single season total in LSU history. He had a total of 49 tackles, added 21 QB hurries for a Tiger defense that ranked #3 in the nation in total defense (256.9 yards per game).

Over final 6 games of his senior season, Spears recorded 14 tackles for losses and 8 sacks. That was not enough. He capped the regular season with 9 tackles and 2 sacks totaling 27-yards in losses against Arkansas. He had 6 tackles for losses and 2 sacks for minus-22 yards in win over Troy. Against Alabama, he had 2 sacks, also against Ole Miss and Arkansas,

He showed his great athletic ability with a 35-yard interception return for a TD against Mississippi State and he batted down 6 passes at the line of scrimmage, forced 2 fumbles and recovered another ...

It is no wonder that Marcus Spears was named LSU's most valuable player. He showed a dedication to his team by also playing on LSU's protection units for PATs and field goals. He tied for 5th in LSU history with 19 career sacks. He ranks 7th in school history in tackles for losses in a career with 34.5. For his great play, he was invited to play in the 2005 Senior Bowl in Mobile, Ala., on Jan. 29.

2002 Football Season Nick Saban Coach # 30

SBC Cotton Bowl coverage

DALLAS (AP) -- Roy Williams announced he was coming back for his senior season at Texas several weeks before the SBC Cotton Bowl because he didn't want that question to distract him from the game.

Lee Jackson returns a fumble 46 yards for a TD.

NFL teams might hope he rethinks his decision. Williams almost single-handedly rallied Texas from a 10-point deficit Wednesday, sending the No. 9 Longhorns to a 35-20 victory over LSU. He turned a short slant into a 51-yard touchdown, went 75 yards after a leaping grab to set up another score and snaked 39 yards for a TD on an end around.

"He might be the best football player I've seen all year," Tigers coach Nick Saban said.

After receiving a huge trophy as offensive MVP, Williams said he didn't deserve it -- and didn't object when teammate Rod Babers slid it away. Williams then criticized himself for a false start and said he could do a better job of running routes. "I don't feel like I'm the best receiver in the country,"

Williams said. "I don't think I've done what I'm capable of. I still have things to prove, things to learn, before I go to the next level."

LSU (8-5) would probably disagree. The Tigers came in with the second-best pass defense in the country, allowing 143 yards per game -- and Williams alone had 142 on four catches.

A strong start by the Tigers had put the Longhorns (11-2) down 17-7 three minutes into the second quarter.

The Texas offense had gone nowhere on two possessions despite having all its top skill players healthy for the first time since the second game of the season. The Longhorns' first score came on a 46-yard fumble return by linebacker Lee Jackson, the longest in Cotton Bowl history.

Then Texas unveiled its most effective plan: getting the ball to Williams. On first down from the 49, he shook cornerback Corey Webster at the line, caught a bullet pass from Chris Simms in stride and ran away to an easy score.

The next time Simms threw to Williams, he made a nice catch in traffic and raced toward the end zone, but was shoved out of bounds at the 5-yard line. Cedric Benson did the rest, putting Texas ahead 21-17.

After a sluggish start to the second half, Williams got Texas going with an 18-yard catch, then Benson ran for 17 yards. On the next play, Simms faked a handoff to Benson and slipped the ball to Williams coming from the left side. He weaved between defenders and avoided being hit until the 5; it couldn't stop him from lunging across the goal line.

Ivan Williams caught an 8-yard touchdown pass from Simms early in the fourth quarter, giving Texas a spurt of 28 unanswered points. It would have been more if not for two missed field goals.

Simms finished 15-for-28 for 269 yards and, most important, had one turnover: an interception on his final pass. This was a nice farewell for Simms, who leaves 26-6 as a starter. He has the second-most wins in school history and leave with the best completion percentage, highest efficiency rating and probably most criticism received.

His worst games came in Dallas, especially at this stadium. Texas ended a five-game losing streak in the area, including four straight losses at the Cotton Bowl, all of which he played in and three of which he started. The game was sponsored by SBC.

"I get to walk in here with a smile on my face for once," Simms said as he entered the interview room. "It's about time, too."

The Longhorns have consecutive 11-win seasons for the first time and most likely will have consecutive Top 10 season finishes for the first time since 1977-78. It also was the 40th win for the Simms-led 1999 recruiting class that came in hailed as the nation's best.

For LSU, this was the second straight time it wasted a 17-7 lead. Last time it cost them a chance to reach the SEC championship game. This time it ended a streak of five straight bowl wins.

Quarterback Marcus Randall started strong, producing 10 first-quarter points against a defense that had allowed a national-best 16 in the quarter all season. His only mistake was the fumble that turned into Texas' first score.

Randall opened the second quarter with a 76-yard run that was the team's longest play of the season -- one more than his famous desperation pass that beat Kentucky. Domanick Davis capped that drive with a 3-yard TD run. But the Tigers didn't score again until the fourth quarter. Randall struggled, fumbling again and throwing an interception, both deep in Texas territory, and LSU had a failed field goal attempt.

"We left a lot out there," Saban said.

Top LSU Players Corey Webster, CB, 2001-02.

Corey Webster attended St. James High School in Vacherie, Louisiana where he was a fine two sport star in both football and basketball. He was all state at quarterback while wearing jersey #1 for his HS Wildcats football team. He was also an all-state guard while wearing jersey #11 for the basketball team. He was well recruited as a wide receiver in football when he graduated high school but was later asked to play cornerback at LSU by then coach Nick Saban.

He played as a true freshman catching 7 passes for 74 yards. He then switched positions to Cornerback for the 2002 season. He would finish his college career with 16 interceptions (2nd in school history), to be named as a 1st Team All-American twice, and he was a 1st Team All-SEC selection 3 times. As a Junior in 2003, he finished 2nd in the SEC with 25 pass breakups and had 17 as a Sophomore in 2002. He was a fine football player.

As a pro, Webster played for the New York Giants. He was drafted by the Giants in the second round of the 2005 NFL Draft and later won two Super Bowls with the team, both over the New England Patriots.

Top LSU Players Andy Whitworth, OT, 2002-05.

Offensive tackle has never been what we would call a dominant position in LSU's rich football history, But Whitworth is among the best at the position for sure.

Whitworth was a staple on the LSU offensive line, putting in four solid years as a starter from 2002-05. He started a total of 52 career games for the Tigers, which ranks second in Division 1 history for an offensive lineman. He was named an All-SEC member in both his junior and senior seasons.

Andrew Whitworth redshirted in 2001 and did not play that season. His time on the field began in 2002 when he started every game, and was recognized as a first-team Freshman All-American by The Sporting News and Football Writers Association. As a sophomore in 2003, he started all 14 games. The team went 13–1 en route to a BCS national title with a Sugar Bowl defeat of Oklahoma.

Andrew led the team with 1,008 snaps and credited with 105 key blocks, including 82 knockdowns. In 2004, Whitworth led the team again—this time with 799 snaps from scrimmage as the Tigers went 9–3 with a Citrus Bowl berth against Iowa.

His sharp play was key for an offense that scored 39 TDs and averaged 395.6 yards per game. He was credited with a ton of key plays including 96 key blocks, including 66 knockdowns, and he played every offensive snap during a four-game stretch against Georgia, Florida, Troy and Vanderbilt.

He helped LSU to an 11–2 record. He played LT in 2005. That season was capped by a 40-3 Peach Bowl win over Miami (Fla.). He played every offensive snap in nine of the 13 contests, for an offense that averaged 374.1 yards per game. His line did not allow a sack all season. Whitworth finished his career with 22 straight games of no sacks allowed. He was credited with 104 key blocks/knockdowns.

He also played in the East–West Shrine Game on January 21, 2006 in San Antonio, Texas. His 52 career starts from 2002–2005 rank second in NCAA Division I history behind Derrick Strait of Oklahoma (53 starts, 2000–2003). He earned All-Southeastern Conference first-team honors in each of his last two seasons, including a consensus nod as a senior. He was a tough lineman to replace.

Top LSU Players Joseph Addai RB 2002-2005

Joseph Addai Played in 51 games with 19 starts in his career with the Tigers. When he graduated, he was ranked No. 5 in school history in rushing with 2,577 yards to his credit. He was also ranked No. 5 in school history in receptions for a running back with 66 catches during his career.

Joseph had a whopping 6 100-yard rushing games for the Tigers, which ties for the eighth highest total in school history. His 490 rushing attempts ranks as No. 8 in school history. In all, he scored a total of 23 touchdowns during his career, 18 rushing and 5 receiving. He graduated in December of 2005 with a degree in general studies.

Niswanger's LSU CAREER

Rudy Niswanger is one of the most decorated student-athletes in LSU history. He grabbed all of the major academic awards during 2005-06, claiming the Draddy Trophy, which is commonly referred to as the "Academic Heisman" as well as being named the recipient of the McWhorter Award as the SEC's Scholar-Athlete of the Year

He is a two-time First-Team Academic All-America and a two-year starter on the offensive line for the Tigers. He is only the second two-time First-Team Academic All-America selection in school history joining Rodney Reed (2002, 2003).

He is a smart man. He graduated from LSU with a perfect 4.0 grade point average and has been accepted to LSU Medical School in Shreveport after scoring in the top 8 percent nationally on the medical entrance exam. On the field, Rudy played in 47 games during his career, starting 29 times. He played and started at least one game at all five positions on the offensive line during his career.

Of course when he was able to line up an NFL football career, he had to put off medical school. Kansas City's cerebral young center almost never forgets anything he does, sees or hears. And one day he may be standing over your unconscious body holding a sharp knife.

An honors' graduate from LSU with a degree in kinesiology, Niswanger was accepted into medical school before he was ignored in the 2006 draft. He seriously thought about becoming an orthopedic surgeon.

After the disappointment of the '06 draft, a medical career seemed the only sensible path for the 6-foot-5, 300-pound native of Monroe, La. The NFL seemed to be telling him the odds against a future in football were long, very long.

Whether he would thrive in the academically stimulating environment of medical science seemed beyond question. Not only had he been a first-team academic All-American, he'd also won the prestigious Draddy Trophy, which the National Football Foundation awards each year to the top scholar among football players.

"I interned for an orthopedic surgeon for three summers while I was in college," Niswanger said. "I had a lot of fun doing that, and saw a lot of interesting surgeries. But football is what I really want to do. It's where my passion is."

So he kept his teeth in the ankle of his dream. In Kansas City as an undrafted free agent, Niswanger fought and clawed and managed to hold onto one of the last spots on the roster. As a rookie, he was third-team center.

Last year he moved up to second-team. Now, with the Chiefs revamping their offensive line almost entirely, the would-be doctor is, finally, first-team.

The medical career that so many young people strive all their lives toward has become "a fallback plan."

2003 Football Season Nick Saban Coach # 30

The LSU Fighting Tigers football team represented the LSU Tigers of Louisiana State University during the 2003 Southeastern Conference football season. This was LSU's one hundred-tenth season overall and its seventy-first season playing football as a member of the Southeastern Conference (SEC). In 1992, LSU joined the Western Division of the Southeastern Conference.

Led by coach Nick Saban, the LSU head coach in his fourth of five seasons as head coach of LSU, the Tigers had a fine season at 11-1. They were national champions. Their SEC record was 7-1 giving them a first place finish in the Western Division of the SEC. They beat Georgia in the SEC Championship. At the national level, the Tigers were #1 in the coaches' poll and #2 in the AP. LSU was invited to play in the Sugar Bowl, defeating Oklahoma for the BCS National Championship..

As noted, The Tigers compiled an 11–1 regular season record and # 1 in the SEC Western Division. They then defeated the #7 Georgia Bulldogs in the SEC Championship Game, Afterward, LSU was invited to play the Oklahoma Sooners in the Sugar Bowl for the Bowl Championship Series (BCS) national title. LSU won the BCS National Championship Game, the first national football championship for LSU since 1958.

The 2003 college football regular season ended with three one-loss teams in BCS contention: the LSU Tigers, Oklahoma Sooners, and USC Trojans. USC ended the regular season ranked #1 and LSU #2 in both the AP Poll and the Coaches' Poll. Media controversy ensued when the BCS computer-based selection system chose LSU and Oklahoma as the participants in the BCS title game, largely based on an assessment of the relative difficulty of the three teams' 2003 schedules.

During the bowl games, LSU beat #3 Oklahoma 21–14 in the Sugar Bowl (designated as the BCS National Championship Game for the 2003–04 season), while USC defeated the No. 4 Michigan Wolverines 28–14 in the Rose Bowl. LSU was ranked No. 1 in the final Coaches' Poll, and USC remained No. 1 in the final AP Poll.

It was a great year for LSU as they grabbed these prestigious honors

- BCS national champion
- SEC champion
- SEC Western Division co-champion
- Sugar Bowl champion

How LSU and Oklahoma Met in the 2004 Sugar Bowl

From the start, with Tiger freshman Justin Vincent juking linebacker Gayron Allen and shooting 64 yards in the open field on the game's first play to set the tone, LSU seemed to be in command.

But the Tigers, a six-point underdog by the oddsmakers, and an even bigger long-shot by the nation's sports pundits, never completely put the game away in this landmark Sugar Bowl – the last to be played with a No. 1 title squarely on the line. A rotating and separate-from-the-bowls BCS national championship game would soon make that determination.

Despite the fast start, LSU had to contend with Oklahoma's offense which led the nation by averaging an eye-popping 45.2 points. And the Sooners were also the nation's third-best overall defensive team, giving up an average of 255.7 yards a game.

Not only did the Sooners have seven first-team All-Americans, but they practically swept the major individual awards that go to the sport's crème de la crème, including the Heisman Trophy, which was collected by quarterback Jason White.

Next to the Sooners, the Tigers just had two All-Americans, defensive tackle Chad Lavalais and cornerback Corey Webster.

Conversely, despite its relative anonymity, LSU was a complete team, scoring an average of 35 points behind Matt Mauck, a 24-year-old former minor-league catcher who had the SEC's highest quarterback rating, along with a dangerous combination of running backs and receivers and a big, fast offensive line that combined for 156 starts.

It was on defense, though, where LSU separated itself from the rest of college football. The Tigers led the nation in rushing defense, yielding a miniscule 68.2 yards, and were atop the statistical list in scoring defense, allowing a paltry 10.5 points a game.

It was obvious that in the Sugar Bowl something would have to give – but not the self-discipline of the Tigers, very much aware LSU hadn't won a national title in 45 years.

Between Vincent's run and the last meaningful play, with Tiger linebacker Lionel Turner flattening OU quarterback White on a delayed blitz, this may have been the biggest seven-point rout in football history. Put this in focus: LSU held Oklahoma to just 152 total yards and 1.8 yards per rush; and only two touchdowns.

And the Tigers spent the night, as they did all season, responding positively to adversity.

Vincent's long run to open the game was stopped short of the goal line when Sooner defensive back Derrick Strait ran him down at the Oklahoma 16. Four plays later, playing a first-and-goal at the 1, Mauck fumbled the snap and the Sooners recovered.

In just two plays, though, Webster intercepted White's first pass at midfield and returned it to the 32. LSU was on the boards in short order as speedster Skyler Green turned around the right end and tip-toed along the sidelines 24 yards to the end zone.

In the second quarter, Oklahoma showed its first signs of life when it blocked a Tiger punt two yards from the LSU goal. It took OU four plays (after a penalty) to punch it in and tie the score. The Sooners had been outgained 204-50 at that point, yet the teams were even on the scoreboard.

LSU put together a big-time response, driving 80 yards before Vincent ran the final 18 on the same play with which he opened the game, this time finding the end zone. The Tigers again had the lead with 4:21 remaining until the half – a half in which Oklahoma managed a total of 44 yards.

“That was the turning point of the game,” LSU Coach Nick Saban said of the go-ahead drive. “They blocked a punt and scored (an easy touchdown), and our offense came right back.”

What proved to be the final nail in Oklahoma’s coffin came with 47 seconds gone in the third quarter when White unleashed his first pass of the second half – and hit Tiger defensive end Marcus Spears in the flat. “I dropped back and it was like a gift,” Spears, a former tight end, said. “When I saw it coming, I said, ‘Man, put your hands up and try to get the thing to the end zone.’ ”

Twenty yards later, that’s exactly where Spears found himself. After a Tiger field goal, which would have given LSU a 24-7 lead, was wiped away by a penalty Oklahoma got new life, LSU made its only major mistake of the game, a third-down interception of Mauck that Brodney Pool returned 49 yards to the Tiger 31. Somehow Oklahoma was seriously back in the fray. Kejuan Jones went in from the 1 with 11:01 -plenty of time – to play.

The Sooners had Tiger fans gripping their seats from that point to the end, as White, taking over at the 5:45 mark, moved Oklahoma from its 39 to the LSU 12 in eight plays. From there, however, the Tigers threw up their prickly defense, giving OU no openings in the passing lanes. Only on fourth down did the Sooners come close.

The tying touchdown pass was tipped by safety Jack Hunt and trickled off the fingers of Mark Clayton in the end zone. “I just tried to give somebody a chance to catch it,” White said. “He almost caught it.” But didn’t.

LSU, despite the controversy, finished with its first national championship in four decades, even if Southern Cal, playing in the Rose Bowl, also claimed a piece of it.

Mauck had no doubt who was No. 1. “All I know is the powers that be selected us to be in this game; (and) we just received the (BCS championship) trophy.”

Recap excerpted from the book “Sugar Bowl Classic: A History” by Marty Mulé, who covered the game and the organization for decades for the New Orleans Times-Picayune.

Top LSU Players Skyler Green TE 2003-2005

Skyler Green capped a record-setting career with the Tigers by ranking No. 1 in school history for punts returned for touchdowns with 4 and he was No. 2 in school history in punt return yards 1,064.

The 1,064 yards was just 63 yards shy of breaking the record of 1,126 yards held by Domanick Davis. For his career stats, he scored touchdowns three different ways – receiving (9), punt returns (4) and rushing (1). He finished with 3,243 all-purpose yards for his career. This is just outside the top 10 in LSU history

Green led the nation in punt returns average in 2003 with an 18.5 average. On the lighter side, he is the cousin of former LSU standouts Jarvis Green, who is starter on the defensive line for the New England Patriots, and Howard Green, who is a member of the Miami Dolphins.

Top LSU Players Laron Landry S 2003-2006

Landry joined the Louisiana State University Tigers football team in 2003. He played his football for both coaches Les Miles and Nick Saban. At LSU, he majored in communication studies from 2003 to 2006.

Laron is credited with 48 straight starts for the Tigers. He finished his career with 315 tackles and 12 interceptions. He has the third-highest total in school history, while his 315 tackles come in at a strong seventh place in in LSU history.

This fine player made an instant impact at LSU as he started 10 games for the Tigers in route to a BCS National Championship title in 2003.

Landry earned freshmen All-SEC honors, Second-Team All-SEC honors and freshmen All-American honors with 80 tackles and two interceptions.

In his senior year, Landry earned All-American and All-SEC honors and was a semifinalist for the Thorpe Award.

Landry was drafted by the Washington Redskins with the sixth overall pick in the 2007 NFL Draft.

2004 Football Season Nick Saban Coach # 30

The LSU Fighting Tigers football team represented the LSU Tigers of Louisiana State University during the 2004 Southeastern Conference football season. The Citrus Bowl January 1, 2005

In the Citrus Bowl on January 1, 2005 at 12:00 p.m., #11 Iowa beat #12 LSU in Nick Saban's last LSU game in Orlando, FL (aka Capital One Bowl) L (25–30) before 70,229

Nick Saban has actually lost at least twice on the very last play of a game. Before Malzahn and “Kick Bama Kick,” there was this Iowa game and coach Kirk Ferentz and “All Up, X Post.” It was a 56-yard touchdown pass from quarterback Drew Tate to wide receiver Warren Holloway as time expired to beat LSU in the Capital One / Citrus Bowl in 2005. Saban was becoming well known at the time as a defensive guru and secondary genius - in his last game as LSU's coach, 30-25, in the Capital One Bowl on Jan. 1, 2005, in Orlando, Fla., it did not play out as a nice parting gift for the great coach.

Some say it was not the wildest play in college football history. At least Malzahn had an inkling it could happen. He did replace Ryan Smith with the faster Davis as the deep man by the goal posts before the biggest missed field goal in Alabama history.

Ferentz was playing for a field goal as his team trailed 25-24 following a 3-yard touchdown pass by LSU freshman quarterback Jamarcus Russell to Skyler Green with 46 seconds to play. The Iowa sideline coaches were trying to call a timeout just before the play when they realized the clock was running. Iowa fans at Florida Citrus Bowl Stadium frantically yelled for a timeout to be called as the game clock went to nine seconds.

Iowa was not yet in field goal range and had two timeouts to use. This was clock management by Miles.

Some of Iowa's players looked as confused as their sideline. LSU defenders looked around and to the Iowa sideline, expecting a timeout to be called. This worked in the Hawkeyes' favor as LSU's defense was not ready when the ball was snapped — much like many times this season. In the end, no amount of Iowa planning could replace dumb luck. LSU cornerback Ronnie Prude let Holloway run deep right by him. Safety Travis Daniels left his man to try to get to Holloway, but it was too late. TOUCHDOWN.

Saban tried to ask Prude what happened after the play.

“You’re not my coach anymore,” Prude said.

And one of the best periods and one of the wildest months in LSU football history was over.

On Christmas Day just a week before, Saban was introduced as the Miami Dolphins new head coach, but he decided to stay and coach the bowl game. There were rumblings of this as early as Dec. 13 when Joe Schad, then covering the Dolphins for the Palm Beach Post, said Saban might be coming to Miami. Two members of LSU’s athletic department laughed and said, “He’s not going to Miami.”

The only real pre-bowl event during the week leading up to the Capital One Bowl was the LSU coaching search. Jack Del Rio, then the Jacksonville Jaguars head coach, was coming to Orlando for an interview with LSU athletic director Skip Bertman. On the way to the interview, though, he took a cell phone call in his car. It was his agent. According to his contract, such an interview could hurt him.

It was cancelled. Bertman interviewed a hot Louisville coach named Bobby Petrino, but he did not like him.

Many LSU fans wanted Bertman to look no further than its Capital One Bowl opponent for a new coach as Ferentz was a hot commodity and coached with Saban in the NFL at Cleveland. He was not interested.

Bertman interviewed a not overly hot Oklahoma State coach named Les Miles, but he liked him a lot.

During the Iowa-LSU game, news broke that LSU’s new coach was indeed Miles, who had just lost 33-7 to Ohio State in the Alamo Bowl but had dramatically turned around an Oklahoma State program that had been mostly losing for a decade before his arrival in 2001. He also had a pair of upsets of Oklahoma and was considered for the Alabama job before the 2003 season when Mike Price and then Mike Shula got the job.

Meanwhile, back at the game, No. 11 Iowa (9-2) took a 24-12 lead with 12:48 to play over No. 12 LSU (9-2), which was one season removed from its first national championship since 1958.

Everyone says then and now that LSU lost because it was distracted over the Saban exit. The distraction part was true. But LSU lost because Saban and offensive coordinator Jimbo Fisher decided to start Marcus Randall and play Matt Flynn before finally inserting their best quarterback — Russell in the fourth quarter.

In a glimpse of things to come, Russell completed 12 of 15 passes for 128 yards and two touchdowns to bring the Tigers back for the 25-24 lead. Had he played the whole game; LSU likely would have won easily. Russell went on to become the Southeastern Conference's No. 1 passer in efficiency and finished third nationally in 2006. The LSU staff that lost that day was one of the best in school history, even excluding Saban. Fisher stayed on with Miles as offensive coordinator for two seasons before becoming the coach in waiting at Florida State.

Assistants Derek Dooley and Will Muschamp went on to become SEC head coaches, though Dooley was fired at Tennessee after the '12 season and Muschamp will need to improve dramatically next season to avoid the same fate. Assistant Kirby Smart is one of the nation's top assistants at Alabama.

Saban was supposed to be the next Don Shula at Miami, but he was more like the Shula at Alabama, and he begged out after two seasons of 15-17 to replace Shula at Alabama. This made him become public enemy No. 1 among LSU's fan base, which looking back is now probably glad Iowa beat LSU and Saban on "All Up, X Post." Of course LSU fans don't ever want to lose.

Top LSU Players Glenn Dorsey DT 2004-2007

Former LSU great Glenn Dorsey named to 2020 College Football Hall of Fame class By Bryan Manning March 11, 2020 8:46 pm

LSU has always been known as a defensive-minded football program and Glenn Dorsey is one of the best to ever come through the program.

Dorsey was arguably the most dominant defensive tackle throughout all of college football in the mid-2000s. He was an All-American selection in both his junior and senior seasons and went on to win the Nagurski, Lott, Outland and Lombardi trophies in his senior season. He is the only player in LSU history to win all four of those awards.

Perhaps even more impressive is the fact that Dorsey finished in the top-10 in the Heisman Trophy voting during his senior season, which is nearly unheard of for a defensive tackle.

Glenn Dorsey is clearly one of the most decorated players in the history of LSU football.

On Wednesday, he joined the college football Hall of Fame. He received the ultimate honor for a college football player as he was named to the 2020 College Football Hall of Fame class.

Dorsey's accomplishments in Baton Rouge are endless. A four-star recruit from Gonzales, Louisiana, Dorsey entered the starting lineup as a true freshman in 2004 when Nick Saban was the head coach. Dorsey played in all 12 games, making three starts.

As a sophomore in 2005, Dorsey played in every game, making one start but was a part of a stellar rotation at defensive tackle that included Kyle Williams and Claude Wroten.

It was the 2006 season when Dorsey arrived on the national scene. He started all 13 games, made 64 tackles, including 8.5 for loss and three sacks. Dorsey was named a first-team All-SEC selection as well as a first-team All-American.

As a senior in 2007, Dorsey played in all 14 games. Once again, he was selected to the All-SEC first team and was named a first-team All-American. The awards didn't end there, though. Dorsey won the SEC Defensive Player of the Year, Lombardi Award, Lott Trophy, Outland Trophy and the Bronko Nagurski Trophy.

In addition to his outstanding individual season, the Tigers also won the 2007 national championship.

Dorsey became the No. 5 pick in the 2008 NFL Draft by the Kansas City Chiefs, for which he played five seasons. Dorsey also played three seasons in San Francisco before retiring at the end of the 2015 season.

Dorsey was overcome with emotion when discussing this honor, per Amanda Lindsley of WAFB.

"This means the world to me," he said. "I can't thank LSU and my hometown of Gonzales enough for all of their support. We did this together. LSU gave me a chance that ended up changing my life. I can't express how thankful and thrilled I am about this honor. There are so many people that helped me along the way that made this possible. I'm truly humbled and excited and will forever be grateful to LSU and the opportunities that playing in Tiger Stadium gave me.”

Dorsey is the 10th former Tiger to be inducted into the College Football Hall of Fame.

Top LSU Players Dwayne Bowe WR 2005-2007

If there was one guy who could rival Josh Reed as the top wide receiver in LSU football history, that would be none other than the man known as "D-Bowe."

Dwayne Bowe had an outstanding collegiate career, hauling in a total of 154 catches for 2,403 yards and 26 touchdown receptions, an LSU record. He currently ranks fourth in school history in receptions and eighth all time in SEC history in career touchdowns. Bowe was an All-American during his senior season and went on to be a first round draft selection for Kansas City Chiefs in 2007.

It could be argued that of all the former LSU stars playing in the NFL today, Bowe has had the best NFL career of all of them.

Top LSU Players Jacob Hester RB 2004-2007

Jacob Hester was one of the most productive running backs to ever play for LSU. He was the consummate team player who wore a variety of hats during his LSU career. He brought a great attitude and work ethic to the field everyday . He as Named a permanent team captain for the Tigers for the 2007 season. They say he was a throwback player who got the most out of his ability and so he played in 52 games during his career, starting 29 times.

He started 27 straight games at running back during his final two years with the Tigers. Jacob Hester capped his career with 1,780 yards rushing and 20 rushing touchdowns. He added 60 receptions for 454 yards and seven scores. His 60 receptions rank as the seventh most by a running back in school history.

Jacob had best season as a senior, rushing for 1,103 yards and 12 scores. The 1,103 rushing yards ranks as the ninth-highest total in school history. He also plaid on special teams and added 38 special teams tackles during his four years with the Tigers. He participated in the Senior Bowl following the 2007 season.

LSU Top Players Tyson Jackson DE 2005-2009

- No. 3 overall pick 2009 NFL Draft by Kansas City Chiefs
- 2008 Second-Team All-SEC (AP)
- 2006 Second-Team All-SEC (SEC Coaches)
- 2006 SEC Defensive Lineman of the Week (vs. Alabama)
- 2005 Freshman All-SEC (SEC Coaches, Sporting News)

Tyson Jackson is the highest LSU defender to ever be picked in NFL Draft, going to Kansas City Chiefs with the #3 overall pick in the 2009 draft. It marked the third straight year in which the Chiefs have picked an LSU player in the first round . It also continued a trend that has seen at least one LSU player picked in first round for six years, including three straight years with a defender taken among top six picks (Glenn Dorsey No. 5 to Chiefs in 2008; LaRon Landry No. 6 to Redskins in 2007).

Jackson played in 53 games in his LSU career, starting 39 times. He showed his durability by capping his career by starting a whopping 29 straight games. He finished with 122 career tackles, including 27 tackles for losses (109 yards) and 18.5 sacks totaling 92 yards in losses. Add to this, 18 pass breakups and 33 quarterback hurries and his importance to LSU increased astronomically.

He was named second team All-SEC in both 2006 and 2008 ... Rather than be drafted, Jackson opted to return to LSU for his senior season. As a result, saw his draft status going from a projected second round pick in 2008 to being the No. 3 overall selection in 2009. He graduated in December of 2008 with a degree in general studies.

Les Miles with the Louisiana State (LSU) Team

About Les Miles: The Tigers were better with Les Miles than with Nick Saban. Yes, I am talking about Les Miles with the Louisiana State (LSU) Team. No kidding here, folks. Les was never the Alabama Head coach. The Tigers had multiple 10-win seasons under a guy referred to as the Mad Hatter. While at LSU, Miles led the Tigers to the 2007 BCS National Championship, the program's third in school history.

From 2005-2016, Miles had a record of 114-34 in 148 career games coached as the LSU head man. He finished with a .770 winning percentage, and coached the Tigers to two SEC Championship game berths, going 2-0 in those match-ups.

Miles earned the AP Coach of the Year, SEC Coach of the Year and the Home Depot Coach of the Year awards in 2011.

Though he is no longer with the program, Miles will be remembered by Tigers fans for his gutsy play calls in crucial situations.

A bit more on Les

Known as a master motivator with years of continued success in Baton Rouge, Miles put his 'Miles Method' in place shortly after arriving at LSU in 2005 and since then, he won two SEC titles and a BCS National Championship at one of college football's elite programs.

Really nicknamed the Mad Hatter for his bright-white, perfectly curved caps on gamedays, Miles' reputation as a gutsy play-caller in late-game situations demands respect from the opposition and his post-game flair at the mic goes toe-to-toe with South Carolina coach Steve Spurrier's verbal antics as the SEC's top personalities.

Miles is unique, from his open-handed sideline clapping to his battlefield mentality, he is one of the game's most original. Miles' grass snack before a pivotal goal-to-go situation against Alabama in 2010 was one of his proudest moments, the perfect example of being different.

Prior to replacing Nick Saban as head coach at LSU, Miles spent four years at Oklahoma State as the Cowboys' leading man. He helped turn things around and in 2002, was named the Big XII's Coach of the Year.

In his playing days, Miles was an offensive lineman at Michigan under the legendary Bo Schembechler before beginning his coaching career as a grad assistant with the Wolverines in 1980.

Believed to be his dream job, Michigan passed on hiring Miles as coach in 2007 and 2011.

Top LSU Players JaMarcus Russell QB 2005-07

Russell capped his LSU career by being selected with the No. 1 overall pick in the 2007 NFL Draft by the Oakland Raiders. He became only the second football player in school history (joining Billy Cannon in 1960) to be selected with the top pick in the NFL Draft.

He joined Cannon, Shaquille O'Neal (basketball), Ben McDonald (baseball) and Seimone Augustus (women's basketball) as LSU's No. 1 overall picks in a professional draft. His talents made him one of the top quarterbacks in school history, finishing ranked among the top five in every career passing category kept at LSU.

He compiled a 25-4 mark as LSU's starting quarterback with Les Miles as his coach. His 25 wins ties with Warren Rabb as the third-highest total in LSU history. Russell is ranked second all-time at LSU in career completion percentage (61.9) and career touchdown passes (52) and also ranks third in career completions (493) and career passing yards (6,625) and fourth in career attempts (797).

He is just the fourth player in school history to go over the 6,000 yard mark in total offense (6,704 yards). His career included a #3 ranking in school history with 6,704 yards of total offense, just one yard shy of tying Jeff Wickersham for second place in school history.

He is only the fourth quarterback in LSU history to pass for over 6,000 yards. He connected with WR Dwayne Bowe on 23 TD passes which ranks the pair as the most prolific pass-catch scoring combo in school history. He engineered eight fourth quarter or overtime victories during his career. When he left LSU he held single-season records in touchdown passes (tied Matt Mauck with 28), completions (232) and completion percentage (67.8). He is also the only quarterback to lead the Tigers at least 10 wins in back-to-back seasons ... Russell won 10 games as a starter in 2005 and followed that by starting all 11 victories in 2006. He was quite an athlete.

2005 Football Season Les Miles Coach # 31

The LSU Fighting Tigers football team represented the LSU Tigers of Louisiana State University during the 2005 Southeastern Conference football season. This was LSU's one hundred-twelfth season overall and its seventy-third season playing football as a member of the Southeastern Conference (SEC). In 1992, LSU joined the Western Division of the Southeastern Conference.

Led by coach Les Miles, the LSU head coach in his first of eleven seasons as head coach of LSU, the Tigers had a fine season at 11-2. Their SEC record was 7-1 giving them a first place finish in the Western Division of the SEC. At the national level, the Tigers were #5 in the coaches' poll and #6 in the AP. LSU was invited to play in the Peach Bowl, shellacking Miami (FL) by more than 35 point.

This was the year of Katrina and New Orleans and parts of Louisiana were devastated. Despite all of the distractions from Hurricane Katrina, LSU still finished its season with an 11–2 record capped off by a 40–3 victory over #9 Miami in the 2005 Peach Bowl without starting quarterback JaMarcus Russell.

LSU's season opener against #15 Arizona State was originally scheduled as a home game for the Tigers, but when LSU offered hurricane victims refuge on their campus, the NCAA moved the game to Tempe, Arizona. Things looked bleak for the Tigers early in the fourth quarter against Arizona State when they trailed 17–7. Then LSU's special teams blocked two kicks, a 47-yard field goal attempt and a punt, returning both for TDs to give LSU a 21–17 lead.

However, Arizona State regained the lead at 31–28 with four minutes left in the game. LSU started with the ball on their own 9-yard line. Nine plays later, LSU found themselves in a fourth down situation on the Arizona State 39-yard line where JaMarcus Russell threw a 39-yard TD to Early Doucet to take a 35–31 lead. Arizona State tried their own game-winning drive, but they were stopped on downs inside the Tigers' 30-yard line.

LSU's first home game came on prime time against No. 10 Tennessee. The game was moved from Saturday to Monday, September 26 because of Hurricane Rita. LSU had a huge lead at halftime, but the lead slipped away and the Tigers lost the game in overtime.

On October 15, LSU faced No. 11 Florida. Late in the third quarter, the Gators went up 17–14. Then, early in the fourth quarter JaMarcus Russell led the Tigers on a 12-play, 75-yard drive, capped by a 3-yard TD run by Joseph Addai, which put the Tigers up 21–17. LSU's defense took over from there, holding Florida to less than 30 yards the rest of the fourth quarter.

On October 22, LSU squared off against No. 16 Auburn. With just under five minutes left in the game, Auburn took a 17–14 lead. LSU responded by driving down to the Auburn 27-yard line, setting up a 44-yard field goal attempt by Chris Jackson. The kick was good, and the game went to overtime. LSU took the first possession and Chris Jackson made a 30-yard field goal to put LSU up 20–17. LSU's defense forced Auburn settle for a 39-yard field goal attempt by John Vaughn. Vaughn's kick hit the left upright, giving LSU the victory.

On November 12, LSU went to Tuscaloosa to play undefeated No. 4 Alabama. At halftime, Alabama led 10–0, but the Tigers came back in the third quarter to tie the game 10–10. After the Tigers missed three second half field goal attempts, the game went to overtime. In overtime, the Tiger defense held Alabama to a field goal. During LSU's ensuing possession, JaMarcus Russell hit Dwayne Bowe for an 11-yard TD pass, giving LSU a 16–13 victory.

Flynn, Addai lead LSU to blowout win in Peach Bowl

Dec 30, 2005

ATLANTA – They say that Miami waited until after the Chick-fil-A Peach Bowl to put up a fight. Why? Miami and LSU players exchanged punches in the tunnel as they left the field Friday night after the Tigers' 40-3 victory, the Hurricanes' most-lopsided bowl loss. Matt Flynn threw two touchdown passes in his first start for #10 LSU (11-2) and the Tigers attempted two late fake kicks against the No. 9 Hurricanes (9-3).

Georgia State Patrol officers intervened in the brawl, with one officer holding a Taser while trying to prevent more players from entering the tunnel.

Minutes later, Miami's Andrew Bain, appearing to be dazed, was escorted by officers out of the tunnel, but no players were detained by police, Miami coach Larry Coker said at the time. Khalil Jones was taken to a hospital for observation, Coker said Saturday morning.

"I don't know what happened and I don't condone it," Coker said the night before.

While players surged to the tunnel, LSU coach Les Miles was surrounded by reporters on the field.

"It really did surprise me to find out there was a problem," Miles said.

LSU tailback Joseph Addai, who ran for 130 yards and a touchdown and added a touchdown catch, insisted the Tigers "try to play with class."

"We play with our helmets and you see it on the scoreboard," Addai said.

LSU's Jacob Hester, who ran for 70 yards and a touchdown, said trash-talking began as normal banter and involved Tigers receiver Dwayne Bowe, a Miami native.

"We had a guy who is from Miami who was kidding around with one of his boys," Hester said. "Miami thought it was something serious. They came in the tunnel and they were swinging, but it was just a joke between friends."

After a few minutes, LSU players were back on the field celebrating the win. Miami players weren't available for comment after the game.

Led by Flynn, LSU scored on eight straight possessions starting with a field goal late in the first quarter. Flynn completed 13 of 22 passes for 196 yards with no interceptions and was selected the offensive MVP.

"I was just trying to get the ball to the athletes around me," Flynn said. Flynn also rushed for 39 yards and was named the offensive MVP.

"Our players come into the final game of the season with a new quarterback, a very capable quarterback," said LSU coach Les Miles. "I felt they had to control the line of scrimmage for him and find a back who would scrap for yards and play dominant defense...and that's what they did."

Led by Flynn, LSU (11-2) rebounded from its worst game of the year, a 34-14 loss to Georgia in the Dec. 3 Southeastern Conference championship game, returning to the Georgia Dome and delivering one of its strongest performance of the season.

LSU scored on eight straight possessions in a streak that started with a field goal late in the first quarter.

Even with a lopsided lead, LSU attempted to add to the rout, faking a field goal while leading 34-3 late in the third quarter and then failing on a fake punt with a 40-3 lead late in the game.

Miles said he called for the fake field goal but his players called for the fake punt.

Coker wasn't affected by the trickery.

"They can call whatever play they want to," he said. "It is our job to stop it."

LSU piled up 468 yards, the most allowed by Miami this season. The Hurricanes (9-3) entered leading the nation in pass defense and ranked third in total defense.

The Tigers were just as impressive on defense, holding Miami to 153 yards and six first downs, none in the second half. Kyle Wright completed only 10 of 21 passes for 100 yards.

LSU's dominant performance negated Miami's plan to utilize cornerback Devin Hester as a multiple threat on offense.

On Miami's first possession, Hester lined up at tailback and receiver and also took a direct snap at quarterback. Hester had a 24-yard run on the possession to set up a field goal. But overall, the junior and the Hurricanes were contained.

LSU had its largest margin of victory in a bowl game, easily surpassing its 45-26 win over Michigan in the 1995 Independence Bowl. Miami's previous most lopsided loss in a bowl game was a 29-0 loss to Arizona in the Fiesta Bowl on Jan. 1, 1994.

Addai scored on a 4-yard pass from Flynn in the second quarter and a 6-yard run in the third.

With the game tied at 3-3, a key fourth-down stop by LSU's defense early in the second quarter gave the Tigers momentum.

On fourth-and-1 from the LSU 35, Wright faked a pitch to his left and then ran right, where he was hit by LSU's Melvin Oliver short of the first down.

The Tigers seized the opportunity as Flynn connected with Craig Davis for a 49-yard touchdown pass over Miami cornerback Randy Phillips.

After Jackson's 47-yard field goal pushed LSU's lead to 13-3, the Tigers added another touchdown late in the half on Flynn's pass to Addai.

Addai went over 100 yards rushing on his second carry of the second half. He rambled 25 yards to the 6, setting up his scoring run on a pitch to the left one play later.

With Addai suffering from cramps, Hester filled in on the Tigers' second touchdown drive of the quarter. Hester's dive over the top from the 1 with 5:27 left in the period pushed the lead to 34-3.

The Tigers faked a 46-yard field goal late in the quarter, with Jackson running 12 yards to the Miami 17. Colt David's 35-yard field goal early in the fourth quarter pushed the lead to 37-3.

Sugar Bowl January 3, 2007

On January 3, 2007 at 7:00 p.m. #4 LSU pounded the #11 Notre Dame Fighting Irish at the Louisiana Superdome in New Orleans, LA (Sugar Bowl) W (41–14) before 77,781.

73rd Annual Allstate Sugar Bowl ~ January 3, 2007

#4 LSU 41 (Final: 11-3, #3)

#11 Notre Dame 14 (Final: 9-4, #17)

How LSU and Notre Dame Met in the 2007 Allstate Sugar Bowl
 If this was to be a head-to-head comparison between two of the better quarterbacks in college football, LSU's JaMarcus Russell and Notre Dame's Brady Quinn, it was Russell who made the most of it.

The strong-armed Tiger threw for 332 yards and two touchdowns, ran for 16 more yards and another touchdown. Quinn wasn't bad, somehow keeping his team in it for half. But there was no real comparison between the two quarterbacks. Or the two teams. Tiger dominance was illustrated in the second half when Notre Dame was outgained by the astonishing margin of 333-30. For the night, the Bayou Bengals gained an eye-rolling 577 yards and scored 41 points – the most ever surrendered by Notre Dame in a bowl game.

“They came to play,” Irish safety Chinedum Ndukwe said simply, “and we didn’t.”

LSU certainly did come to play – right from the start. The Irish opened the gates wide for LSU when they went for it on fourth down at their own 34 on their first possession. The fake punt failed, and the Tigers turned that into an easy touchdown that gave LSU early momentum. Russell immediately lofted a ball to a leaping Early Doucet, who made the catch 31 yards downfield, at the 3. The next play freshman Keiland Williams went in for the first points of the night. Then the Tigers went 80 yards on eight plays – with Russell rumbling for 21 yards to the Irish 15 on a quarterback draw. The drive ended with Dwayne Bowe latching onto an 11-yard Russell throw.

Twice the Tigers had the ball and twice they scored. Just nine minutes into the game LSU had a 14-0 lead.

To their credit, though, the Irish fought their way back. On two 80-yard drives, with 2:25 remaining until halftime, Notre Dame surprisingly tied the score with two short Quinn touchdown passes, to David Grimes and to Jeff Samardzija. The last came against a tiring LSU defense, which because of the Tigers' quick scores, had spent much of the first half on the field.

The upshot though, was that Notre Dame had actually pulled even against a clearly superior opponent. But that didn't last long, 70 seconds to be exact.

As if someone flipped a light switch, LSU cruised easily 82 yards downfield with Russell hitting Doucet with a 58-yard on-the-money bomb that carried to the 5. On the fifth play of the drive, Russell took it in himself on a quarterback draw. It was his first rushing TD of the season.

“That one right before the half got our morale down,” cornerback Mike Richardson sighed.

Notre Dame had been hanging in by keeping the ball away from the Tigers. At halftime the Irish had run 50 plays to LSU's 26; controlled the ball for 19:31 of 30 minutes; had rushed for 137 yards to LSU's 74; and had 15 first downs to LSU's 12. Furthermore, Darius Walker had 125 yards rushing against the vaunted Bayou Bengal defense, and the Irish caused the only turnover of the half. Yet, LSU was ahead 21-14.

“We gave up that big play before the half, which is never good,” Weis agreed. “And then they really laid the wood to us in the second half.”

Yes. The worst for Notre Dame, on its way to losing an NCAA-record ninth straight bowl game, was still to come.

Distancing themselves from the Irish in every conceivable way, the Tigers scored on their first four drives of the second half to end early any suspense about the outcome. In the third quarter, in which LSU scored on two Colt David field goals and another 58-yard pass from Russell to freshman Brandon LaFell, the Tigers out-gained the Irish 205 yards to 26; rolled up 11 first downs to 1; 25 to 7 in offensive plays and had the advantage in time of possession, 12:13 to 2:47.

A couple of unit tweaks by defensive coordinator Bo Pelini had allowed the Tigers to overwhelm the Irish offense, yielding one first down and a total of 30 yards in the entire second half. Walker didn't gain a single yard in the final 30 minutes and Quinn completed just 15 of his 35 passes for the game, good for a season-low 148 yards and two touchdowns along with two interceptions.

"Our defense was stingy all day," LSU Coach Les Miles said afterward. "It was dominant in the second half."

So was Russell, who was not only the game's MVP, but his eye-catching performance played a role in his selection as the No. 1 player in the NFL draft. Quinn went 22nd.

Miles couldn't have scripted things any better.

Recap excerpted from the book "Sugar Bowl Classic: A History" by Marty Mulé, who covered the game and the organization for decades for the New Orleans Times-Picayune.

Top LSU Players Matt Flynn 2003–2006

Matt Flynn was redshirted the 2003 season at LSU. He got to play after JaMarcus Russell graduated. In 2004, he served as third string quarterback behind starter Marcus Randall and backup JaMarcus Russell. He also doubled as LSU's holder on placekicks. Flynn played in all 12 games, but only three games as quarterback.

His collegiate first completion went to Xavier Carter for a 67-yard touchdown against Mississippi State. Flynn also made a short appearance in the 2004 Capital One Bowl, completing 1 of 4 passes for 11 yards in a 25–30 losing effort against Iowa. He finished the season with 4 completions on 10 attempts for 99 yards and 1 touchdown.

The departure of Randall left Russell and Flynn battling for the starting QB position in the 2005 season. Russell eventually got the job, leaving Flynn as backup. He played in seven games at quarterback for the Tigers in 2005, completing 27 of 48 passes for 457 yards, 7 touchdowns and 1 interception.

In a win over North Texas, Flynn threw a perfect 7-of-7 for 139 yards and 3 touchdowns, all in the fourth quarter. In the 2005 SEC Championship Game against the Georgia Bulldogs, starting quarterback Russell was injured and Flynn finished the game. He was then given the nod to start for the Tigers in the 2005 Chick-fil-A Peach Bowl against the University of Miami Hurricanes. In that game, he led the Tigers to a 40–3 rout of Miami.

In 2006, Flynn again served as backup to Russell, appearing in seven games. He completed 12 of 20 passes for 133 yards over the season, recording 2 touchdowns and 1 interception. Both touchdowns came in a 49–0 rout against Kentucky on October 14, 2006.

2007: Matt Flynn BCS National Championship season

With JaMarcus Russell's departure, Flynn became a starter as a fifth-year senior. He started every game that season except the SEC Championship in which he was injured. He finished the season with 2,407 passing yards, 21 touchdowns and 11 interceptions. In addition, he rushed for 215 yards and 4 touchdowns.

Flynn threw a 22-yard touchdown pass to Demetrius Byrd to win the game against Auburn on October 20, 2007 with 1 second remaining on the clock; Colt David kicked the extra point to make the final score LSU 30, Auburn 24.

Matt Flynn (No. 15) quarterbackes the LSU Tigers during the 2008 BCS National Championship Game against the Ohio State Buckeyes.

He then led the Tigers to a 4th quarter comeback against Alabama. Flynn and the Tigers then beat Louisiana Tech the following weekend and climb back to the #1 spot after a loss by then-#1 Ohio State. The following week the Tigers beat Ole Miss. In his final game at Tiger Stadium, Flynn and the Tigers lost to Arkansas, seemingly losing any chance at the national title. However, LSU, without Flynn, beat Tennessee for the SEC Championship, and losses by Missouri and West Virginia vaulted LSU back into the title game in New Orleans.

On January 7, 2008, Flynn led LSU to a BCS National Championship, beating Ohio State 38–24. Flynn completed 19 of 27 passes and 4 touchdowns, and was named offensive MVP of the game. The Tigers finished the season ranked No. 1 in the polls.

Top LSU Players Joseph Barksdale T 2007-2010

Barksdale was a four-year letter winner for the Tigers from 2007-10. That means he was not redshirted but played as a freshman. He played in 53 games, starting most of the time (39 times). With 39 stars as his career production number, his longest streak on the team came at the conclusion of the 2010 season.

In his freshman year, instead of sitting it out, Barksdale put in 14 games during LSU's national championship season in 2007 ... Originally, he came to LSU as a defensive lineman but switched to the offensive side of the ball shortly after his arrival ... He was good enough to have been invited to play in the East-West Shrine Game in January of 2011.

2007 Football Season Les Miles Coach # 31

The LSU Fighting Tigers football team represented the LSU Tigers of Louisiana State University during the 2007 Southeastern Conference football season. This was LSU's one hundred fourteenth season overall and its seventy-fifth season playing football as a member of the Southeastern Conference (SEC). In 1992, LSU joined the Western Division of the Southeastern Conference. The team won a bid to play in the Bowl Championship Series Allstate Sugar Bowl at the Louisiana Superdome in New Orleans, playing No. 11 Notre Dame on January 3, 2007.

Led by coach Les Miles, the LSU head coach in his third of eleven seasons as head coach of LSU, the Tigers had a fine season at 12-2. Their SEC record was 6-2 giving them a FIRST PLACE FINISH in the Western Division of the SEC. The Tigers also won the SEC Championship game v Tennessee W(21-14). At the national level, the Tigers were #1 in the coaches' poll and #1 in the AP. LSU won their way into the BCS National Championship Game where they defeated Ohio State (38-24).

As noted, the Tigers won the Southeastern Conference (SEC) championship and the national championship—their third claimed national championship and fourth recognized by the NCAA and the college football community.

The team was led on the field by senior quarterback Matt Flynn and senior defensive tackle Glenn Dorsey, a two-time All-American and winner of multiple national trophies and awards. They played their home games at Tiger Stadium in Baton Rouge, Louisiana.

The team overcame two triple-overtime losses and four other close games to become the first two-loss Bowl Championship Series (BCS) national champion ever. On their way to the BCS national championship, the Tigers won their tenth SEC championship by defeating Tennessee in the SEC Championship Game.

The Tigers finished the season having earned the Southeastern Conference championship trophy, the Grantland Rice Award, the MacArthur Trophy,^{2]} the Associated Press Trophy and the AFCA National Championship Trophy. It was a fine year for LSU and for Coach Miles

LSU regains focus, stops Tennessee to win SEC title Dec 1, 2007

ATLANTA -- Now, Les Miles and LSU can go home together, regardless.

Next stop, New Orleans. Only one thing remained uncertain about their future: What game awaited them in the Superdome?

Assured by Miles he would stay as their coach, backup quarterback Ryan Perrilloux and the Tigers (No. 7 BCS, No. 5 AP) shifted their attention to No. 14 Tennessee. The result was a 21-14 victory Saturday in the Southeastern Conference championship game – and suddenly a very strong possibility of playing for the national title.

"I'd line up against anybody and look forward to the opportunity," Miles said shortly after the win. "Anybody that saw this game tonight would certainly understand that this team is arguably the finest team in the country."

Jonathan Zenon scored on an 18-yard interception return with 9:54 left to rally LSU (11-2) from a 14-13 deficit, then Darry Beckwith picked off another pass by Erik Ainge deep in Tigers territory to seal it. Perrilloux was chosen as the MVP, though Ainge certainly played an equally significant role with his ill-timed tosses.

After No. 1 Mizzou and No. 2 West Virginia lost later at night, LSU felt it belonged in the BCS championship game.

"When you look at all the factors, I think we should go," LSU athletic director Skip Bertman said at midnight. "Our power rating, our strength of schedule. The fact that we won our conference and didn't lose a game in regulation. I think the voters will look at that."

The Tigers' win sent them home with a spot in the Sugar Bowl at worst. By the end of the evening, LSU was looking at a best-case scenario -- a date a week later in the title game, also to be held at the Superdome.

Ohio State is No. 3, but LSU fans feel their team should jump ahead of No. 4 Georgia, which didn't reach the SEC title game. Virginia Tech is No. 6 and won the ACC title game, but lost to LSU 48-7 this year.

LSU took a flight back to Baton Rouge after its win, yet heard all about Missouri's 38-17 loss to No. 9 Oklahoma 38-17 and No. 2 West Virginia's 13-9 defeat by Pittsburgh.

"The pilot was nice enough to announce the scores from the third quarter until the end of the games," Bertman said. "The boys were excited."

With speculation swirling he would soon leave for Michigan, Miles did everything he could to put aside the distractions. He met with his team earlier in the day and told them he was remaining at LSU.

"It's a great place. It's got everything. They said they want me," Miles said.

A day after he said he would talk to Michigan, Miles turned down a chance to go back to the school where he played and coached.

"I certainly love Michigan. I will always be a Michigan man," he said. "It saddens me at times I can't be in two places."

Miles' players were glad to keep him in place.

"We know Coach is here with us. We know Coach has been sticking by us," Perrilloux said.

Miles often mouthed the word "poise" to his players during the game. After LSU won its first SEC title since 2003, he let his emotions show as he hugged senior Jacob Hester, who barreled for 120 yards with helmet-hammering runs.

"I'm just really happy for our seniors, our leadership," Miles said.

Miles had to be proud of his defense, too, for the way it stopped the Vols at the end.

Still no word, though, on whether defensive coordinator Bo Pelini will soon leave to become head coach at Nebraska as has been rumored.

"I'm not really talking about that right now," Pelini said. Ainge played like a composed senior until his final few throws, when he tossed the ball to the wrong team. Zenon stepped in front of a receiver making a square-in and had an easy romp to the end zone.

"I shouldn't have thrown it," Ainge said.

Said Zenon: "We had prepared for that situation and we know they would run that play. That's exactly what they did."

Tennessee (9-4) had its five-game win streak stopped. Asked whether he had a bowl preference for his team, coach Phillip Fulmer drew a laugh.

"We'd like to go to the Rose Bowl, how about that?" he said.

Instead, the Volunteers might wind up in the Outback Bowl. The Vols sported all-orange uniforms for the first time since 1999 and led 7-6 at halftime. The game shaded toward the Tigers' side in the second half, with Perrilloux starring in place of injured Matt Flynn.

Perrilloux did it all for LSU, a week after sitting out a 50-48 triple-overtime loss to Arkansas that cost LSU a No. 1 ranking for the second time this season. Earlier this season, the Tigers lost in triple overtime at Kentucky.

Throwing his first passes in three weeks, Perrilloux completed 20 of 30 for 243 yards. He opened LSU's option attack, ran for a 2-point conversion after Zenon's touchdown and threw a crunching block that drew gasps from fans on both sides when the replay was shown on the video board.

No wonder the Tigers have stuck by the talented sophomore whose career has been beset by off-field issues.

"I thought I played OK," Perrilloux said.

For a while, it looked as if Tennessee safety Eric Berry might be the star of the game. He made a pair of plays in the third quarter that helped Tennessee take a 14-13 lead and preserve it.

Berry recovered a fumble by NCAA sprint star Trindon Holliday that set up Ainge's 6-yard TD pass to Josh Briscoe for a 14-13 edge and later intercepted Perrilloux's poor pass. Perrilloux bloodied his finger on the play when he hit a Vols helmet, but stayed in. The Vols could've been ahead by more, but Daniel Lincoln missed field goal tries from 30 and 51 yards.

Down at halftime, LSU came out of the locker room with a new look. The Tigers opened up their playbook and quickly grabbed the lead.

Holliday took off on his first three runs of the game, Early Doucet tried a reverse and Perrilloux threw a 48-yard dart to Brandon LaFell. Perrilloux finished off the lightning strike by slinging a pass through two defenders to Demetrius Byrd for a 27-yard touchdown and 13-7 lead.

At the start, Tennessee broke out a bit of trickery that's become fashionable in the SEC.

On their first possession, the Vols slipped wide receiver Gerald Jones in as quarterback on a third-and-4. He dashed for 20 yards on just his fourth rushing attempt this season. That led to Ainge's 11-yard touchdown pass to Chris Brown.

Somehow, Tennessee made its lead stand up until halftime despite being outgained 271 yards to 93.

BCS Championship Bowl Game January 7, 2008

On January 7, 2008 at 6:30 p.m. vs. #1 Ohio State, the #2 ranked LSU Tigers beat the #1 ranked Buckeyes at the Louisiana Superdome in New Orleans, LA in the last bowl game of the year for all the marbles--(BCS National Championship Game). It was also a College GameDay Celebration W (38–24) Because of the win in this game, LSU was crowned National College Football Champions. The game was played before 79,651.

2008 Allstate BCS National Championship

#2 LSU 38 (Final: 12-2, #1)

#1 Ohio State (Final: 11-2, #5)

WaaaaaHOOOOO!

The whoop of Les Miles interrupted what had been a quiet, polite, press conference with the normally soft-spoken LSU coach reflecting on his good fortune of leading his bunch of football warriors.

How LSU and Ohio State Met in the 2008 BCS Championship Game

In the middle of those introspective thoughts, Miles paused, and then gave out his bellow. Excuse me. Just kind of had to do that, he said, just one of those things. Exorcising his emotions was understandable. His Tigers had just earned LSU's second BCS championship trophy in four years, putting an end to a roller-coaster season of blowbacks, comebacks and setbacks, a season in which the sometimes under-appreciated Miles coached the Tigers to victories against five teams ranked in the final Top 15, and, in the process of fighting severe injuries and outside distractions, defeated five coaches with national championship resumes: South Carolina's Steve Spurrier, Florida's Urban Meyer, Alabama's Nick Saban, Tennessee Phil Fulmer, and, now, Ohio State's Jim Tressel.

That took some doing, which eventually, after the Tigers' not-as-close-as-the-final-score 38-24 victory over Ohio State, made LSU the first two-game losing champion since Minnesota in 1960. Thinking back on it from his spot on the post-game podium, Miles mused of his team of domination, dramatics and second chances, "It was like divine intervention."

To the Ohio State players, early in the game, it seemed like divine guidance. Sophomore tailback Chris "Beanie" Wells broke loose for a 65-yard touchdown on the Buckeyes' first possession. On Ohio State's second series, backup running back Brandon Saine found himself free, courtesy of broke coverage, and caught a 44-yard pass to the LSU 15. Three plays later, junior kicker Ryan Pretorius kicked a 25-yard field goal.

Things had to look easy at this point for Ohio State, seeing as how the Buckeyes gave up just a nation-leading average of 10.0 points per game. This one, to some, must have seemed over.

Think again. LSU had been down by 10 against three other opponents (Florida, Auburn, Alabama) and won them all. "The coaches sat us down and reminded us we've been in big games before,” said sophomore offensive tackle Ciron Black. “That we’ve been down before, to just focus and play like we know how to play.”

From the point of that 10-point deficit, with 9:12 left in the first quarter, LSU proceeded to control the ball, running 36 of the next 55 plays, converting eight of its next nine third downs and stopping Ohio State on four of its next five.

The Tiger rally began with senior quarterback Matt Flynn leading LSU on a 10-play drive to set up junior kicker Colt David’s 32-yard field goal. The Tigers were showing some signs of life.

Flynn then drove his team 84 yards – thanks in large measure to two personal fouls on the Buckeyes – to a tying touchdown. Flynn saw Ohio State preoccupied with four LSU receivers bunched to the right and took a quick snap and hit tight end Richard Dickson for a 13-yard score.

With the score evened, the stage was set for a second quarter 21-0 point eruption the likes of which the defensive stalwart Buckeyes couldn’t have imagined.

Things conceivably might have been altered, but for the biggest play of the night – by the most unlikely player, but fittingly, considering this unconventional season.

Ohio State drove back to the LSU 21 to line up for a 38-yard Pretorius field goal. Suspecting a fake, Ricky Jean-Francois hesitated a nanosecond and then roared in, throwing aside a Buckeye lineman, and getting a hand on the ball. Junior linebacker Darry Beckwith fell on it at the 34. LSU then drove to the go-ahead touchdown – which would never be relinquished – a 10-yard pass from Flynn to sophomore receiver Brandon LaFell.

“They were in position to add three points,” Miles said, “and instead we get the short field and come back to get seven. That was really a big play.”

LSU ended up scoring 31 straight points, with a four-yard Flynn pass to senior wide receiver Early Doucet early in the third quarter.

This game seemed over, and it was, though both teams would trade meaningless touchdowns down the stretch.

As purple-and-gold confetti rained down on the field at game's end, it was left to LSU senior defensive end Kirston Pittman to put everything into perspective: "We're a team of fight, a team of destiny," he said. "There were people who didn't think we belonged here . . ." Then a big roar went up as Jean-Francois, the game's defensive MVP, held aloft the Waterford symbol of the BCS Championship, and Pittman finished, "But you see who's holding up the crystal trophy now."

The only bigger winner of the postseason was the Sugar Bowl, which pulled off its two games in championship fashion, gaining kudos and accolades from across the sporting world.

Recap excerpted from the book "Sugar Bowl Classic: A History" by Marty Mulé, who covered the game and the organization for decades for the New Orleans Times-Picayune.

2008 Football Season Les Miles Coach # 31

Chick-Fil-A Bowl—December 31, 2008

On December 31, 2—9, at 7:30 p.m., LSU pounded the Yellow Jackets of #14 Georgia Tech at the Georgia Dome, Atlanta, GA in the Chick-fil-A Bowl Game W (38–3) before 71,423

LSU'S defense shut down Georgia Tech's triple-option attack and the Tiger offense was nearly flawless in a 38-3 win in the Chick-fil-A Bowl in Atlanta. Jordan Jefferson was named the offensive MVP, throwing for 142 yards and a score, while Charles Scott rushed for 65 yards and 3 TDs as the Tigers led from start to finish.

Leading 7-3 after the first quarter, the LSU offense took over scoring 28 unanswered points in the second quarter to take a 35-3 lead at halftime. LSU's second quarter outburst was aided by outstanding special teams play by the Tigers.

LSU forced a fumble on a Tech punt return, setting up a 1-yard TD run by Scott for a 21-3 lead. On Tech's next possession, the Tigers stuffed a fake punt attempt by the Yellow Jackets, setting up another score just two plays later on a Jefferson 25-yard TD pass to Richard Dickson, stretching the lead to 28-3.

LSU added a final TD just before halftime when Keiland Williams raced 17 yards for a score. LSU finished the year at 8-5.

Penn State Slips Past LSU in Capital One Bowl

ORLANDO, Fla. -- For the second time in as many trips to the Capital One Bowl, the No. 13 LSU football team watched a victory slip away in the final minute. No. 11-ranked Penn State hit a game-winning field goal with 57 seconds to play to hand head coach Les Miles his first bowl loss at LSU, 19-17.

LSU (9-4) scored two touchdowns in 3:02 to overcome a 13-point deficit and take a 17-16 fourth-quarter lead. With 6:54 to play, Penn State (11-2) answered with a 12-play, 65-yard drive that took 5:57 off the clock and regained the lead.

The Tigers' final drive ended at the Penn State 33-yard line. The loss broke LSU's 24-game non-conference winning streak that began after the 2005 Capital One Bowl loss to Iowa (30-25) on a 56-yard last-second touchdown pass. Miles fell to 24-1 in non-conference games.

After sputtering through the first half, LSU's offense found life in the second half with a pair of scores against the No. 4-ranked scoring defense in the NCAA.

A 24-yard touchdown pass from Jordan Jefferson to wide receiver Brandon LaFell, a 1-yard touchdown run by running back Stevan Ridley and a pair of PAT's by Josh Jasper gave the Tigers their first lead with 12:49 left to play.

With less than 10 minutes left, the Tigers forced a punt after consecutive Penn State penalties backed the Nittany Lions into second-and-28. After Jefferson scrambled for a first down on the ensuing series, the pass to Toliver fell incomplete and LSU punted to setup Penn State's final game-winner drive.

On a recently sodded turf and after a heavy rain storm, LSU struggled to get its footing in the first half and fell behind 13-3 at halftime on New Year's Day. LSU managed only 67 yards of total offense and a 28-yard field goal by Jasper in the first 30 minutes. The field conditions were so poor that making any sort of cut with the ball was out of the question.

Penn State scored its only touchdown with a 37-yard pass with 1:54 to play in the first quarter when wide receiver Derek Moyer ran straight past an LSU defender and caught quarterback Daryll Clark's pass in stride inside the 5-yard line.

Tight end Adam Quarless led his team with eight receptions for 88 yards, while Graham Zug had four for 51 yards. Moye had three catches for 53 yards.

Despite the footing, Penn State placekicker Collin Wagner was perfect on the afternoon hit field goals of 26, 18, 20 and 21 yards. Clark completed 18-of-35 passes for 216 yards with one touchdown. He was sacked only once and did not throw an interception.

Running back Evan Royster ran 17 times for 65 yards, while Stephfon Green added 35 yards on seven carries. Clark rushed 11 times for net 20 yards.

Big plays gave the Nittany Lions a 186-67 first-half advantage in total offense, while the Tigers managed only two first downs on passes of 18 and 36 yards by Jefferson to LaFell.

LSU was outgained, 340-243.

Jefferson was sacked twice while completing 13-of-24 passes for 202 yards and a touchdown. Wide receiver Terrance Toliver had 81 yards on six catches, while LaFell added five receptions for 87 yards.

Jefferson was intercepted with 3:48 left in the first half when Toliver mishandled a pass that bounced into the hands of cornerback A.J. Wallace.

The LSU rushing game never gained a foot-hold, as the Tigers had 41 yards rushing on 25 attempts including 17 sack yards. The longest run of the game was for 11 yards by Trindon Holliday.

LSU safety Chad Jones led the way defensively with eight tackles including one for lost yardage. He partially blocked a punt in the first quarter and broke up a pass. Linebackers Jacob Cutrera and Kelvin Sheppard each added seven tackles.

There were a Capital One Bowl-record 15 punts, as the teams combined to tie the record of 10 in the wet first half.

The game was marred by multiple dropped passes by both teams on both sides of the ball. Penn State fumbled four times -- twice on snaps from center -- while LSU fumbled one time.

Two of LSU's three turnovers were lost deep in their territory, however, the LSU defense held Penn State to a pair of field goals. LSU's third turnover was a fumble on the game's final play as wide receiver Rueben Randle attempted to lateral to a teammate.

Peterson was the top defensive back in college football in 2010, earning two national awards (Thorpe and Bednarik) as well as being a consensus All-America selection. Three-year starter at cornerback for the Tigers. Played in 39 games, starting 30 times ... Finished career with 135 tackles, 22 pass breakups and seven interceptions Scored touchdowns three different ways during his LSU career - punt return, interception, and return of a blocked field goal, projected as a top five pick in the 2011 NFL Draft, opted to forgo senior season.

Top LSU Players Michael Brockers DT, 2009-11

2011 Second-Team All-Southeastern Conference (AP)

NFL DRAFT (No. 14, 1st Rd., St. Louis Rams)

Along with Morris Claiborne and Rueben Randle, Brockers was one of three Tigers invited to New York's Radio City Music Hall for the NFL draft. He was selected by the St. Louis Rams as the 14th overall pick in the first round of the 2012 NFL Draft. The Rams traded down from No. 6 to 14 with the Dallas Cowboys, allowing the Cowboys to take LSU teammate Morris Claiborne... He was the third defensive lineman selected in the draft. Eight of the 11 players taken in the first round between picks 11-21 were defensive linemen.

Michael Brockers spent three years with the Tigers before declaring for the NFL following his redshirt sophomore season. He was a big sophomore and he dominated as an interior defensive lineman. He was simply a tremendous run stuffer during his two years of playing at LSU.

Brockers played in 27 games with 15 starts, including all 14 games in 2011 ... Finished his career with 79 tackles, 11.0 tackles for loss and 2.0 sacks ... Earned second-team All-SEC honors

Top LSU Players Josh Jasper K, 2010-2011

Joshua Norwood Jasper was born November 26, 1987). He is an American football special teams' player who played the position of placekicker for the Toronto Argonauts of the Canadian Football League.

He set the Tennessee state record for career high school field goals, with 44, and his longest field goal was 54 yards. In 2010, he was a Consensus College All-American placekicker for the LSU Tigers in his senior year, after leading the nation with 28 field goals.

Jasper was the most accurate kicker in LSU history as of 2011. In July 2011, the Tampa Bay Buccaneers signed him as a free agent.

2010 Football Season Les Miles Coach # 31

The LSU Fighting Tigers football team represented the LSU Tigers of Louisiana State University during the 2010 Southeastern Conference football season. This was LSU's one hundred seventeenth season overall and its seventy-eighth season playing football as a member of the Southeastern Conference (SEC). In 1992, LSU joined the Western Division of the Southeastern Conference.

Led by coach Les Miles, the LSU head coach in his sixth of eleven seasons as head coach of LSU, the Tigers had a fine season at 11-2. Their SEC record was 5-3 giving them a tie for second place in the Western Division of the SEC. At the national level, the Tigers were ranked 8th in the coaches' poll and ranked 8th in the AP. LSU was invited to the Cotton Bowl Classic there they defeated Texas A&M W (41-24).

LSU dominated the 2011 game. In 2010, the Cotton Bowl had celebrated its 75th Anniversary with a new logo dedicated to the year-long celebration. As noted, Texas A&M played Louisiana State University in the 2011 AT&T Cotton Bowl Classic on January 7, 2011. LSU would beat Texas A&M 41–24. This was the first Cotton Bowl Classic to be played in prime time, as well as the latest calendar date for the game.

Top LSU Player Morris Claiborne CB 2009-2011

Morris Claiborne played at LSU from 2009-2011. He had a fine college career that totaled 95 tackles, two tackles for loss and 11 interceptions over his career.

Morris Claiborne's earned All-American honors and was the winner of the Jim Thorpe award as well. As noted, Claiborne was also a lottery pick in the NFL Draft, going No. 6 overall to the Dallas Cowboys.

In 2011, he had six interceptions for 173 yards and averaged 28.8 yards per return on those interceptions.

The previous year in 2010, he had five picks and averaged 20.2 yards per return.

To repeat, Claiborne was drafted sixth overall by the Dallas Cowboys in the 2012 NFL Draft. The Dallas Cowboys had traded their first (14th overall) and second round picks (45th overall) in the 2012 NFL Draft to the St. Louis Rams and received their first round pick (6th overall) which they used to draft Claiborne. Claiborne was the first defensive back drafted in 2012 and was the Cowboys' highest draft pick since they drafted Terence Newman fifth overall in 2003

One of the most electric playmakers in LSU football history despite playing just two years with the Tigers. Mathieu played in 26 games with 14 starts for the Tigers as he became a fan favorite who played well beyond his size with tremendous heart and talent.

He was expected to be a contender for National Player of the Year honors in 2012, however he never made it to the field as a junior ... Instead, was dismissed from the team on Aug. 10 for “violation of team rules” just a week into preseason training camp. Yet, in just two years (26 games), he created a total of 14 turnovers (eight fumble recoveries, four interceptions, two forced fumbles recovered by a teammate) and scored four touchdowns (two punt returns, two returns of fumbles).

He owns the school record of 11 forced fumbles, which is four better than the previous record. The 11 career forced fumbles ranks as the seventh-highest total in NCAA history and is tied with Guss Scott of Florida for the SEC record.

Of his 11 forced fumbles, he recovered six of them and eight of the forced fumbles resulted in turnovers. His eight career fumble recoveries is tied for third in school history and just short of the school record.

He recorded 133 career tackles with 93 of those being of the solo variety. He added 16 tackles for loss of 90 yards, including six sacks for a loss of 48 yards. He proved to be a dynamic punt returner as well, boasting a 15.6 per return average (27 returns for 421 yards) with two touchdowns.

Mathieu started 14 career games – 10 of those at cornerback, three at nickel back and once at free safety ... As a sophomore, he earned 2011 National Defensive Player of the Year honors, was a unanimous first-team All-American and recipient of the Bednarik Award .

He became the first defensive back to be invited to the Heisman Trophy ceremony in New York since Charles Woodson of Michigan in 1997. He finished fifth in the 2011 Heisman Trophy voting with 327 total points and 34 first-place votes.

2011 Football Season Les Miles Coach # 31

The LSU Fighting Tigers football team represented the LSU Tigers of Louisiana State University during the 2011 Southeastern Conference football season. This was LSU's one hundred eighteenth season overall and its seventy-ninth season playing football as a member of the Southeastern Conference (SEC). In 1992, LSU joined the Western Division of the Southeastern Conference.

Led by coach Les Miles, the LSU head coach in his seventh of eleven seasons as head coach of LSU, the Tigers had a fine season at 13-1. Their SEC record was 8-0 giving them a first place finish in the Western Division of the SEC and an SEC Championship after beating Georgia 42-10 in the SEC Championship Game. At the national level, the Tigers were ranked 2nd in the coaches' poll and ranked 2nd in the AP. LSU was invited to the Championship series and they were shut out lost in the big game by Atlanta L (0-21).

To recap, LSU was a member of the Western Division of the Southeastern Conference. They had a great year finishing the regular season undefeated at 13-0, 13-1 counting the championship game which they lost. They finished the SEC at 8-0, becoming the crowned Western Division champions.

They represented the Western division in the SEC Championship Game where they defeated Eastern Division champion Georgia 42-10 to be crowned overall SEC champions. They finished the season ranked #1 in the final BCS poll to earn a spot in the BCS National Championship Game vs #2 Alabama. The Tigers, who had defeated Alabama 9-6 in the regular season, lost to the Crimson Tide 0-21. It was the first time a team was ever shut out in a BCS game. Despite the loss, it was a great LSU season and a great season for coach Les Miles.

Games of the 2011 Season

In the season opener on September 3, 2011 at 7:00 p.m. vs. #3 Oregon, the preseason ranked #4 LSU Tigers defeated the Oregon Ducks at the Cowboys Stadium Arlington, TX. Then, on Nov 25 at home v #3 Arkansas, the #1 LSU Tigers pummeled the Razorbacks at home in Tiger Stadium, Baton Rouge, LA in the Battle for the Golden Boot W (41–17) before 93,108. LSU finished the regular season undefeated and untied. It was a great year. They won the Western Division SEC Championship and got to play Georgia for all of the SEC marbles.

December 3, V Georgia SEC Championship

On Dec 3 at 3:00 p.m., #1 ranked LSU Tigers played #12 ranked Georgia Bulldogs at the Georgia Dome in Atlanta, GA in the SEC Championship Game. It was also a College GameDay celebration. LSU took no prisoners in dominating the Bulldogs W (42–10) before 74,515

ATLANTA — LSU won the Southeastern Conference Championship game on December 3, 2011, in the Georgia Dome in Atlanta, Georgia. This game determined the 2011 football champion of the Southeastern Conference (SEC). The game featured the Georgia Bulldogs of the Eastern division against the LSU Tigers of the Western division.

LSU was the Western division champion was the designated "home team". This was Georgia's 4th SEC Championship Game and LSU's 5th, and the 3rd time these two teams met in this game. LSU defeated Georgia in 2003 and Georgia defeated LSU in 2005. This was to be the tie breaker.

LSU defeated Georgia in the 2011 SEC championship game 42–10. The game's MVP was LSU cornerback Tyrann Mathieu. The game was televised by CBS Sports, for the eleventh straight season. LSU moved to 4–1 in SEC Championship Games and Georgia to 2–2. LSU moved on to the January 9, BCS National Championship Game.

Alabama was #1, and LSU finished #2.

Alabama's "D" embarrasses LSU as five FGs, late TD, seal national title

Jan 9, 2012
Associated Press

NEW ORLEANS -- The Alabama defense took no chances in the rematch. The stakes were high. The College Football National Championship was on the line. Winner take all. Not losers' bracket for this game. Win or you're out for the next year.

When LSU's Jordan Jefferson dropped back to pass, he was swept under by a tide of crimson. Alabama was ready for sure and they remembered the regular season loss in single digits in OT.

When the LSU quarterback took off running, he must have felt like Alabama had a few extra players on the field. They were everywhere—swarming on LSU like hornets after being buzzed by a lawnmower.

Courtney Upshaw, Dont'a Hightower and Co. sure made it seem that way. With a smothering display of old-school football, the No. 2 Crimson Tide blew out the top-ranked Tigers 21-0 in the Allstate BCS Championship Game. It all went their way.

Former LSU coach Nick Saban's Tide also moved into the top spot in the final Associated Press poll for the eighth time, tying Notre Dame for the most of any team in college football.

In this postseason of high-scoring shootouts, one of the greatest defenses in college football history carried another title back to Tuscaloosa.

"They are unbelievable," said Alabama offensive lineman Barrett Jones, relieved that he only has to go against them in practice. "That defense is as good as any defense I've ever seen. They rush the passer; they have awesome linebackers and they're great in coverage. They really don't have any weaknesses. They have to be as good as any defense ever. These Alabama team words were no consolation for an LSU brood that had faced them once in the regular season and had beaten the same bunch of "greats."

Barrett Jones got no argument from Jefferson and the Tigers (13-1), who had beaten Alabama 9-6 in overtime on Nov. 5 -- a game the Tide was still smarting about when it got to the Big Easy.

LSU didn't cross midfield until there were 8 minutes left in the game. The Tigers finished with just 92 yards and five first downs.

"This defense is built on stopping them, and that's what we did," said Upshaw, the game's defensive MVP. "We wanted to come out and show the world we beat ourselves the first game. We wanted to come out and dominate from start to finish, and that's what we did."

The Crimson Tide (12-1) kept kicking field goals and finally made a long-overdue trip to the end zone late in the game -- the only touchdown scored by either team in their two meetings.

Jeremy Shelley tied a bowl record with five field goals and the defense did the rest, posting the first shutout in the 14-year history of the BCS. It was the Tide's second BCS title in three years.

"That was the message before the game: to finish," Saban said. "In fact, it was how bad do you want to finish? We certainly didn't play a perfect game, we got a field goal blocked, we couldn't find the end zone for a long time, but we just kept playing."

While only crimson-clad fans will remember this as a thing of beauty, Alabama erased any doubts that it deserved to be in the title game over another one-loss team like Oklahoma State or Stanford. Then again, one of those teams might have actually scored a touchdown before Alabama finally did, with 4:36 left in the game, long after fans may have flipped to something more entertaining than a one-sided kicking contest.

Amazingly, these Southeastern Conference powerhouses played twice in a span of about two months, and never got one of those things that's worth six points -- you know, touchdowns -- until Trent Richardson broke off a 34-yard run with 4:36 remaining. It only took 115 minutes, 34 seconds, plus the overtime period in their first meeting.

LSU had beaten eight ranked teams -- including Alabama in early November -- to establish itself as the clear No. 1 going into the bowls, but the Tigers didn't come close to matching their performance from the Game of the Century in Tuscaloosa. Instead of putting up a "Godfather II," this one was more akin to "Speed 2."

The Tigers were hapless, having been outgained 384-92 in total yards. On that one and only trip into Alabama territory, they quickly went back, back, back -- the last gasp ending appropriately with the beleaguered Jefferson getting the ball knocked from his hand before he could even get off a fourth-and-forever pass. They were not ready for Alabama's determination. Determination was the victor in this game.

"We didn't do a lot different," Saban said. "We did some things on offense formationally. Our offensive team did a great job. Defensively, we just played well, played the box. Our special teams did a great job."

He has won a pair of BCS titles at Alabama, plus another at LSU in 2003. He's the first coach to win three BCS titles, denying LSU's Les Miles his second championship. The Tigers will have to settle for the SEC title, but that's not likely to ease the sting of this ugly performance.

A couple of months ago at Bryant-Denny Stadium, Alabama held the top spot in the first matchup between the 1-2 teams. The Tigers won with three field goals, while the Crimson Tide missed four of its six attempts.

OK, so maybe that wasn't a classic. But it was downright thrilling compared to the rematch, the first time in the BCS that teams played for the title after meeting during the regular season.

Credit the Alabama defense for that.

LSU simply couldn't do anything -- running or passing. Kenny Hilliard led the Tigers with 16 yards rushing, while Jefferson was 11 of 17 passing for 53 yards, usually hurrying away passes before he was sent tumbling to the Superdome turf. He was sacked four times and threw a mystifying interception when he attempted to flip away a desperation pass, only to have it picked off because his intended receiver had already turned upfield looking to block.

"I think people have stopped appreciating defense," Jones said. "What an awesome game defensively. Two really good defenses, and we were fortunate enough to put some points on the board." AJ McCarron was the offensive MVP, completing 23 of 34 passes for 234 yards. Richardson added 96 yards on 20 carries. But an even bigger cheer went up when the defensive award was presented to Upshaw, who had seven tackles, including a sack, and spent a good part of his night in the LSU backfield.

With the way his defense was playing, McCarron simply had to avoid mistakes and guide the offense into field-goal range. He did that to perfection.

"When you have a great offensive line like I have, and great players around you, it makes your job easy as quarterback," McCarron said.

"I've got to give all the credit to them. I wish I could have the whole team up here."

Miles said the rematch would be another display of "big-boy" football, and that was apparent on the opening kickoff and first play from scrimmage. Morris Claiborne was clotheslined by Alabama's Trey Depriest on the return, then Michael Ford was sent flying by Damion Square and Jesse Williams on a 2-yard run that immediately set the tone.

But this time, the special teams went Alabama's way. Marquis Maze dealt the first big blow for the Crimson Tide with a 49-yard punt return midway through the opening quarter, and he might've gone all the way to the end zone if not for a leg injury that forced him to pull up. Punter Brad Wing was the only defender left to beat, but Maze had to hobble out of bounds.

McCarron completed a 16-yard pass to Darius Hanks at the LSU 10, setting up Shelley's 23-yard chip shot field goal. If nothing else, Alabama had accomplished one of its goals coming into the game: to at least get close enough to the end zone for its embattled kickers to have a better chance of converting.

In the first meeting, Shelley and Cade Foster combined to miss four field goals -- all of them from at least 44 yards.

In the do-over, Foster stayed on the sideline while Shelley also connected from 34, 41, 35 and 44 yards. Not that it was a flawless kicking performance. Shelley had another kick blocked and pushed another wide right, attempting a bowl-record seven field goals overall.

In addition, he missed the extra point after Richardson's touchdown. It didn't matter.

"The whole defense is the MVP," Upshaw said. "The whole defense. Roll Tide, baby. Roll Tide!"

LSU's best weapon was Wing, who averaged nearly 46 yards on nine punts. That was about the only highlight for the purple and gold, which failed to match its BCS title game victories in 2003 and 2007, the last two times the game was played in New Orleans, about 80 miles from its Baton Rouge campus.

"We couldn't sustain any consistency," Miles said. "The calls became much more difficult."

Miles never considered switching to backup quarterback Jarrett Lee, who started the first eight games for the Tigers -- four of those while Jefferson was serving a suspension for his involvement in a bar fight.

"We felt like with Jefferson's feet and the ability to get out of the rush, that it was fair that he finished," Miles said. "He certainly had a tremendously strong year in any regard. Boy, we wanted to finish this one. It's hard to finish a season that was so successful this way."

Top LSU Players Kenny Hilliard RB 2011-2014

Hilliard was a four-year letter winner as a running back for the LSU Tigers, playing in 48 game with seven starts. He rushed for 1,557 yards and 27 touchdowns as part of a talented and deep LSU backfield.

Kenny Hilliard

Kenny tied for No. 8 in LSU history in career rushing TDs with 27. His senior season cut short after he suffered a shoulder injury against Alabama. He had four 100-yard rushing games in his college football career. These included a career-best of 141 yards in win over North Texas in 2012.

He was a member of LSU's 2011 team that posted a 13-0 record during the regular season and captured the SEC title. He graduated in December of 2014 with a degree in interdisciplinary studies. Kenny is the nephew of former LSU and New Orleans Saints great Dalton Hilliard. He was drafted in seventh round (235th pick) by the Houston Texans.

2012 Football Season Les Miles Coach # 31

On April 27, 2012, the LSU Board of Supervisors voted unanimously in favor of an $80 million south end-zone upper deck expansion that added 70 "Tiger Den" suites, over 3,000 club seats and 1,500+ general public seats to bring the total capacity of Tiger Stadium to 102,321. This made Tiger Stadium the fifth-largest college football stadium in the country. Construction began on October 17, 2012, and was completed by the summer of 2014. In time for the season. The project was privately funded by Tiger Athletic Foundation.

Beginning with the 2017 football season, Tiger Stadium added the "Skyline Club". This open air seating located atop the south end zone upper deck is now home to a 1,500 seat "beer garden". Purchase of a ticket in the Skyline Club includes admission to the seating area, admission to a self-serve food buffet, and the ability to purchase beer and wine.

The 2018 football season saw the appearance of an additional "beer garden" called "The Chute". This new beer drinking area is located below the south endzone bleachers. It is limited to 1,500 patrons at a time. Fans entering The Chute must be at least 21 years of age, and pay a $20 admission fee that includes two complimentary beers.

Additional beers must be purchased separately. The Chute has a large screen television set for watching the game, as well as a seating area consisting of tables and chairs. In 2019, alcohol sales were opened stadium wide.

LSU in 2012

The LSU Fighting Tigers football team represented the LSU Tigers of Louisiana State University during the 2012 Southeastern Conference football season. This was LSU's one hundred nineteenth season overall and its eightieth season playing football as a member of the Southeastern Conference (SEC). In 1992, LSU joined the Western Division of the Southeastern Conference.

Led by coach Les Miles, the LSU head coach in his eighth of eleven seasons as head coach of LSU, the Tigers had a fine season at 10-3. Their SEC record was 6-2 giving them a second place finish in the Western Division of the SEC. At the national level, the Tigers were ranked 12th in the coaches' poll and ranked 14th in the AP. LSU was invited to the Chick-fil-A Bowl where they were defeated by Clemson.

Games of the 2012 season

Last-Second Field Goal Gives Clemson Chick-fil-A Bowl

ATLANTA, Ga. - The LSU Tigers looked on the verge of a knockout entering the final five minutes of the third quarter, but couldn't stop the Clemson Tigers on its three fourth quarter drives, including a late- drive that resulted in a game-ending 37-yard field goal as time expired that gave 14th-ranked Clemson a 25-24 decision over 8th-ranked LSU Monday night at the Georgia Dome.

The game winner, a 37-yard field goal by Chandler Catanzaro as the game clock ran out, was atonement for Catanzaro who earlier had an extra point blocked that put Clemson behind the eight ball in scoring until the final field goal.

The late heroics by the ACC team put a damper on a night when freshman LSU running back Jeremy Hill scored two touchdowns for LSU, including a 57-yard run on the first play from scrimmage in the third quarter that gave him the school single season freshman rushing record of 12 touchdowns, topping the mark he tied earlier in the first quarter of 11 set originally by Dalton Hillard in 1982. Kevin Minter of LSU who had 14 tackles in the first half and 19 total for the game with one sack and he was voted the outstanding defensive player of the game. Minter was one off his season and career high of 20 set earlier at Florida and two off the school record of 21.

The rally for Clemson came after LSU had taken a 24-13 lead after gaining as many yards in the third quarter (112) as it did in the first half of the game (106) and appeared to be in control of the contest. But LSU was unable to sustain the late challenge from Clemson as first Catanzaro at the 9:26 mark hit a 26-yard field goal to cut it to 24-16 and then on the ensuing possession, quarterback Tajh Boyd hit DeAndre Hopkins with his second touchdown of the night from 12-yards out to make it 24-22 with 2:47 to play.

Because the extra point on Clemson's second score of the night had been blocked by Bennie Logan (the first LSU block of a PAT since 1998), Clemson was forced to go for two and Boyd's pass fell short. The Tigers were unable to get anything on its next drive attempting to get a first down to run time off the clock and put the onus on the defense as Clemson took over after an LSU punt with 1:39 to play on its own 20 yard line with all three of its time outs available. Boyd's first two pass attempts to Hopkins were incomplete. On third down, Sam Montgomery got a sack forcing Clemson to call timeout with 1:22 to play and facing a fourth and 16 from its own 14.

Boyd on the play found Hopkins down the middle of the field giving Clemson a first down on their own 40 at the 1 minute mark. Boyd hit Hopkins, working again on Tharold Simon, for seven on first down. The second down pass was incomplete but pass interference was called on Eric Reid and Clemson had a first down at the LSU 42 with 47 seconds left.

Boyd hit Brandon Ford for three yards and Clemson called their second time out with 42 seconds left. Boyd again found Hopkins over the top of the LSU defense to the 26-yard line with 37 seconds to go. Then for the first time on the drive, Clemson's Boyd went to the other side of the field to Adam Humphries who got to the 17, one yard short of another first down and well within field goal range.

An LSU injury stopped the clock on second and one and Boyd took the snap and dropped down in the center of the field at the 20 where Clemson let the clock run down to two seconds before calling its final time out. Catanzaro came out and set up; LSU called a time out to try to ice the kicker, but when asked, the junior kicked it true from 37 for the win.

January 1, 2014 Outback Bowl LSU v Iowa

On January 1, 2014 at 12:00 p.m., #14 LSU beat Iowa . vs. unranked Iowa at Raymond James Stadium in Tampa, FL and became Outback Bowl Champions with a score of W (21–14) before 51,296.

Jeremy Hill runs for 216 yards as LSU wins Outback Bowl Jan 1, 2014-- Associated Press Report

TAMPA, Fla. -- What Anthony Jennings lacked in experience, LSU more than compensated for with a talented supporting cast in the Outback Bowl.

Jennings made plenty of freshman mistakes Wednesday, however they weren't nearly as costly as they could have been for the 14th-ranked Tigers with Jeremy Hill rushing for 216 yards and two touchdowns in a 21-14 victory.

The second quarterback in school history to make his first college start in a bowl game, Jennings fretted over an interception that helped Iowa (8-5) get back in the game.

But with the outcome on the line, he simply turned and handed the ball to Hill, who made sure LSU (10-3) would not lose.

"Anthony in his first start was tight," coach Les Miles said, adding that Jennings learned some lessons will be beneficial moving forward with his career.

"He wasn't perfect by any stretch," Miles said. "But he did what he had to do."

Craig Loston's fourth-quarter interception stopped a potential tying drive, giving Hill a chance to put the game out of reach by carrying four times for 87 yards on a six-play, 92-yard march that gave LSU (10-3) a 21-7 lead.

Iowa (8-5) pulled within a touchdown for the second time in 4 minutes after Jordan Cotton returned the ensuing kickoff to the Tigers 4.

Jennings ran for a first-quarter touchdown, but the true freshman struggled to hit open receivers while completing 7 of 19 passes for 82 yards. In addition to throwing an interception that Iowa's John Lowdermilk returned 71 yards, he was sacked four times while standing in for the injured Zach Mettenberger.

C.J. Beathard replaced Jake Rudock at quarterback for Iowa on the first play of the fourth quarter. His fourth-down interception stopped one promising drive, but he also tossed a 4-yard TD pass to Kevonte Martin-Manley that trimmed Iowa's deficit to 21-14 with 1:42 remaining.

Lowdermilk set up Iowa's other TD -- Mark Weisman's 2-yard run in the third quarter -- with his interception return to the LSU 1. Officials initially ruled Lowdermilk, who was untouched on the return, scored. But the TD was reversed when a replay review determined the Iowa defender dropped the ball before crossing the goal line.

"It was just an embarrassing play, and that's not Iowa Hawkeye football. ... I really regret it and I apologize," Lowdermilk said. "It was just a sickening feeling all around. I was just so happy Mark scored. It was a bonehead play on my part."

The victory enabled LSU to finish with at least 10 wins for a school-record fourth consecutive season. The loss ended Iowa's three-game winning streak.

"Our team wanted to create a legacy, and the seniors wanted to be the first group to win 10 games four years in a row. They wanted to win a bowl championship and they wanted to commit to playing as a team," Miles said. "The hard work that each and every guy has gone through, there was no question they were going to play hard together."

Hill, a 235-pound sophomore who rushed for 1,401 yards and 16 TDs this season, averaged 7.7 yards per carry on 28 attempts. On the clinching drive, he delivered runs of 2, 28, 20 and, finally, 37 yards for his second touchdown. He also scored on a 14-yard run in the second quarter.

"Given an opportunity to close out a game, he knows what to do," Miles said.

"I took it on my shoulders that I needed to make plays to win the football game," Hill said. "Great players have that mentality."

Besides a three-touchdown loss to Alabama, the Tigers dropped three-point decisions to SEC rivals Georgia and Mississippi, while also displaying their potential by being the only team to defeat No. 2 Auburn during the regular season.

Jennings came off the bench in the closing minutes to finish a comeback victory over Arkansas in the regular-season finale, leading a 99-yard game-winning drive that he finished with a 49-yard TD pass.

Miles expected Jennings to play well, citing poise as one of the 19-year-old's strongest assets. Iowa didn't have much film to study of the young quarterback, but Hawkeyes coach Kirk Ferentz said any newcomer who entered a program such as LSU's and rose to No. 2 on the depth chart as a true freshman figured to have the makings of a star.

And with a talented supporting cast around him, Jennings didn't have to carry the Tigers on his back Wednesday.

Hill and receivers Odell Beckham Jr. and Jarvis Landry combined with Mettenberger this season to make LSU the first team in SEC history to feature a 3,000-yard passer, two 1,000-yard receivers and a 1,000-yard rusher in the same year. And the Tigers didn't stray from the formula that made them one of the league's top offenses.

Hill broke a 42-yard run on his first carry, setting the tone against an Iowa defense that entered yielding just under 121 yards per game rushing and a little more than 303 overall, third in the Big Ten and seventh nationally. Seven plays later, Jennings finished a 77-yard drive with his 2-yard TD run.

"It was a gutsy performance by Iowa," Miles said. "We had a great amount of respect for them coming in and they showed that respect was well earned."

Music City Bowl Recap: Notre Dame Fighting Irish 31, LSU Tigers 28: Miles' Last-Minute Magic Fails

A bad call by the Pac-12 officials calling the game helped cost the Bayou Bengals what could have been their ninth victory of the season, dropping the SEC to 3-1 on the bowl season

By Brandon Larrabee Dec 30, 2014, 8:36pm EST

Christopher Hanewinckel-USA TODAY Sports

Being in a tight game with a Les Miles-coached LSU team is supposed to be fatal for everyone except Alabama. You're playing into the strength of Miles, the knack of pulling out a win with a touch of magic and wackiness, despite his own clock-management gaffes. But instead, it was Notre Dame that ended up pulling out the last-minute victory at the Music City Bowl, and officiating might have had more to do with it than anything magical or bizarre.

The referees, provided courtesy of the Pac-12, missed an LSU touchdown on the field on what was a bang-bang play in real time. No major deal; it's easy to miss those things, and that's why college football now has instant replay. And the touchdown was reviewed -- but the mistaken original call was allowed to stand, to the amazement of seemingly everyone except the broadcasters, who defended the decision long after most people had declared it ludicrous.

You can SEE his knees, you idiots

Blown calls happen, though, and LSU still managed to take the lead for the first time with about six minutes left in the third quarter -- only to allow the Irish to tie things, 28-28, a couple of minutes later. Neither team would score again until Notre Dame kicked a field goal as time expired, Miles using his two timeouts to ice the kicker instead of preserving clock, and win the game. By that time, the Tigers' vaunted defense had allowed 449 yards of total offense to Notre Dame amid rumors that John Chavis could be headed to Texas A&M.

You can see his knees

On the other hand, there were some signs Tuesday that LSU's offense could be more effective next year than this one. Leonard Fournette ran for 143 yards and two touchdowns on 11 carries, adding another score when he ran a kickoff back 100 yards for another touchdown. Travin Dural added another four rushes for 61 yards. Redshirt freshman John Diarse had a 75-yard catch and run for a score.

But there are still some questions that LSU will face this offseason, coming off a year in which they put up an 8-5 record tied for the worst of Les Miles' time in Baton Rouge. What Chavis decides to do and who is named to replace him, if necessary, is just one of them.

There's also the issue of whether the bursts of productivity on the offensive side of the ball Tuesday can be turned into consistent success throughout the 2015 season. That will do more to determine their fate than a frantic few minutes or a bad call.

Texas Tech entered the Texas Bowl with one of the worst run defenses in the nation. LSU arrived with running back Leonard Fournette. What happened next was pretty predictable.

Fournette rushed for 212 yards and scored a bowl-record five touchdowns, leading LSU to a 56-27 win over Texas Tech on Tuesday at NRG Stadium in Houston.

Fournette pummeled Texas Tech defenders and went over 200 yards for the fourth time this season. The sophomore, who is not eligible for this spring's NFL Draft, scored on runs of 43, 4 and a pair of 2-yard touchdowns. He also caught a touchdown in the first half, helping the Tigers overcome a big performance from Texas Tech quarterback Pat Mahomes. Mahomes of course is tossing the football nowadays for the 2020 Super Bowl Champs, Kansas City Chiefs.

Patrick Mahomes completed 28 of 56 passes for 370 yards and four touchdowns, three to receiver Jakeem Grant, but couldn't keep up with Fournette and the Tigers in the second half. Grant finished with 125 receiving yards on 10 catches.

LSU rushed for 384 yards. Texas Tech finished with 29 yards on the ground. Tigers quarterback Brandon Harris, running back Darrel Williams and receiver D.J. Chark each had rushing touchdowns for LSU.

The game turned midway through the third quarter. Trailing 28-20, Texas Tech was threatening at the LSU 16-yard line, when Tigers defensive back Rickey Jefferson picked off a deflected pass near the goal line to end the Red Raiders drive. LSU quickly turned the turnover into points, with Fournette scoring from four yards out to put the Tigers up 35-20 with four minutes left in the third quarter. Texas Tech never recovered.

The win caps an up-and-down season for the Tigers, who were ranked as high as No. 2 at one point in the season, only to suffer a three-game losing streak in November that almost cost Les Miles his job. After a 38-17 loss to Ole Miss, reports surfaced that Miles would be relieved. But the Tigers rallied around their coach and carried him off the field after a 19-7 win over Texas A&M to end the regular season.

LSU led 21-13 at halftime. Fournette rushed for score and caught a 44-yard touchdown on a screen pass in the first half. Grant caught two touchdown passes from Mahomes in the first half to keep Texas Tech close.

NOTES: RB Leonard Fournette, who broke the LSU record for rushing touchdowns in a season with 21, is not eligible for this year's NFL Draft. ... Texas Tech QB Pat Mahomes went over 5,000 total yards on the season. He is the 12th quarterback in NCAA history to accomplish the milestone. ... LSU opens the 2016 season against the Wisconsin Badgers at Lambeau Field in Green Bay, Wis. ... Tuesday's game was an announced sellout. It was the second time since the bowl's inception that single-game tickets have sold out.

December 31, 2016 Citrus Bowl

On December 31, 2016 at 10:00 a.m. vs #5 Louisville, #19 LSU prevailed at the Camping World Stadium in Orlando, FL in the famous Citrus Bowl W (29–9) before 46,063

By the Associated Press

ORLANDO, Fla. -- For much of the first half Saturday, LSU sophomore running back Derrius Guice found little room to work as Louisville's defensive front filled the gaps and swarmed to the ball. But the second half of the Buffalo Wild Wings Citrus Bowl was a different story.

The game slowed down and Guice took the time to let the blocks develop before hitting the holes. Finally he popped a 12-yard run off left tackle and then the big one came the next play when he burst up the middle, broke a tackle and then was off to the races for a 70-yard touchdown early in the third quarter that all but closed the door on the 15th-ranked Cardinals and sealed the 19th-ranked Tigers 29-9 victory at Camping World Stadium.

"As a running back you just have to be patient, you can't get upset, you can't get mad when things don't always go your way," said Guice, who earned the Citrus Bowl MVP after finishing his day with 138 yards and a rushing touchdown while also catching a 1-yard touchdown pass. "You just got to work and grind, go on the sidelines with the coaches and get everything fixed."

The spotlight has been on Guice since star running back Leonard Fournette announced earlier this month that he would not play in the Tigers' bowl game so that he can focus on getting his injured ankle healthy to begin his path toward an NFL career. Guice had filled in nicely for Fournette during the season and Saturday was no different as his clock-draining runs and the Tigers' (8-4) suffocating defense limited Louisville's Heisman Trophy-winning quarterback Lamar Jackson.

"We had probably one of the best players in college football in Leonard Fournette get hurt, and he stepped in and didn't blink an eye," said LSU coach Ed Orgeron, who won his first official game as head coach since being relieved of the interim title last month. "He is one of the best players in America and I totally expect him to be the best player in America next year and we're fortunate to have him."

Guice made explosive plays running the ball and catching it, but his most memorable play may have come on special teams in the fourth quarter when he took a kickoff return 50 yards, steamrolling Cardinals kicker Blanton Creque near the sideline in the process. It was the perfect capper on a breakout season while delivering a glimpse of is in store for next season.

"LSU is Army U so when one man goes down you've got to step up," Guice said. "I feel like I've done a great job of stepping up this year."

KEY MOMENT

The Tigers sacked Jackson eight times and linebacker Arden Key was responsible for two of the sacks.

Key sacked Jackson for a safety late in the second quarter and then on the opening play of third quarter, he sacked Jackson again to establish a school record for sacks with 12.

TAKEAWAY

LSU: The Tigers defensive front was too fast and too dominant for Jackson and the Cardinals offense. Louisville was 0 for 13 on third-down conversions well into the fourth quarter before converting its first.

LOUISVILLE: Clearly the Cardinals' offense had not seen the type of speed on defense in the ACC they encountered against the SEC's LSU. The Tigers got to Jackson early and often from their base defense and with a variety of blitzes. Defensively, the Cardinals (9-4) struggled without starting secondary members Josh Harvey-Clemons (safety) and Trumaine Washington (cornerback) along with sack leader James Hearn (linebacker) all missing due to injuries.

POLL IMPLICATIONS

LSU: The Tigers looked overpowering on both sides of the football and will certainly see their stock soar from No. 19 in the AP poll after a convincing win over Louisville.

LOUISVILLE: The Cardinals suffered their third straight loss to conclude the season, which certainly makes it appear their No. 15 ranking was inflated. Louisville may remain in the Top 25 but it will be just barely.

UP NEXT

LSU: Now that the bowl season is over, the Ed Orgeron era begins in earnest. Matt Canada has been hired as the new offensive coordinator and can begin to install his system. His biggest decision will be at quarterback where Etling is returning with experience but the Tigers have two recruits coming in in pro-style quarterback Myles Brennan and dual-threat quarterback Lowell Narcisse.

LOUISVILLE: Led by the tremendous talent of Jackson, the Cardinals could contend for the ACC title and College Football Playoffs next season. But coach Bobby Petrino will definitely have more playmakers to help Jackson. The offensive line also has to get better in its protection of Jackson. The Cardinals lose a couple of talented seniors off the defense but the core returns, giving Petrino a chance to have his best team since returning.

LSU National Champions

Following half a season as the Tigers' interim head coach, LSU hired Ed Orgeron to be its full-time coach ahead of the 2017 season.

Ed Orgeron took over the Ole Miss football program beginning in 2005 and led the Rebels through three disappointing seasons while serving as head coach. He was 3-8 in his first season in Oxford, the program's worst record since the 1987 season.

Ed Orgeron, LSU Coach Brief Biography

<<< Ed Orgeron

His offense finished the '05 season 111th out of 117 teams in total offense, and despite a slew of changes to the offensive coaching staff in the offseason his Rebels finished the 2006 season once again ranked 111th in total offense. Ed Orgeron between then and now, really learned how to be a head coach.

Ole Miss was 4-8 in 2006, and fans in Oxford began to grow impatient with Orgeron. His Rebels hit rock-bottom in 2007, finishing the season 3-9 and an even-more disappointing 0-8 in SEC play. It was Ole Miss' first winless season in conference play since 1982, and Orgeron was fired following the season and replaced with Houston Nutt. His final record at Ole Miss was just 10-25, including an abysmal 3-21 record against SEC opponents.

Orgeron, 58, was hired as LSU's defensive line coach in 2015 and had recruiting coordinator added to his duties in 2016. Four games into the 2016 season, Orgeron replaced fired head coach Les Miles as interim head coach.

Following the 2016 regular season, Orgeron was named head coach. The Tigers beat Clemson in the Mercedes-Benz Superdome last Jan. 13 to win the national championship with a 15-0 record after quarterback Joe Burrow won the Heisman Trophy. Orgeron is 40-9 as LSU's head coach.

Less than two weeks after winning the national title, Orgeron agreed to a new contract with a $3 million raise to $7 million a year over six years.

Orgeron, who has also served as head coach at Ole Miss and Southern Cal, is 25-9 at LSU. His career mark as a collegiate head coach is 41-36, however he's 31-11 over his last 42 games.

Top LSU Players Joe Burrow QB 2018-2019

Burrow was born December 10, 1996. After winning the National Championship with LSU. He became an American football quarterback for the Cincinnati Bengals of the National Football League (NFL). This (2020) will be his first season in the NFL.

He played college football at Ohio State and LSU. In 2019, his second and final season with LSU, Burrow passed for over 5,600 yards with 60 touchdowns, the latter being the most in a single season in NCAA FBS history. That year he led LSU to victory in the 2020 National Championship Game. He won several awards and honors for his performance, including the Heisman Trophy. Many journalists and sportswriters deemed the season to be the greatest ever by a college quarterback. He was selected first overall by the Bengals in the 2020 NFL Draft.

Burrow was born in Ames, Iowa, on December 10, 1996. He is the son of former University of Nebraska, NFL, and CFL player Jim Burrow, who went on to a coaching career that lasted nearly 40 years. The elder Burrow, whose last coaching position was defensive coordinator for the Ohio Bobcats for more than a decade, retired after the 2018 season in part to be able to see all of Joe's games in his final college season.

Burrow was born in Ames, while his father was on the staff for the Iowa State Cyclones. According to a 2019 Sports Illustrated story, "The Burrow athletic lineage dates back nearly a century." In the 1940s, one of his grandmothers set a Mississippi state high school record with an 82-point game in basketball. His paternal grandfather played basketball at Mississippi State; his uncle, John Burrow, played football at Ole Miss; and two older brothers also played football at Nebraska.

He attended the 2002 Rose Bowl at age six, as his father was an assistant coach for Nebraska. Not long after, he began playing in youth football leagues. Unlike his father, uncle, and brothers, who all played on defense, Burrow started out as a quarterback, because his first youth team had no one else who could play the position.

The Burrow family moved to Fargo, North Dakota, in 2003 when his father was hired as the defensive coordinator for the North Dakota State Bison. One day while visiting the office, future Central Michigan head coach Dan Enos commented that the seven year old had a future in football. The Burrows spent two years in Fargo before Jimmy accepted the defensive coordinator position at Ohio University in Athens, Ohio.

Burrow attended Athens High School (2011–14) in The Plains, Ohio, leading the school to three straight playoff appearances and the school's first seven playoff victories in school history. During his career, he passed for 11,416 yards with 157 passing touchdowns and rushed for 2,067 yards with 27 rushing touchdowns. He was awarded the state's Mr. Football Award and Gatorade Player of the Year award as a senior in 2014.

He and his Bulldog teammates went 14–1 that season. He was also a standout basketball player, and was named first-team all-state at point guard his senior year. Burrow was rated as a four-star football recruit, and was the eighth-highest ranked dual-threat quarterback in the class of 2015 according to the 247Sports Composite.

He committed to Ohio State to play football on May 27, 2014. In December 2019, the Athens City School District school board unanimously approved a measure to rename the school's football stadium in honor of Burrow.

Burrow at Ohio State

Burrow redshirted his first year at Ohio State in 2015, He spent the next two years as a backup to J. T. Barrett. Over the two years, he played in 10 games, completing 29 of 39 passes for 287 yards and two touchdowns. Realizing that Dwayne Haskins would be named starting quarterback at Ohio State, Burrow transferred to Louisiana State University (LSU) on May 20, 2018. Burrow had graduated from Ohio State in three years with a degree in consumer and family financial services, and was immediately eligible as a graduate transfer. He made a great decision. Can any of us imagine Joe Burrow on the bench anywhere?

Joe Burrow at LSU

LSU QB Joe Burrow sizes up the opposition

In his first year at LSU in 2018, Burrow was named the starting quarterback as a redshirt junior. In an early season road trip to then-#7 Auburn, Burrow threw for 249 yards and a touchdown en route to a 22–21 win. He was named SEC Offensive Player of the Week following the victory.

He again earned SEC Offensive Player of the Week honors following a 292-yard, three-touchdown performance against Ole Miss two weeks later. Burrow helped lead the Tigers to a 10–3 record, including a win over UCF in the Fiesta Bowl, and a No. 6 ranking in the final AP Poll.

Burrow finished the season with 2,894 yards passing, 16 TD's, and five interceptions. He added 399 rushing yards and seven rushing touchdowns.

Burrow during the 2019 season

<<< Joe Burrow LSU QB

Burrow was again named LSU's starting quarterback heading into his redshirt senior season in 2019. In the Tigers' season opener against Georgia Southern, Burrow threw for 278 yards and five touchdowns in a 55–3 win, and was later named SEC Co-Offensive Player of the Week (with Tua Tagovailoa). In a week two road trip to then-No. 9 Texas, Burrow threw for 471 yards, four touchdowns, and an interception in the 45–38 win.

His 471 yards were the second most in school history and most since Rohan Davey's 528 against Alabama in 2001. He was named Walter Camp National Offensive Player of the Week and SEC Offensive Player of the Week following the performance. Burrow earned his third SEC Offensive Player of the Week honors on September 21 during LSU's game against Vanderbilt. He threw for 398 yards and a school-record-setting six passing touchdowns in the Tigers' 66–38 win. He became the first LSU quarterback to ever throw for 350 yards in three consecutive games.

In a 42–6 win over Utah State, Burrow threw for 344 yards and five touchdowns, and became the first ever Tiger quarterback to throw for 300-plus yards in four consecutive games. The streak came to an end the next week against then-No. 7 Florida, but Burrow's 293 yards and three touchdown passes helped lead the Tigers to another win, 42–28.

The next week, in LSU's seventh game of the season, Burrow eclipsed the LSU single-season passing touchdowns record of 28 when he added four more in a win against Mississippi State. Burrow led the Tigers to another top-ten win, and broke the LSU record for career 300-yard games (eight) with a 321-yard, two-total-touchdown performance against then-No. 9 Auburn.

LSU's November 9 game against Alabama was highly anticipated as the highest ranked showdown between the two schools since the 2012 BCS National Championship Game; LSU was ranked second and Alabama third in the season's inaugural College Football Playoff rankings released the week prior. The game would also feature two leading candidates for the Heisman Trophy in Burrow and Alabama quarterback Tua Tagovailoa.

Burrow and the Tigers came away victorious in a 46–41 shootout. Burrow passed for 393 yards and three touchdowns in the game, and was again named Walter Camp National Offensive Player of the Week and SEC Co-Offensive Player of the Week, sharing the latter with teammate Clyde Edwards-Helaire.

The following week against Ole Miss, Burrow threw for 489 yards and five touchdown passes, and passed LSU's single-season passing yards record set by Rohan Davey in 2001. He also set the LSU record of consecutive completed passes with 17 during the game.

On November 30, Burrow helped LSU secure an undefeated regular season with a 50–7 blowout win over Texas A&M, throwing for 352 yards and three touchdowns. During the game, he set the all-time SEC record for single-season passing yards (previously set by Kentucky's Tim Couch), and tied the conference record for single-season touchdowns of Missouri's Drew Lock.

Burrow took sole possession of the SEC single-season touchdown record the following week in the SEC Championship Game, throwing for four TDs in LSU's dominant 37–10 win over Georgia that secured the Tigers' place in the College Football Playoff.

On December 14, 2019, Burrow was awarded the 2019 Heisman Trophy, winning by the largest margin in the history of the award, also earning the highest share of possible points available. Burrow's Heisman acceptance speech, in which he referenced the rampant poverty and food insecurity affecting his hometown, inspired over US $450,000 in donations towards the local food bank in Athens County from over 13,000 donors.

Other awards he won that year include the Maxwell Award, Walter Camp Award, Johnny Unitas Golden Arm Award, Davey O'Brien Award, Lombardi Award and Manning Award.

In the playoff semifinal game at the 2019 Peach Bowl, Burrow recorded 29-of-39 pass attempts for 493 passing yards and seven passing touchdowns (all seven touchdowns in the first half), to go along with five rushes for 22 rushing yards and a rushing touchdown in a 63–28 victory over fourth-ranked Oklahoma.

In the 2020 National Championship Game against Clemson, Burrow threw for 463 yards with six total touchdowns, five passing, which led LSU to a 42–25 victory and him being named the game's offensive MVP.

He finished his 2019 season with 60 passing touchdowns, which broke the single-season FBS record previously held by Colt Brennan in 2006 (58). His 5,671 passing yards ranks third all-time in an FBS season, tied with Case Keenum (2009). His passer rating of 202 for the season was also a record. Several sportswriters deemed the season to be the greatest ever by a college quarterback.

Citrus Bowl January 1, 2018

Boykin rallies Notre Dame to Citrus Bowl win over LSU

From the Associated Press

ORLANDO, Fla. -- Notre Dame receiver Miles Boykin lived up to Brian Kelly's expectations.

The Fighting Irish's head coach told the junior during a practice leading up to Monday's Citrus Bowl game against LSU that Boykin was going to win the MVP trophy.

Boykin made not only one of the top plays of this bowl season but one of the more memorable catches in Notre Dame bowl history. He made a dynamic one-handed grab and raced down the sideline for a 55-yard touchdown with 1:28 remaining to give the 14th-ranked Fighting Irish a 21-17 victory over No. 16 LSU.

The win by Notre Dame (10-3) is its first in a New Year's Day bowl since the 1994 Cotton Bowl against Texas A&M and snaps a nine-game skid in January postseason games.

"He looked at me like I had two heads. But I felt like he had a chance," said Kelly about his prediction. "He's got the ability, if we could get him the football. And Ian got him the football and Miles made a great individual play and, lo and behold, I've got the MVP sitting next to me."

Boykin had only nine catches for 151 yards and a TD coming into the game, but he got his first start after starters Chase Claypool (shoulder injury) and Kevin Stephenson (suspension) were ruled out.

Boykin showed off his wide-catch radius on what proved to be the game-winning play. On first-and-10 from the Irish 45, Ian Book lofted a pass up the right sideline that Boykin was able to snag with his right hand at the LSU 33, eluding corner Donte Jackson. Boykin then broke a tackle attempt by Donte Jackson at the LSU 26 before finding a clear path to the end zone.

"Ian put it in place where only I could reach it," said Boykin, who finished with three receptions for 102 yards and a touchdown. "It was a great pass and I was just lucky enough to pull it down on one hand. I've got pretty big hands."

LSU coach Ed Orgeron said that Boykin made a great grab but lamented his defense's other struggles on the play.

"We had our best cover guy on him (Jackson) but he's a big receiver," he said after the Tigers finished the season 9-4. "We had two guys on him and missed the tackle. That's what I'm mostly disappointed with."

Book entered the game in the second quarter after Brandon Wimbush struggled moving the offense. The sophomore was 14 of 19 for 164 yards with two touchdowns and an interception.

Book's first touchdown came early in the fourth quarter. With Notre Dame trailing 14-6, he found Michael Young in the back of the end zone for a 6-yard score. Josh Adams then scored on a two-point conversion to tie it.

"It was an awesome opportunity, such a surreal moment that last play with Miles," Book said. "We knew it was going to be a close game. We just had to stay composed and do what we have been doing since January."

The game lacked drama the first three quarters. It was scoreless until four seconds remained in the first half when a Justin Yoon 46-yard field goal gave Notre Dame a 3-0 halftime lead.

LSU's Danny Etling was 19 of 33 for 229 yards and a pair of second-half touchdowns to Derrius Guice. Guice, who was the MVP of last year's game, had 98 yards on 21 carries.

THE TAKEAWAY

Notre Dame: Kelly joins Knute Rockne, Ara Parseghian and Lou Holtz as the only Fighting Irish coaches to have three double-digit win seasons at the school.

LSU: Guice, who said after the game that he hasn't made a decision on whether to leave early for the NFL draft, joins Charles Alexander, Dalton Hilliard, Kevin Faulk and Leonard Fournette as the only players in school history to rush for more than 3,000 yards. He has 3,065 yards in 36 games.

MISSED OPPORTUNITIES

The Tigers had it twice on the Irish 1 and managed just three points. In the second quarter they had fourth-and-goal before being called for a false start which resulted in a missed 22-yard field goal by Connor Culp.

In the fourth quarter a Guice 2-yard reception put the Tigers in another fourth-and-goal at the 1. Orgeron decided to go for the 3-point lead and a Jack Gonsoulin 17-yard field goal, which gave the Tigers a 17-14 lead.

"We shot ourselves in the foot too many times," Etling said. "We executed pretty well every possession, but made one or two bad plays, false starts that put us five yards back and all the sudden we're in a tougher situation."

UP NEXT

Notre Dame: The Irish open next season with a home game against Michigan on Sept. 1.

LSU: The Tigers will have to replace six starters on offense, including Etling and likely Guice, leading into the Sept. 1 opener against Miami in Dallas.

2018 Football Season Ed Orgeron Coach # 32

The LSU Fighting Tigers football team represented the LSU Tigers of Louisiana State University during the 2018 Southeastern Conference football season. This was LSU's one hundred twenty-fifth season overall and its eighty-sixth season playing football as a member of the Southeastern Conference (SEC). In 1992, LSU joined the Western Division of the Southeastern Conference.

Led by coach Ed Orgeron, in his second season of many seasons as head coach of LSU in 2018, the Tigers had a fine season at 10-3. Their SEC record was 5-3 giving them a tie for second place finish in Western Division of the SEC. At the national level, the Tigers were ranked 7th in the coaches' poll and ranked 6th in the AP. LSU was invited to the Citrus Bowl where beat UCF by a score of W (40-32)

The Tigers were coming off a 9-4 season in Ed Orgeron's first full season. They had begun the year ranked 25th in the preseason AP Poll.

As you will see as we report in the short game summary below, in the first game of the year, the team defeated # 8 Miami (FL) in the Advocare Classic played at AT&T Stadium in Arlington, Texas. LSU got a backwind and won its next four games, including on the road against then-No. 7 Auburn. The team was in fifth place nationally before falling on the road to Florida. They rebounded with wins over No. 2 Georgia and No. 22 Mississippi State before being shut out by eventual SEC champions Alabama.

In the last game of the regular season, LSU lost on the road against Texas A&M in an FBS record-tying seven overtimes. The final score of the game, 74–72, set the FBS record for combined points in a single game (146). The team finished the regular season tied for second in the SEC's West Division and was invited to the Fiesta Bowl to play UCF, which the Tigers won by a score of 40–32 to end UCF's active win streak of 25 games. LSU finished the season with an overall record of 10–3 and was ranked 6th in the final AP Poll.

The team's defense featured three consensus All-Americans in defensive backs Grant Delpit and Greedy Williams, and linebacker Devin White, who was awarded the Dick Butkus Award as the nation's best linebacker. On offense, the Tigers were led by redshirt junior quarterback Joe Burrow, who finished with 2,894 passing yards and 23 total touchdowns (16 passing and 7 rushing). Senior running back Nick Brossette led the team in rushing with 1,039 yards and 14 touchdowns. It was a great year but as you will see in the 2019 season, it was just a warmup.

Games of the 2018 Season

In the season opener for LSU on September 2, 2018 at 6:30 p.m., #25 LSU beat #8 Miami (FL) at AT&T Stadium, Arlington, TX in the Advocare Classic W (33–17) before 68,841. LSU vs. Central Florida Fiesta Bowl

GLENDALE, Ariz. (AP) -- Joe Burrow watched the ball land in an opposing player's hands and immediately gave chase. Locked in on preventing a pick six, LSU's quarterback didn't see Joey Connors, Central Florida's 313-pound defensive lineman, bearing down on him.

With a thunderous, blindside collision, Burrow found himself flat on his back, woozy and wondering what happened. Minutes later, after being helped to his feet, Burrow was back on the field, hitting receivers all over the field. The nation's longest winning streak was over. So was a second self-proclaimed national championship.

The LSU Tigers were Fiesta Bowl champions, thanks to their gritty junior quarterback.

Burrow shook off the big early hit to throw for 394 yards and four touchdowns, helping No. 11 LSU end No. 7 UCF's 25-game winning streak with a 40-32 victory in the Fiesta Bowl on Tuesday. "I didn't really think about the hit too much after it happened," said Burrow, who had a cut on his neck from the hit. "It hurt for a second, I got right up and went on to the next play."

LSU (10-3, No. 11 CFP) started its first Fiesta Bowl without several key players on defense and fell into an early 11-point hole against the high-scoring Knights (12-1, No. 8 CFP).

The Tigers clawed back behind Burrow and a defensive front that made life difficult for UCF quarterback Darriel Mack Jr. Burrow returned from the early blindside hit to pick apart UCF's secondary, hitting 21 of 34 of passes, including two touchdowns to Justin Jefferson.

"It looked like the passing game we wanted," LSU coach Ed Orgeron said. "Joe was on the money."

LSU sacked Mack five times and made him rush numerous throws, holding the nation's third-best offense to 250 total yards -- 295 below its average -- while spoiling the Knights' bid for a second straight self-proclaimed national title.

Taj McGowan scored on a 2-yard run and the Knights converted a 2-point conversion to pull UCF to within 40-32. After LSU recovered the onside kick, the Knights' last-ditch attempt finished with a tipped interception, ending a run that started after a loss in the 2016 Cure Bowl.

"Obviously, everyone in the locker room is really upset," UCF defensive lineman Mason Colubiale. "We haven't lost a game since 2016."

UCF declared itself national champions after finishing as the only undefeated FBS team a year ago. The Knights earned another shot at an undefeated season by staging a massive rally to beat Memphis in the American Athletic Conference title game.

But just like last year, UCF was on the outside looking in when the College Football Playoff final four was announced, adding to the boulder-sized chip on its shoulder and only a self-awarded national title in its reach.

The Speedy Knights got the Fiesta Bowl off to a fast start, going up 14-3 on Greg McCrae's 25-yard TD run and Brandon Moore's 93-yard interception return.

The Tigers roared back behind Burrow and their disruptive defensive front.

Burrow shook off the big hit on the pick six, finding Jefferson on a pair of scoring passes and a 49-yard TD to Derrick Dillon.

UCF sputtered offensively after its opening drive, but Mack hit Gabriel Davis on a 32-yard pass in the closing seconds to pull UCF to within 24-21 at halftime.

Burrow opened the second half with a 32-yard TD pass to Ja'Marr Chase, and Cole Tracy hit three field goals to put LSU up 40-24. Tracy's final kick, the 97th of his career, broke the NCAA all-division record and ended the nation's fourth-longest winning streak since 2000.

"Love the way they competed for four quarters, continued to fight with everything that they had. Believed. Played as a group," UCF first-year coach Josh Huepel said. "Just weren't good enough at the end."

Even depleted, LSU's defense proved to still be formidable and Burrow showed his grit after the big hit, giving LSU its first 10-win season since 2013.

UCF missed injured two-time AAC player of the year McKenzie Milton and had no answer for LSU's passing game to lose for the first time in two years.

SO MANY PENALTIES

The first meeting between UCF and LSU was chippy from the start, including three first-half ejections. LSU consensus All-America safety Grant Delpit was among those ejected after being called for targeting in the second quarter.

UCF had a key penalty in the second quarter, when Randy Charlton was hit with an unsportsmanlike conduct penalty after the Knights stopped LSU on a third-and-6. That kept the Tigers' drive alive and Burrow hit Justice for a TD that pulled LSU to within 14-10. LSU had 14 penalties for 145 yards, UCF had 12 for 104 yards.

2019 Football Season Ed Orgeron Coach # 32

The LSU Fighting Tigers football team represented the LSU Tigers of Louisiana State University during the 2019 Southeastern Conference football season. This was LSU's one hundred twenty-sixth season overall and its eighty-seventh season playing football as a member of the Southeastern Conference (SEC). In 1992, LSU joined the Western Division of the Southeastern Conference.

Led by coach Ed Orgeron, in his third season with many seasons to go as head coach of LSU in 2019, the Tigers had their best season ever at 15-0 Their SEC record was 8-0 giving them an undisputed SEC Western Championship. LSU won the SEC Championship game 37-10 to become SEC Champions. At the national level, the Tigers were ranked #1 in the coaches' poll and ranked #1 in the AP. LSU was invited to the Peach Bowl (CFP Semifinal), which they won W (63–28) over Oklahoma. In the CFP National Championship game, LSU beat Clemson in the Citrus Bowl W 42–25 vs. LSU won all the marbles there were in 2019 and they are staged for a great season in 2020.

For extra emphasis, consider that the Tiger began the year ranked sixth in the preseason AP Poll, and were projected to finish in second in the SEC West behind Alabama. The Tigers secured an undefeated regular season that included wins over top-ten-ranked teams Texas, Florida, Auburn, and Alabama.

In the SEC Championship Game, LSU defeated Georgia to win their first conference title since 2011. LSU was ranked No. 1 in the final College Football Playoff rankings of the season, earning them a spot in the national semi-final game to be played at the Peach Bowl.

They dominated fourth-ranked Oklahoma in that game, 63–28, to advance to the CFP Championship Game. There, they defeated the defending national champions Clemson, 42–25, to secure LSU's fourth claimed national title in school history, the second undefeated champion in the CFP era, and the second 15–0 season among any team in the modern era.

Because of their dominant season-long performance against a historically difficult schedule, several pundits have called the team the greatest in college football history.

LSU's record-setting offense was led by senior quarterback Joe Burrow. The LSU QB also won the Heisman Trophy by the largest margin in the history of the award. In this his final collegiate season, he broke several NCAA FBS records, including most touchdown passes (60), and highest passer rating (202.0).

Burrow was accompanied on offense by 1,400-yard running back Clyde Edwards-Helaire, and two 1,500-yard receivers Ja'Marr Chase and Justin Jefferson. Chase received the Biletnikoff Award as the best wide receiver in the country.

LSU's defense was as good as it gets. The D was anchored by two All-American defensive backs in Jim Thorpe Award winner Grant Delpit and true freshman Derek Stingley Jr. Linebacker Jacob Phillips led the SEC in tackles. Head coach Ed Orgeron was awarded several national Coach of the Year honors. The coach makes a big difference in football. Go Ed.

Burrow completes Heisman coronation, LSU routs Georgia 37-10

By the Associated Press

ATLANTA -- Joe Burrow collected a shiny award as the game's MVP.

LSU's fans had another trophy on their minds.

"Heisman! Heisman! Heisman!" they chanted.

The coronation is likely complete.

Burrow turned in another dazzling performance on the big stage, leading No. 1 LSU to a spot in the College Football Playoff with a 37-10 rout of No. 4 Georgia in the Southeastern Conference championship game Saturday.

"Joe is the heartbeat of this team," running back Clyde Edwards-Helaire said.

The Tigers, going for their first national title since 2007 season, will either return to Atlanta or head west to suburban Phoenix for a semifinal game on Dec. 28. They surely made a persuasive case to be the top overall seed when the four-team field. and pairings are announced Sunday.

Burrow was all over the stat sheet for LSU (13-0, No. 2 CFP). He threw for 349 yards and four touchdowns. He was the Tigers' second-leading rusher with 41 yards on 11 carries, often leaving the Bulldogs grasping at air as he twirled this way and that. He even caught a pass on a ball that was batted down at the line and wound up his arms, taking off for a 16-yard gain.

"He's a great athlete, man," Georgia safety J.R. Reed said. "We had a lot of plays out there we were supposed to make, and he'd just squeeze out of it."

The Heisman-worthy moment came late in the third quarter. With Georgia (11-2, No 4 CFP) bringing the heat, Burrow spun to his left to get away from lineman Travon Walker, whirled back to his right to send Walker sprawling to the turf, then delivered a pass on the run while sprinting toward the LSU sideline with another defender in hot pursuit.

Justin Jefferson hauled in the throw just beyond midfield and took off down to the Bulldogs 9 for a 71-yard play. Three plays later, Burrow delivered his third TD pass of the game, hooking up with Terrace Marshall Jr., on a 4-yard touchdown pass that essentially finished off the Bulldogs.

"It was all improvised," Burrow said. "Justin ran a 6-yard hitch route and saw me scrambling and took off deep. We got a great feel for each other. I knew exactly where he was going to be when I got out of there."

Burrow wasn't done. Derek Stingley's second pick of Jake Fromm turned the ball back over to the prolific LSU offense at the 13, and Burrow wasted no time finding Jefferson for an 8-yard TD in the waning seconds of the third quarter to send many in the predominantly Georgia crowd heading for the exits.

LSU left no doubt it is the king of the mighty SEC, completing its run through a gauntlet of the league's top teams. The Tigers had already knocked off Alabama, Florida and Auburn. Now, they can add the Bulldogs to the list, ensuring the SEC will only get one team in the national playoff.

LSU came into the game as the second-highest scoring team in the country behind Ohio State. They figured to have a tougher time against Georgia's stellar defense, ranked No. 2 in points allowed. but Burrow kept the Bulldogs on their heels the entire game.

It was by far the most points Georgia has given up their season. Until Saturday, they held every opponent under 20 except South

Just total domination by the Tigers.

It was a painful loss -- literally -- for the Bulldogs, who were making their third straight appearance in the SEC title game. Two players were carted off the field with apparently major injuries. Another player wobbled off with a concussion after being leveled on a kickoff. Fromm twisted an ankle and had to go to the medical tent to get taped up, though he missed only one play.

Not that it mattered.

Fromm, who guided Georgia to the cusp of the national title two years ago as a freshman, was 20 of 42 for 225 yards with those two interceptions. He didn't get much help from his teammates: Tyler Simmons dropped a deep ball on the very first possession, and Matt Landers couldn't hang on to a throw in the end zone.

Georgia finally reached the end zone with just under 12 minutes remaining on Fromm's 2-yard TD pass to George Pickens.

"That is a really good football team," coach Kirby Smart said. "We were going to have to make explosive plays. We were unable to do that."

INJURY REPORT

Georgia's sideline looked like a M(asterisk)A(asterisk)S(asterisk)H unit.

Receiver Dominick Blaylock crumpled to the turf after going up for a catch in the first quarter. He was carted to the locker room with a left knee injury.

Outside linebacker Walter Grant suffered a concussion in the third quarter from a special teams hit. LSU's Tory Carter was ejected for targeting.

Backup middle linebacker Quay Walker (right shoulder) and cornerback Tyrique Stevenson (apparent leg injury) also left the field with injuries.

Star running back D'Andre Swift clearly wasn't at full strength, either, after going out of the regular-season finale against Georgia Tech with should injury. He had just two carries for 13 yards.

THE TAKEAWAY

LSU: The Tigers could certainly take pride in putting up 481 yards on a defense of Georgia's caliber, but the most encouraging aspect of this game was another strong performance from LSU's defense. Maligned much of the season, they followed up a 50-7 rout of Texas A&M in the regular-season finale with another championship-worthy showing against the Bulldogs, who were held to 286 yards.

Georgia: Fromm came into the season projected as a high NFL draft pick who would likely go pro after his junior season. Now, it's not a reach to say he might be better off returning for his senior season to try to boost his stock. He has now failed to complete even half his passes in five straight games.

UP NEXT

LSU: Makes its first appearance in the College Football Playoff, which began in 2014. The Tigers last played for a national title during the 2011 season, when they won 13 straight games before a dismal 21-0 loss to Alabama in the BCS championship game.

Georgia: Appears likely to make its second straight appearance in the Sugar Bowl against Baylor, loser of the Big 12 championship game.

December 28, 2019 Peach Bowl—CFP Semifinal

On December 28, 2019 at 3:00 p.m.. #1 LSU clobbered #4 Oklahoma at the Mercedes-Benz Stadium in Atlanta, GA in the Peach Bowl – CFP Semifinal W (63–28) before 78,347.

Burrow throws 7 TDs, #11 LSU routs No. Oklahoma 63-28

By the Associated Press

ATLANTA -- Joe Burrow and the LSU Tigers turned in a first half for the ages, a breathtaking offensive display even as their coordinator grieved a horrific tragedy from his box high above the field.

This team from the bayou is truly something special.

With one more victory, it will be a national champion.

In his first game as a Heisman Trophy winner, Burrow threw for seven touchdowns and 493 yards as No. 1 LSU romped to a stunning 63-28 victory over No. 4 Oklahoma in the Peach Bowl semifinal game Saturday.

The Tigers (14-0) are headed to the title game against No. 3 Clemson -- a 29-23 winner over No. 2 Ohio State in the second semifinal in Arizona -- clicking on all cylinders, having dismantled the Sooners (12-2) with a 30-minute outburst that will long be remembered in Cajun country.

“We go into every game thinking nobody can stop us,” Burrow said. Certainly, the Sooners couldn't.

Burrow tied the record for any college bowl game with his seven TD passes -- which all came before the bands hit the field for the halftime show at Mercedes-Benz Stadium. Justin Jefferson was on the receiving end for four of those scoring plays, also tying a bowl record.

As if that wasn't enough, Burrow scored an eighth TD himself on a 3-yard run in the third quarter, thoroughly dominating his expected duel with Oklahoma quarterback Jalen Hurts, the Heisman runner-up.

Yet, the postgame celebration was weighed down by heavy hearts. LSU offensive coordinator Steve Ensminger learned shortly before kickoff that his daughter-in-law, broadcaster Carley McCord, was among five people killed in a plane crash in Louisiana. The small plane went down shortly after takeoff for what was supposed to be a flight to Atlanta for the game.

Head coach Ed Orgeron delivered the news to Ensminger, who was seen with tears running down his cheeks but stuck to the task at hand.

"Coach, we're going to get through this," Ensminger told his boss. Then the coordinator headed to his usual spot in the box, calling plays alongside passing game coordinator Joe Brady.

It was a brilliant, poignant performance in the face of such grief. The players didn't learn until afterward what Ensminger was going through.

"I can't think of what he was able to do today with the circumstances," Brady said. "It speaks to the type of man he is."

LSU needed only three plays to race 42 yards for its first score -- a perfectly thrown ball over Jefferson's shoulder for a 19-yard TD less than 3 minutes into the game.

Oklahoma briefly put up a fight. Hurts' 51-yard pass to CeeDee Lamb set up a 3-yard touchdown run by Kennedy Brooks that tied the score at 7.

After that, the rout was on.

It was 49-14 by halftime.

The Tigers' potent spread offense made this one look much like the Harlem Globetrotters carving up the Washington Generals, only it was the Sooners playing the hapless victim.

Jefferson hauled in a 35-yard pass for touchdown No. 2. Then a 42-yarder for No. 3. And, finally, a 30-yard scoring strike that left him counting off four fingers for the crowd -- all before the midway point of the second quarter.

Terrace Marshall Jr. contributed to the onslaught with TD catches of 8 and 2 yards. Tight end Thaddeus Moss -- the son of NFL Hall of Fame receiver Randy Moss -- made his daddy proud by getting free behind the secondary, hauling in a pass and shoving off a fast-closing defender to complete the 62-yard scoring play.

"One team, one heartbeat," Orgeron said.

It was a miserable finale for Hurts, who closed out a nomadic college career that began with him leading Alabama to a pair of national championship games before losing his starting job to Tua Tagovailoa. After graduating, Hurts transferred to Oklahoma for a one-and-done season that produced some dazzling numbers but ended short of the ultimate goal.

Running for his life most of the game, Hurts was largely stymied on the ground and through the air. He ran for a pair of touchdowns but gained just 43 yards with his legs. He was held to 15 of 31 for 217 yards passing, giving up a brilliant, leaping interception to Kary Vincent Jr. that quickly brought the LSU offense back on the field as the Tigers were blowing the game open.

"We needed to take advantage of every opportunity we had against a team like this," Hurts said. "We failed to do that."

BLINDSIDE HIT

Oklahoma defensive back Brendan Radley-Hiles was ejected early in the second quarter for a brutal hit on LSU's Clyde Edwards-Helaire. With Burrow scrambling toward the sideline, Radley-Hiles delivered the blindside shot to Edwards-Helaire coming out of the backfield. The officials did not throw a flag, but a video review showed that Radley-Hiles leaped into the defenseless player with a shoulder to the helmet.

Three plays later, Burrow went deep to Jefferson for a TD that extended LSU's lead to 28-7.

THE TAKEAWAY

Oklahoma: Playing for the first time in a city where the Braves have become notorious for their flops in the Major League Baseball playoffs, the Sooners turned in a familiar performance. They have made the College Football Playoff four times in the six-year history of the format, but have yet to win a game. That could affect the way the selection committee views the Sooners the next time they're in the mix -- or any other Big 12 school, for that matter.

LSU: While this game will be remembered for the dynamic offensive showing, the Tigers' defense kept up its encouraging turnaround over the latter part of the season. They held Oklahoma to 322 yards - - far below its 554.2-yard average coming into the game, which ranked second nationally behind LSU. The front line kept the heat on Hurts, who was sacked twice and often wound up on his backside when he got the ball away.

UP NEXT

Oklahoma: Hurts' departure leaves a big hole to fill at quarterback, but freshman Spencer Rattler was one of the nation's top prospects coming out of high school. He played in three games this season, including a mop-up role in the closing minutes of the Peach Bowl. Rattler will likely be leading the offense when the 2020 season begins Sept. 5 against Missouri State.

LSU: The Tigers will head back to Louisiana for a de facto home game at the Superdome on Jan. 13. That mirrors their last title run during the 2007 season, when they beat Ohio State 38-24 in New Orleans for the BCS championship. "Just getting there is not our final destination," Orgeron said. "We're looking to win it."

January 13, 2020. CFP National Championship

On January 13, 2020 at 7:00 p.m., #1 LSU played and beat #3 Clemson for the National Championship at the Mercedes-Benz Superdome in New Orleans, LA in the CFP National Championship Game. It was also a College GameDay Celebration. W (42–25) before 76,885.

Burrow, LSU caps Heisman season, beat Clemson 42-25

NEW ORLEANS -- From small-town Ohio kid to Louisiana legend, Joe Burrow capped his record-breaking, Heisman-winning season by bringing a national championship to LSU.

Burrow threw five touchdown passes, ran for another score and finished off one of the most accomplished seasons in college football history by leading the top-ranked Tigers to a 42-25 victory against No. 3 Clemson on Monday night in the playoff final.

By the Associated Press

"He's one of the greatest players in LSU history," Tigers coach Ed Orgeron said. "He's done so much for the state of Louisiana and LSU. We are so grateful to Joe Burrow."

The senior quarterback from The Plains, Ohio, delivered the Tigers (15-0) their first national title since 2007 and fourth overall, breaking a few more records along the way in what was already an historic season. His five TD passes and 463 yards passing are the most for a BCS or College Football Playoff title game. So were his six total touchdowns.

"This is what I wanted to do from the time I was 5 years old, was hoist this trophy. And bringing it back to Louisiana," Burrow said, then caught himself. "I guess we're in Louisiana, but staying in Louisiana, we weren't going to let someone come in here and steal this from us in our home state.

"We have a great fan base that came out and supported us. We were going to keep this thing right here."

Under a shower of sparkling white, gold and purple confetti, Burrow raised the CFP championship trophy toward the Superdome roof. The party was on -- no doubt already raging on nearby Bourbon Street.

Burrow became the first major college quarterback to throw 60 touchdown passes in a season and LSU snapped defending national champion Clemson's 29-game winning streak. For the first time in his college career, Clemson star quarterback Trevor Lawrence was on the losing team.

"I hate how it finished," the sophomore said. "But man, we did some really amazing things."

The Tigers (14-1) had won Lawrence's first 25 starts. "It's been a long time since I've stood in front of a team after a loss," Clemson coach Dabo Swinney said.

On this night, Lawrence (18 for 37 for 234 yards) was no match for Burrow -- the Ohio State transfer who threw all of 16 TD passes last season with LSU.

His ascent has been dizzying and unprecedented. Running a version of the New Orleans Saints' offense brought to LSU by 30-year-old assistant coach Joe Brady, Burrow and an array of talented receivers transformed these Tigers into one of the most prolific offenses college football has ever seen.

The Saints' Drew Brees, Burrow's idol growing up, could not have done it better.

This was Orgeron's vision for LSU when he was promoted from interim coach in 2016. There was plenty of skepticism about the Cajun who had failed in his first crack as a head coach with Mississippi.

Orgeron has proved to be the perfect fit for LSU. Just like Burrow.

After tossing his fifth touchdown pass of the night, a perfectly placed jumped ball to Terrace Marshall Jr. from 24 yards out to make it 42-

25 with 12:08 left in the fourth, Burrow signaled TD and strolled to the sideline.

The Superdome is LSU's dome away from home, about 80 miles from the Tigers' Baton Rouge campus -- and it was rocking.

The LSU band broke out its unofficial anthem, "Neck," and as the Tigers bounced and waved towels on the sideline, Burrow just sat on the bench, bobbing his head and waving one arm.

Joe Cool. Just doing his thing. Next stop: The NFL draft, where he will likely be the first pick in April.

The final score was lopsided, but it was far from easy for LSU and Burrow.

Clemson pushed LSU into the deepest hole it had to climb out of this season in the first half. Two weeks after Lawrence ran for a career-best 107 yards against Ohio State, he opened the scoring with a 1-yard jaunt around right end in the first quarter.

After B.T. Potter kicked a career-long 52-yard field goal for Clemson to make it 10-7, the Tigers sprung receiver Tee Higgins on a 36-yard reverse for a score to make it 17-7 in the second quarter.

It took LSU 5:19 to wipe that out and take the lead, with Burrow and his favorite receiver, Ja'Marr Chase, doing most of the damage. The Heisman winner hit the Biletnikoff Award winner with a long ball to set up a quarterback draw from 3 yards out to make it 17-14.

Burrow and Chase hooked up for a 14-yard touchdown with 5:19 left in the second quarter and LSU fans erupted as their Tigers took the lead for the first time, 21-17. They never looked back. Chase finished with nine catches for 221 yards.

The SEC Tigers weren't done. Burrow led LSU on a 95-yard drive, taking a hard shot on a long run before finding Thaddeus Moss, son of former NFL star receiver Randy Moss, standing alone in the end zone. That made it 28-17 with 10 seconds left in the half.

Clemson defensive coordinator Brent Venables flummoxed LSU for most of the first quarter, with tight coverage and hard-to-decipher blitzes. Burrow, Chase and Co. put up 269 yards in the second quarter.

"Coach Venables is great at what he does, it just took us a while to get it figured out," Burrow said.

Did they ever. LSU dropped 628 yards and six touchdowns on a Clemson team that came in allowing 264 yards and 11.5 points per game.

"Weapons all over the field. We've been seeing it all year," LSU safety Grant Delpit said. "Just seeing how many weapons we had on offense is just crazy."

Over the last three games of his spectacular season, against Georgia in the Southeastern Conference championship game and Oklahoma and Clemson in the playoff, Burrow passed for 1,305 yards and 16 touchdowns. LSU won those games by a combined score of 142-63.

When it was all over, Burrow puffed on a victory cigar as he made his way from the locker room to the postgame news conference. No one was about to tell him he couldn't smoke inside.

This season, LSU's newest football hero has done just about whatever he wants.

"I don't know about the whole hero thing," Burrow said, "but I know this national championship will be remembered for a long time in Louisiana."

Top LSU Players Clyde Edwards Helaire RB '17-2019

No. 32 Pick in 2020 NFL Draft | Kansas City Chiefs
2019 LSU Football MVP
2019 LSU Permanent Team Captain
2019 All-SEC First Team (AP, unanimous; Coaches)
Paul Hornung Award Finalist
SEC Offensive Player of the Week (at Alabama)

Clyde Edwards Helaire was a most versatile running back. He made plays in a variety of ways during his three seasons at LSU. He was one of the top running backs in school history and perhaps the best at pass-catching out of the backfield to ever play for the Tigers.

In just one season as a starter, he finished his career with 2,123 rushing yards and added another 595 receiving yards. With this, he ranks #15 in school history in career rushing yards and he holds the LSU single-season record for receptions by a running back at 55. Helaire put together one of the best seasons for a running back in school history in the National Championship Season of 2019 with 1,414 rushing yards and 453 receiving yards on 55 receptions. He accumulated 414 rushing yards ranks which was the third-highest single-season total in LSU history.

Helaire had a big impact on Joe Burrow winning the Heisman Trophy as well as the Tigers going 15-0 and claiming the school's fourth national title in January of 2020. He could be called a shifty runner, but that is an understatement, He is surely tough to bring down. His short frame allows him to get "lost" behind LSU's offensive line, making it tough for defenders to find him.

He plays like a much better man than his 5-foot-8, 208-pound frame. He can elusively squirt through the smallest crease for positive yards with breakaway speed. For his career, he played in 41 games with 14 starts, all coming as a junior in 2019. He was named LSU's MVP and permanent team captain for the Tigers in 2019. He'd be coming back in the fall but instead he opted for

Top LSU Players Thaddeus Moss TE 2019

Thaddeus Moss was one of the most productive tight ends in LSU history even though he saw action for just one season with the Tigers. He transferred from NC State ... North Carolina State transfer that sat out 2017 after the 2016 season due to NCAA transfer rules and then he was sidelined all of 2018 with a leg injury.

In his return in 2019, he came at the right time. He had a tremendous impact on the LSU passing game in 2019, catching 47 passes for 570 yards and 4 TDs. With his one season, he now holds LSU single-season record for receptions and receiving yards by a tight end.

If his name sounds familiar it is because he is the son of one of the most prolific wide receivers in NFL history – Randy Moss. Thaddeus had the distinction of presenting his dad at the 2018 Pro Football Hall of Fame Induction Ceremony. He opted to forgo final season of eligibility and entered his name into the 2020 NFL Draft. He helped LSU with the National Championship.
